STILL ANOTHER COMPANY GETS A TROLLEY CHARTER FOR CROSS-COUNTY LINE

Salem the Headquarters of a Concern Which Proposes to Build Electric Line to This City.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5.—There has been another addition to the long list of electric railways which have been incorporated to operate in Columbiana county and contiguous territory. The Youngstown and Ohio River Railway and Light company, with $10,000 capital, took out a certificate of incorporation yesterday authorizing it to build and operate a railroad between East Liverpool and Youngstown, using electricity or any other motive power, and to construct and maintain machine shops, power plants, telegraph and telephone lines and to carry passengers, express matter and United States mails. Salem is headquarters. The incorporators are: S. Fishel, Ernst Mueller, Max P. Goodwin, Chas. Zucker, H. Schmidt, and S. A. Stone. The papers filed with the secretary of state bear the seal of a Cuyahoga county notary which leads to the belief that the incorporators are Cleveland men. The route of the proposed line is not given.

The convicts serving life sentences under the habitual criminal act are to be released. Yesterday the state board of pardons by its action in recommending the pardon of Charles F. Kline, a Dayton man, and Frank White, of Ottawa county, who were sent to the penitentiary under his act, which was repealed by the legislature last winter, indicates that it is to be the policy of the board to recommend the pardoning of all habitual criminals upon the completion of the minimum terms provided by law for the offences for which they were convicted. It was generally supposed that the action of the legislature in repealing the habitual criminal law would permit the liberation of the prisoners committed under it, but the courts decided to to contrary.

Another candidate for governor has popped on the scene. It is ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan, who is as well known in public life as any other citizen of the state. When asked if it were true that he intended entering the lists, Mr. Ryan looked wise and said: "I have taken the matter under consideration, but will have nothing further to say at this time."

It is reported that the Ohio miners will ask for an increase of 20 cents a ton at the annual convention which meets in January.

Dr. C. O. Probst, secretary of the state board, said the board would not send a representative to investigate the supposed cases of smallpox at Steubenville, unless that city's board of health urged it.

Hurt in Chicago Fire.

J. E. Herbert, of Salinevillle, a Ft. Wayne mail agent, was one of the guests at the Lincoln hotel, Chicago, which was burned yesterday morning with a number of inmates. He jumped from a window and was taken to a hospital with an injured leg. He was able to proceed home in the evening.

WRONGED GIRL ENTERS SUIT AGAINST WELL KNOWN MAN

Suffering in deepest anguish, both mental and physical, Miss Stella J. Sheets, a very pretty young girl well known in the city, is reported on her death bed at 153 Walnut street. In a cradle nearby is her innocent babe of six weeks.

Her story is a sad one. For five weeks after her child was born she lay in pain and sorrow, it is said, deserted by the person who had betrayed her and without pecuniary aid which he was well able to provide. The latter part of last week she began to realize that her condition was not only precarious but possibly hopeless, she being in the terrible clutches of consumption, and she decided that though her outlook was encircled in gloom her little child should not suffer if the law could be applied. Whereupon she filed an affidavit with 'Squire Rose, charging Lawrence White, warehouse foreman at the Harker company's pottery and a widely known resident of the East End, with being the father of the child.

A warrant was then issued and Constable Powell arrested White that evening. He was taken before the justice, who released him under bond for his appearance Wednesday evening. Knowing the dear penalty to be paid upon conviction on such a charge White immediately concluded to settle the matter in a manner as easily as possible. He agreed to pay the erring girl in the neighborhood of $200, and after she consented to accept the amount he was given freedom and released from any further trouble or worry over the matter by furnishing a bond which will protect the city and county from ever being compelled to maintain the child.

A DISSOLUTION IS ASKED FOR

ORGANIZED TWENTY YEARS

The Concern Is Now Alleged to Be Insolvent, With Indebtedness Exceeding the Value of Its Property—List of Stockholders.

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—Harmon Michaels, I. B. Clark and Frank S. Clark, owners of one-fifth of all the stock of the Wellsville Pioneer Pottery company, have filed a petition in court, asking for a dissolution of the company. The petition alleges that the corporation is insolvent; that it has wholly failed as to the purposes for which it was organized, and that the business has been abandoned. It is further alleged that the plant operated at a great loss during several months prior to its final shut down, and that the indebtedness of the company exceeds the value of its property. The company was organized about 20 years ago with a capital stock of $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $100 each, 320 of which are paid up. Following are the stockholders, all of Wellsville: Harmon Michaels, 146.49 shares; J. B. Clark, 100; Frank S. Clark, 49.05; A. A. McFarland, 3; George M. Aten, 6.29; Stevenson & Co., 5.23; Lou Riggs, 3.66; E. H. Riggs, 2.09; W. F. Blackburn, 2.62; T. R. Moores, 1.05; J. W. Riley, .52.

The petition says it will be necessary to collect all of the statutory liabilities of the solvent holders of stock to liquidate the indebtedness, the first four mentioned being alleged to be insolvent. The company is indebted in the sum of $4,805.91 as follows: I. F. House, on two promissory notes, $407; Hammill & Gillipsie, New York, $917.34; Golding, Sons & Co., East Liverpool, $341.59; J. H. Graham, Scroggsfield, $3,000; Edgar Kaolin company, $140.

MURDEROUS ANARCHIST

Man Under Arrest At Steubenville Says He Would Like To Kill Roosevelt.

Steubenville, December 5.—Ponako Felice, one of the two men arrested last night in Warren township, after resisting the officers, for violating liquor laws and terrorizing the people, is a self confessed anarchist and will be prosecuted as such, as he said he would like to put a bullet in the president.

TWO MEN CAUSE A LOT OF TROUBLE

Henry Wolf, Drunk and Disorderly Created Terror at His Home.

AN OLD SCORE AGAINST HIM

Which He Will Have to Settle Before He Will Be Given His Freedom. Jack Rowe Is Threatened With a Workhouse Sentence.

Two men that drink just once in a great while and one that had not touched a drop for so long that he could not remember the date, constituted the lineup that faced Mayor Davidson this morning.

Of the periodical boozers, Henry Wolf was the first arraigned. Whenever he does imbibe almost every one is bound to know it, and especially his wife and family. He was not so very full last evening when arrested at his home by Officer Dunn, but had enough to make him feel that he was the best man on Market street, and to prove that he was right he converted his home into a disorderly house by threatening violence on his wife, and using his son in a manner not allowed by law.

After he had carried on at a disgraceful rate for several hours his wife summoned the police. When Officer Dunn arrived Wolf was ranting like a caged beast. He had divested himself of his outer wearing apparel. The officer did not wish to take the prisoner out in the cold and snow without protection and allowed him to dress before calling the white horses. Wolf was very repentant this morning when arraigned and much to his consternation he was greeted with something that he had forgotten long ago—an old fine of $6.60—imposed for an offense similar to the one for which he was arrested last evening. The mayor fined him the same amount on the second offense, and informed him that unless he settles both accounts that he can board it out in the city jail. He wanted to give a $375 piano for security, but the mayor could see no way in getting the music box to the city hall and ordered him committed to a cell.

Jack Rowe was simply doing as he has done time and again within the past year or two. He was making things extremely diseagreeable for his wife and all in the vicinity of his home. The wife finally telephoned for the police. Officer McDermott answered the call and had a tussle. When he reached the city hall with his man big drops of sweat were streaming from his face. He was compelled to tug and pull and resort to all manner of ways in landing the prisoner. The mayor thinks he will send him to the Canton workhouse.

"I guess I am guilty," said John Williams when arraigned, "but I want to tell you it was not whisky alone that made me get that way. Do you know, mayor, some one doped me?" The mayor told him that he did not doubt it, but thought perhaps as he had not drank for a long time that the ingredients of the whisky had a doping effect. Williams was arrested by Officer Dunn while prostrate on the railroad track. The officer's timely arrival no doubt saved the man's life. In 10 minutes the passenger train went flying past. Upon his promise to call Saturday night and pay his fine of $5.60 Williams was released.

A MINISTER'S DAUGHTER MISSING

Miss Gladys, 16-Year Old Daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, Suddenly Leaves Her Home at Fairview.

Miss Gladys Greene, daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, of Fairview, W. Va., grew tired of her home town last Monday and left it.

Miss Greene, who is about 16 years of age, left her home that evening to attend a singing class in the village. She was at the singing school, but did not return home.

Her parents became very uneasy about her and telephoned to Wellsville East Liverpool and Chester to well known friends to be on the lookout for her.

The report that a young man had an active part in her disappearance has been denied, as the young man returned Wednesday night to his home near Ellwood school house.

The young lady came to Chester yesterday morning about 5 o'clock and stopped at Mrs. S. Martin's. After eating breakfast she was anxious to catch the earliest train west on the C. & P.

The girl was nearly frozen, as she had no wraps. She left and went to East Liverpool, where it is thought she took a train to Minerva.

Late last evening it was reported she had been located in Waynesburg, O. No cause is assigned for the girl's course, as she had a pleasant and congenial home at Fairview, where she had many kind associates.

BUSINESS WAS BRISK IN THE DIVORCE COURT

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—During an intermission in the Willis case yesterday afternoon Judge Robinson granted three divorces.

Albert M. and Mary A. Weaver were married at Salineville, January 17, 1881. Mrs. Weaver was granted a divorce on the grounds of habitual drunkenness, gross leglect of duty and failure to provide. They have one child.

Ella McClure, of East Liverpool, was granted a divorce from William McClure, on the grounds of wilful absence, and was given custody of their four minor children, George G., aged 17, Pearl, 15, Myrtle, 13 and Wilbur, 11 years. They were married at Smith's Ferry, Pa., October 29, 1882.

Herman Bourne, of Salem, was granted a divorce from Alice Bourne on the grounds of adultery. In his petition he alleged that Mrs. Bourne had been guilty of adultery at her home at Salem last August, and later at Cleveland with one John Somers. Mr. Bourne was also given custody of his 3-year-old daughter, Anna Marie.

EAST END ASSESSMENTS ARE STRONGLY CRITICISED BY EQUALIZING BOARD

A Member Points Out Alleged Gross Inequalities in the Pennsylvania Avenue Taxation.

When the Pennsylvania avenue equalization board has completed the mammoth work assigned it by the city council and its report is made there will be blue smoke circling over the heads of certain property holders along the line of improvement.

After making a thorough examination of the assessment as decided upon by the assessment board, the trio of equalizers give forth a startling statement. The total assessment on the improvement aggregates almost $31,000, and of this amount it has been discovered that at least four-fifths of it was assessed on the property abutting the avenue from the East End school house eastward to the corporation limits of the city. That means that the portion extending from the school house west to Robinson street was only assessed about $6,000.

A member of the board stated last evening that the assessing board undoubtedly heeded not the benefit plan. "It could not have given that, a most objective point to be considered, a moment's thought," continued the member. "The truth of the matter is that the portion assessed so slightly was benefited more by the road improvement than that lying east of it. What is the reason for the board's decision? Well, we have looked into every detail and it is impossible for us to figure it out in any other way. On the north side of the improved road there lies a rich bed of clay and a valuable setting of stone. The former dips toward the East End, as does the avenue. This gives the owners better access to the clay, provides excellent opportunity for mining it and makes the transportation all that could be desired.

"The owners of the stone quarries through the improvement encounter no trouble at all in disposing of the product. On the perfect roadway can be hauled the heavy rock at any season of the year. Since the improvement this portion has also been greatly benefited from a building standpoint. Many desirable spots for residences have resulted. A residence can now be erected on the hillside and applicants will be received galore for the quarters. It would not only be a healthy place to live, but the view could not be better and people residing there would be in close proximity to the leading industries, street cars and other things considered by the people of the city.

"The best argument in favor of the decision of this board pertains to the price of property at the present time and a few years prior to the improvement. Going back but three years prior to it is remembered that a certain tract of land which was sold within the past year for something like $13,000 could have been purchased for $3,000. One-thirteenth of it was sold for $250. If that does not demonstrate the fact that the property west of the school house was benefited equally as much as that east of it, we are simply poor calculators."

THE FALL OF SNOW CAUSED MUCH TROUBLE

The first snow of the season of any consequence fell during last night and the early hours this morning. With the advent came the usual disagreeable impediment to the traveling public. Pedestrians waded through snow, slush and water to their work, and those who are accustomed to accepting the convenience of the street car had their patience tested. For three hours after the cars were started there was scarcely one that arrived at a switch on time, and it was not an uncommon sight to see three and four cars at a switch and many were seen standing motionless on the upgrade.

The reason given for the delay in the street car services, however, is not attributed solely to the heavy downfall of snow. It was credited mostly to an insufficient amount of gas.

The traveling public was not alone in the trouble. Mayor Davidson had surely his full share. Before he reached his office this morning at least a score of citizens stopped him, complaining of the school boys throwing snow balls and sliding on the sidewalks with sleds. After the chief executive reached the city hall he was kept busy at the telephone answering calls on the same subject. At noon the mayor decided upon a plan which he thinks will free him from trouble during the remainder of the winter. He figured that snow balling is a nuisance, and as it is the duty of the health officer to abate a nuisance he will in the future refer all complainants to Dr. Ogden. The physician states that he will do all within his power to enforce the law, but he cannot figure the matter out as did the mayor.

BUSINESS WAS BRISK IN THE DIVORCE COURT

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—During an intermission in the Willis case yesterday afternoon Judge Robinson granted three divorces.

Albert M. and Mary A. Weaver were married at Salineville, January 17, 1881. Mrs. Weaver was granted a divorce on the grounds of habitual drunkenness, gross leglect of duty and failure to provide. They have one child.

Ella McClure, of East Liverpool, was granted a divorce from William McClure, on the grounds of wilful absence, and was given custody of their four minor children, George G., aged 17, Pearl, 15, Myrtle, 13 and Wilbur, 11 years. They were married at Smith's Ferry, Pa., October 29, 1882.

Herman Bourne, of Salem, was granted a divorce from Alice Bourne on the grounds of adultery. In his petition he alleged that Mrs. Bourne had been guilty of adultery at her home at Salem last August, and later at Cleveland with one John Somers. Mr. Bourne was also given custody of his 3-year-old daughter, Anna Marie.

EAST END ASSESSMENTS ARE STRONGLY CRITICISED BY EQUALIZING BOARD

A Member Points Out Alleged Gross Inequalities in the Pennsylvania Avenue Taxation.

When the Pennsylvania avenue equalization board has completed the mammoth work assigned it by the city council and its report is made there will be blue smoke circling over the heads of certain property holders along the line of improvement.

After making a thorough examination of the assessment as decided upon by the assessment board, the trio of equalizers give forth a startling statement. The total assessment on the improvement aggregates almost $31,000, and of this amount it has been discovered that at least four-fifths of it was assessed on the property abutting the avenue from the East End school house eastward to the corporation limits of the city. That means that the portion extending from the school house west to Robinson street was only assessed about $6,000.

A member of the board stated last evening that the assessing board undoubtedly heeded not the benefit plan. "It could not have given that, a most objective point to be considered, a moment's thought," continued the member. "The truth of the matter is that the portion assessed so slightly was benefited more by the road improvement than that lying east of it. What is the reason for the board's decision? Well, we have looked into every detail and it is impossible for us to figure it out in any other way. On the north side of the improved road there lies a rich bed of clay and a valuable setting of stone. The former dips toward the East End, as does the avenue. This gives the owners better access to the clay, provides excellent opportunity for mining it and makes the transportation all that could be desired.

"The owners of the stone quarries through the improvement encounter no trouble at all in disposing of the product. On the perfect roadway can be hauled the heavy rock at any season of the year. Since the improvement this portion has also been greatly benefited from a building standpoint. Many desirable spots for residences have resulted. A residence can now be erected on the hillside and applicants will be received galore for the quarters. It would not only be a healthy place to live, but the view could not be better and people residing there would be in close proximity to the leading industries, street cars and other things considered by the people of the city.

"The best argument in favor of the decision of this board pertains to the price of property at the present time and a few years prior to the improvement. Going back but three years prior to it is remembered that a certain tract of land which was sold within the past year for something like $13,000 could have been purchased for $3,000. One-thirteenth of it was sold for $250. If that does not demonstrate the fact that the property west of the school house was benefited equally as much as that east of it, we are simply poor calculators."

THE FALL OF SNOW CAUSED MUCH TROUBLE

The first snow of the season of any consequence fell during last night and the early hours this morning. With the advent came the usual disagreeable impediment to the traveling public. Pedestrians waded through snow, slush and water to their work, and those who are accustomed to accepting the convenience of the street car had their patience tested. For three hours after the cars were started there was scarcely one that arrived at a switch on time, and it was not an uncommon sight to see three and four cars at a switch and many were seen standing motionless on the upgrade.

The reason given for the delay in the street car services, however, is not attributed solely to the heavy downfall of snow. It was credited mostly to an insufficient amount of gas.

The traveling public was not alone in the trouble. Mayor Davidson had surely his full share. Before he reached his office this morning at least a score of citizens stopped him, complaining of the school boys throwing snow balls and sliding on the sidewalks with sleds. After the chief executive reached the city hall he was kept busy at the telephone answering calls on the same subject. At noon the mayor decided upon a plan which he thinks will free him from trouble during the remainder of the winter. He figured that snow balling is a nuisance, and as it is the duty of the health officer to abate a nuisance he will in the future refer all complainants to Dr. Ogden. The physician states that he will do all within his power to enforce the law, but he cannot figure the matter out as did the mayor.

STILL ANOTHER COMPANY GETS A TROLLEY CHARTER FOR CROSS-COUNTY LINE

Salem the Headquarters of a Concern Which Proposes to Build Electric Line to This City.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5.—There has been another addition to the long list of electric railways which have been incorporated to operate in Columbiana county and contiguous territory. The Youngstown and Ohio River Railway and Light company, with $10,000 capital, took out a certificate of incorporation yesterday authorizing it to build and operate a railroad between East Liverpool and Youngstown, using electricity or any other motive power, and to construct and maintain machine shops, power plants, telegraph and telephone lines and to carry passengers, express matter and United States mails. Salem is headquarters. The incorporators are: S. Fishel, Ernst Mueller, Max P. Goodwin, Chas. Zucker, H. Schmidt, and S. A. Stone. The papers filed with the secretary of state bear the seal of a Cuyahoga county notary which leads to the belief that the incorporators are Cleveland men. The route of the proposed line is not given.

The convicts serving life sentences under the habitual criminal act are to be released. Yesterday the state board of pardons by its action in recommending the pardon of Charles F. Kline, a Dayton man, and Frank White, of Ottawa county, who were sent to the penitentiary under his act, which was repealed by the legislature last winter, indicates that it is to be the policy of the board to recommend the pardoning of all habitual criminals upon the completion of the minimum terms provided by law for the offences for which they were convicted. It was generally supposed that the action of the legislature in repealing the habitual criminal law would permit the liberation of the prisoners committed under it, but the courts decided to to contrary.

Another candidate for governor has popped on the scene. It is ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan, who is as well known in public life as any other citizen of the state. When asked if it were true that he intended entering the lists, Mr. Ryan looked wise and said: "I have taken the matter under consideration, but will have nothing further to say at this time."

It is reported that the Ohio miners will ask for an increase of 20 cents a ton at the annual convention which meets in January.

Dr. C. O. Probst, secretary of the state board, said the board would not send a representative to investigate the supposed cases of smallpox at Steubenville, unless that city's board of health urged it.

A DISSOLUTION IS ASKED FOR

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—Harmon Michaels, I. B. Clark and Frank S. Clark, owners of one-fifth of all the stock of the Wellsville Pioneer Pottery company, have filed a petition in court, asking for a dissolution of the company. The petition alleges that the corporation is insolvent; that it has wholly failed as to the purposes for which it was organized, and that the business has been abandoned. It is further alleged that the plant operated at a great loss during several months prior to its final shut down, and that the indebtedness of the company exceeds the value of its property. The company was organized about 20 years ago with a capital stock of $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $100 each, 320 of which are paid up. Following are the stockholders, all of Wellsville: Harmon Michaels, 146.49 shares; J. B. Clark, 100; Frank S. Clark, 49.05; A. A. McFarland, 3; George M. Aten, 6.29; Stevenson & Co., 5.23; Lou Riggs, 3.66; E. H. Riggs, 2.09; W. F. Blackburn, 2.62; T. R. Moores, 1.05; J. W. Riley, .52.

The petition says it will be necessary to collect all of the statutory liabilities of the solvent holders of stock to liquidate the indebtedness, the first four mentioned being alleged to be insolvent. The company is indebted in the sum of $4,805.91 as follows: I. F. House, on two promissory notes, $407; Hammill & Gillipsie, New York, $917.34; Golding, Sons & Co., East Liverpool, $341.59; J. H. Graham, Scroggsfield, $3,000; Edgar Kaolin company, $140.

TWO MEN CAUSE A LOT OF TROUBLE

Henry Wolf, Drunk and Disorderly Created Terror at His Home.

AN OLD SCORE AGAINST HIM

Which He Will Have to Settle Before He Will Be Given His Freedom. Jack Rowe Is Threatened With a Workhouse Sentence.

Two men that drink just once in a great while and one that had not touched a drop for so long that he could not remember the date, constituted the lineup that faced Mayor Davidson this morning.

Of the periodical boozers, Henry Wolf was the first arraigned. Whenever he does imbibe almost every one is bound to know it, and especially his wife and family. He was not so very full last evening when arrested at his home by Officer Dunn, but had enough to make him feel that he was the best man on Market street, and to prove that he was right he converted his home into a disorderly house by threatening violence on his wife, and using his son in a manner not allowed by law.

After he had carried on at a disgraceful rate for several hours his wife summoned the police. When Officer Dunn arrived Wolf was ranting like a caged beast. He had divested himself of his outer wearing apparel. The officer did not wish to take the prisoner out in the cold and snow without protection and allowed him to dress before calling the white horses. Wolf was very repentant this morning when arraigned and much to his consternation he was greeted with something that he had forgotten long ago—an old fine of $6.60—imposed for an offense similar to the one for which he was arrested last evening. The mayor fined him the same amount on the second offense, and informed him that unless he settles both accounts that he can board it out in the city jail. He wanted to give a $375 piano for security, but the mayor could see no way in getting the music box to the city hall and ordered him committed to a cell.

Jack Rowe was simply doing as he has done time and again within the past year or two. He was making things extremely diseagreeable for his wife and all in the vicinity of his home. The wife finally telephoned for the police. Officer McDermott answered the call and had a tussle. When he reached the city hall with his man big drops of sweat were streaming from his face. He was compelled to tug and pull and resort to all manner of ways in landing the prisoner. The mayor thinks he will send him to the Canton workhouse.

"I guess I am guilty," said John Williams when arraigned, "but I want to tell you it was not whisky alone that made me get that way. Do you know, mayor, some one doped me?" The mayor told him that he did not doubt it, but thought perhaps as he had not drank for a long time that the ingredients of the whisky had a doping effect. Williams was arrested by Officer Dunn while prostrate on the railroad track. The officer's timely arrival no doubt saved the man's life. In 10 minutes the passenger train went flying past. Upon his promise to call Saturday night and pay his fine of $5.60 Williams was released.

A MINISTER'S DAUGHTER MISSING

Miss Gladys, 16-Year Old Daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, Suddenly Leaves Her Home at Fairview.

Miss Gladys Greene, daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, of Fairview, W. Va., grew tired of her home town last Monday and left it.

Miss Greene, who is about 16 years of age, left her home that evening to attend a singing class in the village. She was at the singing school, but did not return home.

Her parents became very uneasy about her and telephoned to Wellsville East Liverpool and Chester to well known friends to be on the lookout for her.

The report that a young man had an active part in her disappearance has been denied, as the young man returned Wednesday night to his home near Ellwood school house.

The young lady came to Chester yesterday morning about 5 o'clock and stopped at Mrs. S. Martin's. After eating breakfast she was anxious to catch the earliest train west on the C. & P.

The girl was nearly frozen, as she had no wraps. She left and went to East Liverpool, where it is thought she took a train to Minerva.

Late last evening it was reported she had been located in Waynesburg, O. No cause is assigned for the girl's course, as she had a pleasant and congenial home at Fairview, where she had many kind associates.

WRONGED GIRL ENTERS SUIT AGAINST WELL KNOWN MAN

Suffering in deepest anguish, both mental and physical, Miss Stella J. Sheets, a very pretty young girl well known in the city, is reported on her death bed at 153 Walnut street. In a cradle nearby is her innocent babe of six weeks.

Her story is a sad one. For five weeks after her child was born she lay in pain and sorrow, it is said, deserted by the person who had betrayed her and without pecuniary aid which he was well able to provide. The latter part of last week she began to realize that her condition was not only precarious but possibly hopeless, she being in the terrible clutches of consumption, and she decided that though her outlook was encircled in gloom her little child should not suffer if the law could be applied. Whereupon she filed an affidavit with 'Squire Rose, charging Lawrence White, warehouse foreman at the Harker company's pottery and a widely known resident of the East End, with being the father of the child.

A warrant was then issued and Constable Powell arrested White that evening. He was taken before the justice, who released him under bond for his appearance Wednesday evening. Knowing the dear penalty to be paid upon conviction on such a charge White immediately concluded to settle the matter in a manner as easily as possible. He agreed to pay the erring girl in the neighborhood of $200, and after she consented to accept the amount he was given freedom and released from any further trouble or worry over the matter by furnishing a bond which will protect the city and county from ever being compelled to maintain the child.

MINISTER TALKED IN SARCASTIC WAY

Salem Clergyman Enlivened Anti-Saloon League Proceedings at Columbus.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5.—In his address entitled "A Defense of the Saloon," at the anti-saloon congress in this city Wednesday, Rev. W. F. McCauley, of Salem, made some very pointed statements. His topic was a misnomer, as the context, instead of defending the saloon, arraigned it most caustically. The speaker cited arguments used by saloon interests which he refuted to the satisfaction of his auditors. In part he said: "Beer follows the flag and contests with the missionary the right to civilize the Filipinos. Saloon keepers should cease patronizing insurance companies which discriminate against them, and all corporations which insist upon sober employes. If the liquor traffic does not elevate, why does the government take internal revenues from it? Would church members rent property to the trade if it was not honorable." It will be noticed that a vein of sarcasm coursed through Rev. Mr. McCauley's address. In closing the reverend gentleman offered a resolution to permit saloons to remain open uninterrupted with the exception of two hours in the night. Much of the talk was a burlesque which created amusement.

The tenth annual report of the trustees and officers of the Massillon state hospital, filed with the governor, shows that the number of Columbiana county patients remaining in the institution at the close of the fiscal year, November 15, 1901, was 125. During the year just ended 38 patients were admitted from Columbiana county. Four from the county died and the number remaining from the county at the close of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1902, was 135.

The Star Stoneware company, of Crooksville, has increased its capital from $15,000 to $55,000. W. H. Brown is president and J. J. Bull secretary.

"Our Next Convention" is the topic John C. Walsh, of East Liverpool, will speak on at the meeting of the Franklin County Retail Liquor Dealers' association in this city December 9.

STAG SOCIAL

Held By Thomas Council, O. U. A. M., a Success In Every Particular.

The members of Gen. George H. Thomas council, No. 8, O. U. A. M., held their first stag social at the hall in the Golding building last night. It was by far the most enjoyable of any of the many functions which this lodge has ever hesd. The idea was a new one in this society, but the success made of the first attempt will undoubtedly result in other similar affairs being arranged for during the coming winter season.

T. Jeff Kerr, chief engineer at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, acted in the capacity of toast master, and he was unanimously pronounced an ideal presiding officer. Oysters, celery and pickles were the chief features going to make up the feast, and every one present did ample justice to the good things. A number of addresses were made in response to the call of Toastmaster Kerr, and the session was a delightful one throughout. Menter Shenkel was head waiter, and he performed the duties in a manner which would have done credit to a Jones.

MINISTER TALKED IN SARCASTIC WAY

Salem Clergyman Enlivened Anti-Saloon League Proceedings at Columbus.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5. — In his address entitled "A Defense of the Saloon," at the anti-saloon congress in this city Wednesday, Rev. W. F. McCauley, of Salem, made some very pointed statements. His topic was a misnomer, as the context, instead of defending the saloon, arraigned it most caustically. The speaker cited arguments used by saloon interests which he refuted to the satisfaction of his auditors. In part he said: "Beer follows the flag and contests with the missionary the right to civilize the Filipinos. Saloon keepers should cease patronizing insurance companies which discriminate against them, and all corporations which insist upon sober employes. If the liquor traffic does not elevate, why does the government take internal revenues from it? Would church members rent property to the trade if it was not honorable." It will be noticed that a vein of sarcasm coursed through Rev. Mr. McCauley's address. In closing the reverend gentleman offered a resolution to permit saloons to remain open uninterrupted with the exception of two hours in the night. Much of the talk was a burlesque which created amusement.

The tenth annual report of the trustees and officers of the Massillon state hospital, filed with the governor, shows that the number of Columbiana county patients remaining in the institution at the close of the fiscal year, November 15, 1901, was 125. During the year just ended 38 patients were admitted from Columbiana county. Four from the county died and the number remaining from the county at the close of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1902, was 135.

The Star Stoneware company, of Crooksville, has increased its capital from $15,000 to $55,000. W. H. Brown is president and J. J. Bull secretary.

"Our Next Convention" is the topic John C. Walsh, of East Liverpool, will speak on at the meeting of the Franklin County Retail Liquor Dealers' association in this city December 9.

STAG SOCIAL

Held By Thomas Council, O. U. A. M., a Success in Every Particular.

The members of Gen. George H. Thomas council, No. 8, O. U. A. M., held their first stag social at the hall in the Golding building last night. It was by far the most enjoyable of any of the many functions which this lodge has ever hesd. The idea was a new one in this society, but the success made of the first attempt will undoubtedly result in other similar affairs being arranged for during the coming winter season.

T. Jeff Kerr, chief engineer at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, acted in the capacity of toast master, and he was unanimously pronounced an ideal presiding officer. Oysters, celery and pickles were the chief features going to make up the feast, and every one present did ample justice to the good things. A number of addresses were made in response to the call of Toastmaster Kerr, and the session was a delightful one throughout. Menter Shenkel was head waiter, and he performed the duties in a manner which would have done credit to a Jones.

EAST END

EAST END CITIZENS SHIVERED AND GRUMBLED.

Ft. Pitt Has Something Wrong With Its Mains And No End of Trouble Ensued.

An irate citizen of the East End entered the office of Attorney Davis this morning as if he had arrived at the conclusion that life was not worth living. He gave a crusty good morning to the occupants of the room and took down the receiver in the Columbiana 'phone. "Give me the Fort Pitt Gas company," he said in answer to the query from central. "Can't get them," was the response, "they have their receiver down and won't answer calls." "Say, central," he snorted, "if you ever get them tell them to go where they don't have to burn gas to keep warm." The obliging hello girl promised that she would.

Nearly all the patrons of this company were in about the same state of mind this morning. The pressure was weak all day yesterday and at about 9 o'clock the supply was shut off entirely. About 10:30 the pressure came on so strong that the blaze from the jets left burning in the stores reached almost to the ceiling. It looked so dangerous that Harry Meanor and Will Baird thought it best to awake the proprietors and have the gas shut off. This unusual pressure continued for about an hour and a half. Then there was no gas until an early hour this morning when the pressure was strong again for a time. It began to wane again, however, and for the remainder of the morning there was not enough to be utilized.

The inconvenience that attends the shortage in the gas supply can only be realized by those who have been through similar ordeals. With the exception of those who live along the St. George street the East End is dependent on the Ft. Pitt company for its supply. In nearly every home gas is used for both heating and cooking purposes so there is suffering from both cold and hunger when the supply fails. Fortunate indeed are those who have coal stoves for emergencies of this nature.

The complaints heard this morning were seriously uttered. This is the third time this fall that the trouble has occurred and the people are heartily tired of it. Many of them said they would discard the gas and return to burning coal. It is safe to predict that the other company would be liberally patronized if they would extend their service to all parts of the East End.

STRUCK BY A POLE

A Passenger Hanging to Street Car Steps Thrown to the Ground And Badly Hurt.

Lon Byers, an employe of the Harker pottery, was painfully injured yesterday evening about 6 o'clock while returning to his home after a day's work in the plant. He swung unto the steps of a street car as it was passing the pottery, but owing to the crowded condition of the rear platform he could not get beyond the steps and maintained his position by grasping the handle bars. About the time the car had attained the usual speed his head came in violent contact with a pole and he was thrown to the ground, where he lay as one dead.

The car was stopped and a number of passengers, one of them a brother of the injured man, ran to his assistance. He was placed on board the car and taken to the office of Dr. Marshall. An examination showed a deep cut on the back of his head and bruises about the neck and shoulder. Fortunately the skull is not fractured and Byers will be able to return to work in a few days.

Now Ready for Occupancy.

The glass for the front of C. E. Foutts' store building arrived this morning and put in place at once and the building was ready for occupancy by noon. They will take the room, however.

THE WEARY GRIND GOES ON.

Rumors of Coal Strike Settlement In Air, but Commissioners Continue Taking Testimony.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 5.—At yesterday's sessions of the anthracite strike commission, the representatives of the mine workers continued to call witnesses, all mostly practical miners, who told their story of the conditions as they exist in the Hazelton or Middle coal fields. The miners tried to show by these witnesses that the Coxe and other hard coal companies had violated the agreement entered into by both sides when the commission was appointed, that the strikers should return to work and be given their old places back, where they had not already been filled. Some of the witnesses called testified that they were not given back their old places, and maintained that men prominent in the union in the various localities during the strike were discriminated against. The commission has decided to invite the mine inspectors to appear before them, because the miners claim that the workmen fear to inform the mine inspectors of dangerous or unhealthy places in the mines, because the inspectors are usually accompanied by some representative of the company who may cause the man's dismissal. This is a new point before the commission.

Rumors of possible negotiations towards a settlement outside the commission continues to be heard. Lawyers admit they have heard such rumors, but say they know nothing about a possible settlement. Whatever is done will be first decided upon in New York, where those in authority to act are located. Several attorneys, among them W. W. Ross, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company, have returned to the metropolis. Whether or not it is in connection with peace negotiations cannot be learned here. The opinion still prevails here, and rather strongly, too, that the operators and the miners will agree on most points before the commission concludes its hearings.

Awarded Medal.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Prof. H. V. Hilprecht, the eminent archaeologist, was last night presented by the University of Pennsylvania with a diploma awarding to him the Lucy Wharton Drexel medal for his excavations at Nippur and his publications on the subject. The fund for the medals was established last month by Lucy Wharton Drexel, who donated to the university the sum of $2,000, the income of which is to be expended for medals to be awarded once a year, for the best archaeological excavation or for the best publication based on archaeological excavations by an English-speaking scholar named by those already possessing it.

Miners' Executive Board Meeting.

Shamokin, Pa., Dec. 5.—The Ninth district executive board of United Mine Workers met here yesterday, when it was officially announced that the district would not receive any more aid from the bituminous men for miners yet idle, owing to the recent strike. Secretary Hartlein reported there were between 5,000 and 6,000 men and boys out of work in Schuylkill, Northumberland, Columbia and Dauphin counties, comprising the district. Each local is at present looking after its idle members.

Rumors of Coal Strike Settlement In Air, but Commissioners Continue Taking Testimony.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 5.—At yesterday's sessions of the anthracite strike commission, the representatives of the mine workers continued to call witnesses, all mostly practical miners, who told their story of the conditions as they exist in the Hazelton or Middle coal fields. The miners tried to show by these witnesses that the Coxe and other hard coal companies had violated the agreement entered into by both sides when the commission was appointed, that the strikers should return to work and be given their old places back, where they had not already been filled. Some of the witnesses called testified that they were not given back their old places, and maintained that men prominent in the union in the various localities during the strike were discriminated against. The commission has decided to invite the mine inspectors to appear before them, because the miners claim that the workmen fear to inform the mine inspectors of dangerous or unhealthy places in the mines, because the inspectors are usually accompanied by some representative of the company who may cause the man's dismissal. This is a new point before the commission.

Rumors of possible negotiations towards a settlement outside the commission continues to be heard. Lawyers admit they have heard such rumors, but say they know nothing about a possible settlement. Whatever is done will be first decided upon in New York, where those in authority to act are located. Several attorneys, among them W. W. Ross, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company, have returned to the metropolis. Whether or not it is in connection with peace negotiations cannot be learned here. The opinion still prevails here, and rather strongly, too, that the operators and the miners will agree on most points before the commission concludes its hearings.

Awarded Medal.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Prof. H. V. Hilprecht, the eminent archaeologist, was last night presented by the University of Pennsylvania with a diploma awarding to him the Lucy Wharton Drexel medal for his excavations at Nippur and his publications on the subject. The fund for the medals was established last month by Lucy Wharton Drexel, who donated to the university the sum of $2,000, the income of which is to be expended for medals to be awarded once a year, for the best archaeological excavation or for the best publication based on archaeological excavations by an English-speaking scholar named by those already possessing it.

Miners' Executive Board Meeting.

Shamokin, Pa., Dec. 5.—The Ninth district executive board of United Mine Workers met here yesterday, when it was officially announced that the district would not receive any more aid from the bituminous men for miners yet idle, owing to the recent strike. Secretary Hartlein reported there were between 5,000 and 6,000 men and boys out of work in Schuylkill, Northumberland, Columbia and Dauphin counties, comprising the district. Each local is at present looking after its idle members.

EAST END

Ft. Pitt Has Something Wrong With Its Mains And No End of Trouble Ensued.

An irate citizen of the East End entered the office of Attorney Davis this morning as if he had arrived at the conclusion that life was not worth living. He gave a crusty good morning to the occupants of the room and took down the receiver in the Columbiana 'phone. "Give me the Fort Pitt Gas company," he said in answer to the query from central. "Can't get them," was the response, "they have their receiver down and won't answer calls." "Say, central," he snorted, "if you ever get them tell them to go where they don't have to burn gas to keep warm." The obliging hello girl promised that she would.

Nearly all the patrons of this company were in about the same state of mind this morning. The pressure was weak all day yesterday and at about 9 o'clock the supply was shut off entirely. About 10:30 the pressure came on so strong that the blaze from the jets left burning in the stores reached almost to the ceiling. It looked so dangerous that Harry Meanor and Will Baird thought it best to awake the proprietors and have the gas shut off. This unusual pressure continued for about an hour and a half. Then there was no gas until an early hour this morning when the pressure was strong again for a time. It began to wane again, however, and for the remainder of the morning there was not enough to be utilized.

The inconvenience that attends the shortage in the gas supply can only be realized by those who have been through similar ordeals. With the exception of those who live along the St. George street the East End is dependent on the Ft. Pitt company for its supply. In nearly every home gas is used for both heating and cooking purposes so there is suffering from both cold and hunger when the supply fails. Fortunate indeed are those who have coal stoves for emergencies of this nature.

The complaints heard this morning were seriously uttered. This is the third time this fall that the trouble has occurred and the people are heartily tired of it. Many of them said they would discard the gas and return to burning coal. It is safe to predict that the other company would be liberally patronized if they would extend their service to all parts of the East End.

STRUCK BY A POLE

A Passenger Hanging to Street Car Steps Thrown to the Ground And Badly Hurt.

Lon Byers, an employe of the Harker pottery, was painfully injured yesterday evening about 6 o'clock while returning to his home after a day's work in the plant. He swung unto the steps of a street car as it was passing the pottery, but owing to the crowded condition of the rear platform he could not get beyond the steps and maintained his position by grasping the handle bars. About the time the car had attained the usual speed his head came in violent contact with a pole and he was thrown to the ground, where he lay as one dead.

The car was stopped and a number of passengers, one of them a brother of the injured man, ran to his assistance. He was placed on board the car and taken to the office of Dr. Marshall. An examination showed a deep cut on the back of his head and bruises about the neck and shoulder. Fortunately the skull is not fractured and Byers will be able to return to work in a few days.

Now Ready for Occupancy.

The glass for the front of C. E. Foutts' store building arrived this morning and put in place at once and the building was ready for occupancy by noon. The glass has been delayed in shipment for several weeks and Lacey & Buckle, the jewelers, who were to have occupied the room, moved to another location only yesterday. They will take the room, however.

Select the good, avoid the bad, then you will always use Meredith's Diamond Club Pure Rye Whiskey; price fair, goods guaranteed.

A delegation of Pittsburg business men, interested in river improvement, called on President Roosevelt at Washington and laid before him the resolutions adopted at the recent convention held at Parkersburg. They presented eloquent statistics and business-like arguments, showing exactly what is desired in the way of river improvement and the urgent need of prompt and decisive action by congress. The president, who long since had been converted to the rivermen's side of the question, was profoundly impressed and assured his visitors that he cordially approved the project outlined—a nine-foot channel from Pittsburg to Cairo—and would do his utmost to further the ends desired. The president is the right man in the right place. His promise is definite and sincere, and the champions of the project whose completion means so much to the Ohio valley and to the whole country have great reason to be encouraged. But they cannot afford to drop their campaign of education or relax their efforts to produce results. The president can help, but he cannot do everything. Before he can guarantee an improved river, the project must be laid before him in the form of a bill passed by both houses of congress, providing ways and means. Effort must henceforth be directed toward persuading the national legislators to act. With so many earnest and able men, aroused and alert and working for the success of the great project, a powerful influence will be brought to bear upon congress. The situation justifies the hope entertained by the promoters of the enterprise and should induce them to pursue their campaign with renewed vigor.

"In the industrial progress made by the United States during recent years there has been no more conspicuous feature than the growth of agriculture," says Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson in his annual report to the president, and he gives figures which are strong proof of the truth of the assertion. Yet he cites ways innumerable in which our agriculture can be benefited and scientific knowledge of farming extended. The agricultural department is doing excellent work, and there is abundant work for it to do. The most ancient and most important of human occupations is developing, for nothing in America stands still, but it will be many years before it reaches the stage of development which it can and ought to attain. Farming is a business that demands brains and skill, and the more both are applied to it the more it will prosper. One of the encouraging signs of the time is the increased number of educated men who turn their attention to farming, both because they love the occupation and because they find it profitable.

Milwaukee recently gave voting machines a test and approved them. In one of the wards in which the machines were used the population is almost entirely foreign born, and yet there was no difficulty in the voters manipulating the machines. The experience of Milwaukee is that of every city in which the machines are used. In several cities in New York state these machines are in regular service, and the voters would not be without them. They are perfectly accurate, easily managed and the will of the voter is expressed to a certainty. It is only a matter of time when the voting machine will be in general use.

One of the measures, work on which has begun with an evident purpose to push it to completion before the end of this session of congress is the army reorganization bill. There is urgent need of action on the question. Our military laws are antiquated and ill-adapted to a progressive country. We have but little use for an army ordinarily but when necessity for its use arises we want the most capable and effective one possible. Laws that will help and not retard are what we should have.

The Wheeling Evening Telegram, volume 1 No. 1, appeared on Wednesday. It is up-to-date in size, make-up and newsiness, well filled with advertisements, and looks as if it were destined to live long and prosper. Wheeling is an enterprising and growing city and certainly ought to afford an excellent field for another good newspaper. And from all indications the Telegraph is going to fill the bill.

Rapidly-increasing interest in the Americanized schools, and in education; an increase in industry ;and a largely-increased demand among the natives for soap are three things that impressed an American observer in the Philippines that the natives are on the road to advancement and modern civilization.

We have not yet read Mr. Bryan's opinion of the president's message, but violate no confidence in stating that he thinks he could write a better one. He is almost alone in that opinion, however.

In making up a list of Christmas donations, the hospital, the churches and the Salvation army should not be overlooked All can use cash to advantage.

The holiday trade is going to be good in East Liverpool, but the men who don't advertise are likely not to learn this fact.

TWELVE PAGES.

A delegation of Pittsburg business men, interested in river improvement, called on President Roosevelt at Washington and laid before him the resolutions adopted at the recent convention held at Parkersburg. They presented eloquent statistics and business-like arguments, showing exactly what is desired in the way of river improvement and the urgent need of prompt and decisive action by congress. The president, who long since had been converted to the rivermen's side of the question, was profoundly impressed and assured his visitors that he cordially approved the project outlined—a nine-foot channel from Pittsburg to Cairo—and would do his utmost to further the ends desired. The president is the right man in the right place. His promise is definite and sincere, and the champions of the project whose completion means so much to the Ohio valley and to the whole country have great reason to be encouraged. But they cannot afford to drop their campaign of education or relax their efforts to produce results. The president can help, but he cannot do everything. Before he can guarantee an improved river, the project must be laid before him in the form of a bill passed by both houses of congress, providing ways and means. Effort must henceforth be directed toward persuading the national legislators to act. With so many earnest and able men, aroused and alert and working for the success of the great project, a powerful influence will be brought to bear upon congress. The situation justifies the hope entertained by the promoters of the enterprise and should induce them to pursue their campaign with renewed vigor.

"In the industrial progress made by the United States during recent years there has been no more conspicuous feature than the growth of agriculture," says Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson in his annual report to the president, and he gives figures which are strong proof of the truth of the assertion. Yet he cites ways innumerable in which our agriculture can be benefited and scientific knowledge of farming extended. The agricultural department is doing excellent work, and there is abundant work for it to do. The most ancient and most important of human occupations is developing, for nothing in America stands still, but it will be many years before it reaches the stage of development which it can and ought to attain. Farming is a business that demands brains and skill, and the more both are applied to it the more it will prosper. One of the encouraging signs of the time is the increased number of educated men who turn their attention to farming, both because they love the occupation and because they find it profitable.

Milwaukee recently gave voting machines a test and approved them. In one of the wards in which the machines were used the population is almost entirely foreign born, and yet there was no difficulty in the voters manipulating the machines. The experience of Milwaukee is that of every city in which the machines are used. In several cities in New York state these machines are in regular service, and the voters would not be without them. They are perfectly accurate, easily managed and the will of the voter is expressed to a certainty. It is only a matter of time when the voting machine will be in general use.

One of the measures, work on which has begun with an evident purpose to push it to completion before the end of this session of congress is the army reorganization bill. There is urgent need of action on the question. Our military laws are antiquated and ill-adapted to a progressive country. We have but little use for an army ordinarily but when necessity for its use arises we want the most capable and effective one possible. Laws that will help and not retard are what we should have.

The Wheeling Evening Telegram, volume 1 No. 1, appeared on Wednesday. It is up-to-date in size, make-up and newsiness, well filled with advertisements, and looks as if it were destined to live long and prosper. Wheeling is an enterprising and growing city and certainly ought to afford an excellent field for another good newspaper. And from all indications the Telegraph is going to fill the bill.

Rapidly-increasing interest in the Americanized schools, and in education; an increase in industry; and a largely-increased demand among the natives for soap are three things that impressed an American observer in the Philippines that the natives are on the road to advancement and modern civilization.

We have not yet read Mr. Bryan's opinion of the president's message, but violate no confidence in stating that he thinks he could write a better one. He is almost alone in that opinion, however.

In making up a list of Christmas donations, the hospital, the churches and the Salvation army should not be overlooked. All can use cash to advantage.

A delegation of Pittsburg business men, interested in river improvement, called on President Roosevelt at Washington and laid before him the resolutions adopted at the recent convention held at Parkersburg. They presented eloquent statistics and business-like arguments, showing exactly what is desired in the way of river improvement and the urgent need of prompt and decisive action by congress. The president, who long since had been converted to the rivermen's side of the question, was profoundly impressed and assured his visitors that he cordially approved the project outlined—a nine-foot channel from Pittsburg to Cairo—and would do his utmost to further the ends desired. The president is the right man in the right place. His promise is definite and sincere, and the champions of the project whose completion means so much to the Ohio valley and to the whole country have great reason to be encouraged. But they cannot afford to drop their campaign of education or relax their efforts to produce results. The president can help, but he cannot do everything. Before he can guarantee an improved river, the project must be laid before him in the form of a bill passed by both houses of congress, providing ways and means. Effort must henceforth be directed toward persuading the national legislators to act. With so many earnest and able men, aroused and alert and working for the success of the great project, a powerful influence will be brought to bear upon congress. The situation justifies the hope entertained by the promoters of the enterprise and should induce them to pursue their campaign with renewed vigor.

"In the industrial progress made by the United States during recent years there has been no more conspicuous feature than the growth of agriculture," says Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson in his annual report to the president, and he gives figures which are strong proof of the truth of the assertion. Yet he cites ways innumerable in which our agriculture can be benefited and scientific knowledge of farming extended. The agricultural department is doing excellent work, and there is abundant work for it to do. The most ancient and most important of human occupations is developing, for nothing in America stands still, but it will be many years before it reaches the stage of development which it can and ought to attain. Farming is a business that demands brains and skill, and the more both are applied to it the more it will prosper. One of the encouraging signs of the time is the increased number of educated men who turn their attention to farming, both because they love the occupation and because they find it profitable.

Milwaukee recently gave voting machines a test and approved them. In one of the wards in which the machines were used the population is almost entirely foreign born, and yet there was no difficulty in the voters manipulating the machines. The experience of Milwaukee is that of every city in which the machines are used. In several cities in New York state these machines are in regular service, and the voters would not be without them. They are perfectly accurate, easily managed and the will of the voter is expressed to a certainty. It is only a matter of time when the voting machine will be in general use.

One of the measures, work on which has begun with an evident purpose to push it to completion before the end of this session of congress is the army reorganization bill. There is urgent need of action on the question. Our military laws are antiquated and ill-adapted to a progressive country. We have but little use for an army ordinarily but when necessity for its use arises we want the most capable and effective one possible. Laws that will help and not retard are what we should have.

The Wheeling Evening Telegram, volume 1 No. 1, appeared on Wednesday. It is up-to-date in size, make-up and newsiness, well filled with advertisements, and looks as if it were destined to live long and prosper. Wheeling is an enterprising and growing city and certainly ought to afford an excellent field for another good newspaper. And from all indications the Telegraph is going to fill the bill.

Rapidly-increasing interest in the Americanized schools, and in education; an increase in industry ;and a largely-increased demand among the natives for soap are three things that impressed an American observer in the Philippines that the natives are on the road to advancement and modern civilization.

We have not yet read Mr. Bryan's opinion of the president's message, but violate no confidence in stating that he thinks he could write a better one. He is almost alone in that opinion, however.

In making up a list of Christmas donations, the hospital, the churches and the Salvation army should not be overlooked All can use cash to advantage.

The holiday trade is going to be good in East Liverpool, but the men who don't advertise are likely not to learn this fact.

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

AT THE THEATER

The latest London melodrama to be imported and produced in this country is "The Game of Life," written by the well-known English playwright, W. Howell Poole. This play has been a tremenduous success in London and the provinces for the past two years, and had its first American presentation at the Third Avenue theater, New York city, this season, where it met with instantaneous approval and record breaking business. At the Grand, Tuesday, November 9.

"Katzenjammer Kids" company, composed of bright and high-class specialty people, will be at the Grand tonight. This company will present novelty and comedy numbers. It comes here direct from a popular New York theater. It also had a long run in Philadelphia. Although it is simply a farce comedy, a conglomoration of funny situations, dialogues and costumes, the play has received flattering notices wherever presented.

"A Mother's Heart" will be the attraction at the Grand tomorrow night. This drama of intense human interest will be presented by a cast of extraordinary strength, including some of our best known actors. A pleasing feature is the introduction of little Beatrice Abbey, acknowledged to be the prettiest and most versatile child actress now before the public.

WELLSVILLE

YARDS CONGESTED

The C. & P. in Great Need of More Room in Wellsville—Remedies Suggested.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad is sadly in need of more yard room in this city just below the shops. Freight trains have been coming into the city for the past few days at a rapid rate and now the yards at the lower end of town are blocked and will probably remain that way for some time, as there are not enough engines at the shops to handle the incoming freight and at the same time clear away the blockade.

It has been well suggested by a city official that the city could afford to donate the railroad company a right of way for a switch to run along the river bank near the western corporation line from Eighteenth street. The advantage to the city if this suggestion was carried out would be the saving of the expense to the city of constructing a retaining wall at this point, which will have to be the case if something is not done soon.

It has been stated upon good authority that the railroad company is negotiating for the purchase of several pieces of property on Nevada street, between Seventeenth and Twentieth streets, for the purpose of widening the yards.

It is believed her that some time in the future the railroad company will own all of the property west of Eighteenth street and south of the C. & P. tracks to the city limits. When that time comes, all of this land will be devoted to enlarging the yards, and matters will be so arranged that the C. & P. will be able to handle an enormous freight business.

IRATE WOMEN

Loud in Their Threats Against a Barber, Who Talks of Prosecuting Boys.

John Bissman, who owns a barber shop on Thirteenth street, had his troubles last evening with a number of West End women, who declared that they would put Bissman out of business if he did not agree not to prosecute their boys who, on last Haloween partially damaged the barber shop sign in front of Bissman's shop.

One West End citizens, whose son was implicated in the deed, went to Bissman and offered to settle for what damage his son had done, but Bissman wanted $10, which is entirely out of reason, as the pole was not damaged to any great extent. Bissman declared that he knew all of the boys who were implicated in the matter and said that he would have them all prosecuted unless they paid him $10.

It was only a short time after this statement was made that the mothers of the boys who had done the damage put in their appearance at the barber shop. Bissman then had his troubles. One woman said: "If you have my son arrested, I will chop your old barber pole into kindling wood and I will put your infernal barber shop out of business."

Other women made similar statements which immediately put Bissman in an angry mood. Bissman has as yet prosecuted no one, and it is thought he will allow the matter to drop.

PICKED UP A CHECK

Endorsed Paper Worth $150 Found on the Street By George Boop.

George Boop, the well known West End barber, while returning to work at noon yesterday and while passing the corner of Fifteenth and Center streets, picked up an endorsed check for $150.

The check was drawn on the Silver Banking company, of this city, and was signed by the Carroll-Porter Boiler works. It was made payable to Golden Paisley and had evidently been endorsed by Mr. Paisley, as the endorsement bore his signature. The check was numbered 37. Mr. Boop still has the check in his possession and will hold it until the rightful owner claims his property.

Switch Plans Satisfactory.

The railroad committee of council held a special meeting last evening, together with several officials of the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad at the city hall. They talked over the plans for the new switch which is to be placed through the northern part of the city. The plans were opened before the committee and after being carefully examined were found to be perfectly satisfactory. The committee will recommend their acceptance to the council at the next regular meeting.

Weaver-Rawlins.

Joseph Rawlins and Miss Minnie Weaver, both well known young people in this city, were quietly married Wednesday evening at the M. E. parsonage on Main street by Rev. C. E. Clark. The groom is a railroad man in the employ of the C. & P. and the bride is the daughter of Mrs. Albert Weaver, of Fifteenth street. The couple will make their home in New Philadelphia and will go to housekeeping there soon.

Maccabees' Meeting.

The regular bi-weekly lodge meeting of Advance Tent No. 501, Knights of the Maccabees, was held last evening at the hall on Main street. Regular lodge work was transacted. Several applications for membership were received and favorable action was taken.

Funeral of Mrs. Payne.

FRESHWATER PAID

COUNCIL ALLOWS HIS CLAIMS FOR $9,681 FOR WORK.

The First Street Bridge Will Cost $5,000 to $6,000—The Matter Debated.

The council chamber was well filled last night when Mayor Shrader called the council to order. Only Solicitor Marshall was absent.

Mr. Hough, of the light committee, reported that he had seen Risinger Bros., and they had promised to repair the present street lights this week.

Engineer Boyd, who had been previously instructed to prepare an estimate of paving completed by Freshwater & Sons, was present and submitted to council the following bill for September, October and November: 7,000 cubic yard grading at 30 cents, $2,100; 4,157 feet of curbing, 60 cents, $2,494.20; 5,360.97 square feet paving, $1.10, $5,897.87; 241.8 rough curbing, 40 cents, $96.72; extra work as per bills, $98.39; 15 per cent as per contract for extra work, $14.73; 5,200 paving brick at $10.75 per thousand, $55.90; total $10,757.01; less 10 per cent, $1,075.70; amount due Freshwaters, $9,681.31.

The claims were ordered paid and a warrant for the amount given Mr. Freshwater, who was present.

Agent A. L. Skinner, of the railroad company, was present and presented a communication from the superintendent of the company in regard to First street crossing. It stated that the plan of bridge which would be suitable would cost $5,700. The council objected, however, to the plan in part, on account of only one foot walk being provided, and stated that nothing short of six-foot walks on both sides of the bridge would be satisfactory. The addition would cost $500 or $600 more.

The railroad company does not feel that this is necessary, but, if council insists, will offer no further objections. In conclusion the company agrees to contribute one-half the cost of the bridge, not to exceed $6,300. No action whatever was taken on this matter.

Council's attention was called to the bad condition of the street at the corner of Carolina and Third streets. Engineer Boyd was ordered to stop travel at that point until it could be repaired.

R. I. Hilliard asked council to turn the sewer from his lot on Carolina avenue. It was ordered closed up.

A communication from the tin plate company, asking council to repair Sixth street, leading from Carolina avenue to the mill, was received and the work ordered done.

The bills of T. S. Campbell and J. M. Williams for work done were presented and ordered paid.

Solicitor Marshall arrived at the council chamber after the meeting had adjourned. The bond sale had not been discussed on account of his absence, but the mayor called the members to order again. Upon inquiry the solicitor stated that he could fully explain the points of objection by the attorneys of J. F. Fullerton & Co., of Cleveland, who were to take the bonds. Nothing further was done on the matter.

$10,000 FOR A FARM

Waitman Allison Disposes of a Valuable Tract to Oil Men.

W. L. Scott & Co., of Pittsburg, have sold for Waitman C. Allison to Frank McCann, of that city, the farm on the east branch of Tomlinson's run containing 153 acres. Consideration, $10,000. A fine brick dwelling with other good farm buildings are on the property.

This farm is in the heart of the oil and gas fields of Hancock county. It is said Mr. McCann has already leased the farm to a company of Cosaopolis, Pa., who will operate for oil soon. Mr. Allison, who has been residing in Coraopolis for the past year, sold his farm on account of the ill health of his wife. They will immediately leave for Colorado to make their future home.

An Excellent Gas Well.

The LaBelle Oil company had its gas well tested yesterday and it showed 350 pounds rock pressure. This is even better than was first supposed. It will be used for fuel in drilling more wells in the territory. The machine is being moved today to the Glass farm. Mr. Franzheim has his eye on another location just as soon as the Glass well is finished. He is much pleased with his gas well, which he says will be for sale soon.

The Well Abandoned.

The drillers at the well on the Tope farm, put down by the Horseshoe company, have not got out the tools which were stuck some time ago. The well had been drilled 800 feet. It has been abandoned and they are moving the rig to start another hole. Campbell Hutson has the contract for drilling the well.

More Siding Wanted.

Agent A. L. Skinner has asked the Panhandle Railroad company for more siding and has suggested that it put in a good siding at First street station. This if carried out will be a very great convenience to the town.

Cutting Timber.

Martin & Cameron have moved their saw mill to the G. L. Baxter farm and are engeged in cutting timber. This is one of the finest pieces of timber in the county and some first class oak lumber is being cut.

Promise to Be a Good One.

The Freshwater & Carson well, No. 6, on the Carson farm reached the sand last night at midnight. They will drill it in today. This promises to be a good oil well.

Funeral of a Child.

An infant son of William Wallace, on Fairview street, died yesterday morning of pneumonia, aged about 10 months. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Hit By a Car.

Garrett Mercer was accidently hit by a Southside car this morning knocking him down, but no serious injury was sustained.

CHESTER NOTES.

Peter Noficier is a probable candidate for councilman in the First ward.

Miss Anna Spear, of West Liberty, W. Va., is visiting Mrs. Dr. G. E. Lewis.

Girard Hobbs, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hobbs, is quite sick with scarlet fever.

John Cunningham left yesterday morning for another hunting trip out in Beaver county.

Harry Moore has moved to his farm which he recently purchased from Mrs. G. L. Baxter, on Tomlinson Run.

L. Priest left this morning for Wellsville where he will take a position as brakeman on a freight of the C. & P.

Alex. R. Campbell, Sr., is a candidate for the nomination for mayor of Wheeling on the Republican ticket. The primaries will be held tomorrow.

Mrs. J. R. Newell arrived home from Cramer, Ill., last evening much improved in health. She has been taking the mud baths at the sanitarium there.

WELLSVILLE

YARDS CONGESTED

The C. & P. in Great Need of More Room in Wellsville—Remedies Suggested.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad is sadly in need of more yard room in this city just below the shops. Freight trains have been coming into the city for the past few days at a rapid rate and now the yards at the lower end of town are blocked and will probably remain that way for some time, as there are not enough engines at the shops to handle the incoming freight and at the same time clear away the blockade.

It has been well suggested by a city official that the city could afford to donate the railroad company a right of way for a switch to run along the river bank near the western corporation line from Eighteenth street. The advantage to the city if this suggestion was carried out would be the saving of the expense to the city of constructing a retaining wall at this point, which will have to be the case if something is not done soon.

It has been stated upon good authority that the railroad company is negotiating for the purchase of several pieces of property on Nevada street, between Seventeenth and Twentieth streets, for the purpose of widening the yards.

It is believed her that some time in the future the railroad company will own all of the property west of Eighteenth street and south of the C. & P. tracks to the city limits. When that time comes, all of this land will be devoted to enlarging the yards, and matters will be so arranged that the C. & P. will be able to handle an enormous freight business.

IRATE WOMEN

Loud in Their Threats Against a Barber, Who Talks of Prosecuting Boys.

John Bissman, who owns a barber shop on Thirteenth street, had his troubles last evening with a number of West End women, who declared that they would put Bissman out of business if he did not agree not to prosecute their boys who, on last Halooween partially damaged the barber shop sign in front of Bissman's shop.

One West End citizens, whose son was implicated in the deed, went to Bissman and offered to settle for what damage his son had done, but Bissman wanted $10, which is entirely out of reason, as the pole was not damaged to any great extent. Bissman declared that he knew all of the boys who were implicated in the matter and said that he would have them all prosecuted unless they paid him $10.

It was only a short time after this statement was made that the mothers of the boys who had done the damage put in their appearance at the barber shop. Bissman then had his troubles. One woman said: "If you have my son arrested, I will chop your old barber pole into kindling wood and I will put your infernal barber shop out of business."

Other women made similar statements which immediately put Bissman in an angry mood. Bissman has as yet prosecuted no one, and it is thought he will allow the matter to drop.

PICKED UP A CHECK

Endorsed Paper Worth $150 Found on the Street By George Boop.

George Boop, the well known West End barber, while returning to work at noon yesterday and while passing the corner of Fifteenth and Center streets, picked up an endorsed check for $150.

It was made payable to Golden Paisley and had evidently been endorsed by Mr. Paisley, as the endorsement bore his signature. The check was numbered 37. Mr. Boop still has the check in his possession and will hold it until the rightful owner claims his property.

COUNCIL ALLOWS HIS CLAIMS FOR $9,681 FOR WORK.

The First Street Bridge Will Cost $5,000 to $6,000—The Matter Debated.

The council chamber was well filled last night when Mayor Shrader called the council to order. Only Solicitor Marshall was absent.

Mr. Hough, of the light committee, reported that he had seen Risinger Bros., and they had promised to repair the present street lights this week.

Engineer Boyd, who had been previously instructed to prepare an estimate of paving completed by Freshwater & Sons, was present and submitted to council the following bill for September, October and November: 7,000 cubic yard grading at 30 cents, $2,100; 4,157 feet of curbing, 60 cents, $2,494.20; 5,360.97 square feet paving, $1.10, $5,897.87; 241.8 rough curbing, 40 cents, $96.72; extra work as per bills, $98.39; 15 per cent as per contract for extra work, $14.73; 5,200 paving brick at $10.75 per thousand, $55.90; total $10,757.01; less 10 per cent, $1,075.70; amount due Freshwaters, $9,681.31.

The claims were ordered paid and a warrant for the amount given Mr. Freshwater, who was present.

Agent A. L. Skinner, of the railroad company, was present and presented a communication from the superintendent of the company in regard to First street crossing. It stated that the plan of bridge which would be suitable would cost $5,700. The council objected, however, to the plan in part, on account of only one foot walk being provided, and stated that nothing short of six-foot walks on both sides of the bridge would be satisfactory. The addition would cost $500 or $600 more.

The railroad company does not feel that this is necessary, but, if council insists, will offer no further objections. In conclusion the company agrees to contribute one-half the cost of the bridge, not to exceed $6,300. No action whatever was taken on this matter.

Council's attention was called to the bad condition of the street at the corner of Carolina and Third streets. Engineer Boyd was ordered to stop travel at that point until it could be repaired.

R. I. Hilliard asked council to turn the sewer from his lot on Carolina avenue. It was ordered closed up.

A communication from the tin plate company, asking council to repair Sixth street, leading from Carolina avenue to the mill, was received and the work ordered done.

The bills of T. S. Campbell and J. M. Williams for work done were presented and ordered paid.

Solicitor Marshall arrived at the council chamber after the meeting had adjourned. The bond sale had not been discussed on account of his absence, but the mayor called the members to order again. Upon inquiry the solicitor stated that he could fully explain the points of objection by the attorneys of J. F. Fullerton & Co., of Cleveland, who were to take the bonds. Nothing further was done on the matter.

Waitman Allison Disposes of a Valuable Tract to Oil Men.

W. L. Scott & Co., of Pittsburg, have sold for Waitman C. Allison to Frank McCann, of that city, the farm on the east branch of Tomlinson's run containing 153 acres. Consideration, $10,000. A fine brick dwelling with other good farm buildings are on the property.

This farm is in the heart of the oil and gas fields of Hancock county. It is said Mr. McCann has already leased the farm to a company of Cosaopolis, Pa., who will operate for oil soon. Mr. Allison, who has been residing in Coraopolis for the past year, sold his farm on account of the ill health of his wife. They will immediately leave for Colorado to make their future home.

An Excellent Gas Well.

The LaBelle Oil company had its gas well tested yesterday and it showed 350 pounds rock pressure. This is even better than was first supposed. It will be used for fuel in drilling more wells in the territory. The machine is being moved today to the Glass farm. Mr. Franzheim has his eye on another location just as soon as the Glass well is finished. He is much pleased with his gas well, which he says will be for sale soon.

The Well Abandoned.

The drillers at the well on the Tope farm, put down by the Horseshoe company, have not got out the tools which were stuck some time ago. The well had been drilled 800 feet. It has been abandoned and they are moving the rig to start another hole. Campbell Hutson has the contract for drilling the well.

More Siding Wanted.

Agent A. L. Skinner has asked the Panhandle Railroad company for more siding and has suggested that it put in a good siding at First street station. This if carried out will be a very great convenience to the town.

Cutting Timber.

Martin & Cameron have moved their saw mill to the G. L. Baxter farm and are engeged in cutting timber. This is one of the finest pieces of timber in the county and some first class oak lumber is being cut.

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

TWO NEW SETS.

It is quite likely that the Burford Bros.' plant will be busy in all departments right through into the spring trade. Even the decorators, with whom work is usually slack at this time of the year, will find almost steady employment. The holiday vacation will probably begin with Christmas day and end with New Year's. The new "Pearle" shaps dinner set, which will be placed on the market for the spring trade will be photographed today. Several of these sets were in the decorating kiln yesterday. The new set is exquisitely designed and tastefully decorated, there being nothing on the market more desirable. The remodeled "Defender" toilet set is now ready for the market but will not be pushed until the beginning of the new year. The changes have added greatly to the beauty of this set and with it and the new dinner line the firm will be in excellent shape to capture its full share of the spring business. During the past week there has been a shortage of clay and that has resulted in considerable inconvenience and loss of time. Several of the jiggermen were loafing a few days this week but it is expected to have the trouble remedied before the end of the week. Energy is mostly directed toward getting orders in board the cars. All the fall orders have not yet been shipped and it is desired to have everything cleared up several days before the holidays. Manager Buxton, of the decorating department, has been adding to the force in his department until it is the largest in the history of the plant. Four gilders and two fillers-in were taken on during the past week. The demands on this department have been imperative and Manager Buxton found it necessary to hustle constantly to prevent being swamped with orders.

ELIZABETHAN DELFT WARE.

The vicar and churchwarden of West Malling, a village near Maidstone, England, were recently offered £50 sterling for a beautiful delft ware flagon which they recently announced their intention to sell. The vessel, which bears the date 1581, and is believed to have been presented to the church by Sir Robert Brett, at one time lord of the manor, is elaborately decorated with curious figures. Members of the Kent Archaeological society, as well as prominent ratepayers of the parish, however, strongly objected to such a remarkable specimen of church plate being disposed if, and it was understood that the archbishop of Canterbury will be approached on the matter. The vicar and church wardens have decided to build a new porch to the church with the proceeds and they contend that, having complied with the usual formalities, they are at liberty to sell the article to the highest bidder.

POTTERY IN NEW YORK.

New York's population is eminently cosmopoltan in character. In no department is this better evidenced than in the pottery which is to be found in the foreign quarters of New York. The ordinary pitchers, jugs, and mugs used by the housewife in her domestic duties exhibit quaint and original characteristics which are full of charm to the curio collectors. Many of these articles are of cheap string yellow ware, and a kitchen could be stocked with them for $2 or $3. A new creation of this domestic ware is a blue and gray ware; especially clean and cool looking are the butter crocks, with a traditional nondescript decoration. One of the oddest of these domestic utensils is a circular flat vessel of blue-gray earthenware, with a drinking scene in low relief; on one side is pierced ears, through which the ends of the handle are inserted. It has a jug mouth with a lip for pouring. These quaint vessels are used for carrying water or wine from shop to house, and are made in half and gallon sizes. It is said that they are made in Texas. In the Italian quarter many dainty little carafes and decanters of fine green glass and graceful egg shape bottles with long necks are to be found. In the Spanish quarters will be found an extremely effective green Spanish pottery, but the ware is coarse and cheap in production. In the Chinese quarter are to be found those inexpensive tea cups in the form of small bowls with smaller bowls to cover them of good shape and color, which form a part of almost every woman's china cabinet bric-a-brac. Good ginger jars may also be found in the Chinese quarters.

PRESIDENT LEE.

As predicted by the News Review Monday, on the day the local party left for Washington to attend the annual convention of the U. S. Poters' association, Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. This honor would have been his at the meeting last year had it not been for the peculiar conditions that existed at that time, making it advisable to select an eastern man. With these conditions removed the honor was almost unanimously bestowed. There is no doubt that his selection is a wise one, as he is entirely conversant with every phase of the potting business and will devote time and energy to his duties. The indications are that his reign will be a peaceful one. There is no dispute of moment between the operators and the operatives and it is not likely that the tariff will be molested, but if an emergency does arise, President Lee's prudence and sagacity can be relied upon.

"NATIONAL" DISCARDED.

It is reported today that only one jiggerman and four pressers are at work at the National. The turners, finishers, dish makers and all others in the clay department have been laid off, it is stated, until after the holidays. The reason assigned is that the company is discontinuing the manufacture of its National shape. The biscuit warehouse is full of it and the men were laid off to give the glost end a chance to catch up.

GOES TO CHESTER.

After a long service as a printer at Burford s, Frank Buxton will sever his connection with the plant. At the expiration of his notice he will accept a similar situation at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor plant at Chester. His departure will be regretted by all those employed in the decorating department.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

Tom Boyd, lately of the National, has taken a saucer jigger at Burford's.

Miss Maggie Wilson, of Wellsville, has taken a situation as finisher at Burford's.

Miss Mary McFarland, a finisher at Burford's, will visit Pittsburg friends Saturday and Sunday.

Allen Hunt, of Burford's, has returned to work again after being quarantined for 10 days, owing to scarlet fever at his home on Second street.

It is reported that John Hedrich, a finisher at Burford's, will take a dish bench in the near future.

Miss Minnie Wilson, of the decorating department at Burford's, has been quite ill for the past week.

BARBERS' TROUBLES

If This Latest Attempt Should Fail a Strike Would Probably Result.

The journeymen barbers of this city have at last decided upon a course of action, which will doubtless result in a settlement of the dispute between their organization and the boss barbers. If it fails to do this there will undoubtedly be a strike.

The differences between the two factions have been pending for two weeks, and have been aired at numerous meetings held by representatives from both sides. At one time the rtouble was almost settled and, it is said, if the bosses had showed as willing a disposition to deal as did the journeymen a settlement could easily have been effected. It was impossible for the journeymen to even obtain a conference with their employers, however, during the past two weeks, and the plan as prepared will be carried out at once.

At the regular meeting held last night a committee was appointed for the purpose of presenting the scale for the signature of the bosses. This committee is instructed to recognize no association nor board, but instead is to call upon shop owners individually. In each case the boss is to be given until next Friday to affix his signature to the document, and if he refuses the employes will be called out. This latest move, in the opinion of some of the members of the journeymen's union, is a trifle tardy, since it is precisely what the scale committee appointed weeks ago, should have done. These members hold that negotiations with the bosses' association were wrong. They attempt to prove this by the statement that even if an agreement had been reached with the representatives of the employers, there are those among the latter class who would have refused to abide by the decision. Therefore, the idea of giving every boss an opportunity individually to sign the scale is thought to be the only way to proceed.

The lodge last night received an invitation from the Chester council to attend a meeting of the latter organization to be held one week from next Monday. WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

TWO NEW SETS.

It is quite likely that the Burford Bros.' plant will be busy in all departments right through into the spring trade. Even the decorators, with whom work is usually slack at this time of the year, will find almost steady employment. The holiday vacation will probably begin with Christmas day and end with New Year's. The new "Pearle" shaps dinner set, which will be placed on the market for the spring trade will be photographed today. Several of these sets were in the decorating kiln yesterday. The new set is exquisitely designed and tastefully decorated, there being nothing on the market more desirable. The remodeled "Defender" toilet set is now ready for the market but will not be pushed until the beginning of the new year. The changes have added greatly to the beauty of this set and with it and the new dinner line the firm will be in excellent shape to capture its full share of the spring business. During the past week there has been a shortage of clay and that has resulted in considerable inconvenience and loss of time. Several of the jiggermen were loafing a few days this week but it is expected to have the trouble remedied before the end of the week. Energy is mostly directed toward getting orders on board the cars. All the fall orders have not yet been shipped and it is desired to have everything shipped several days before the holidays. Manager Buxton, of the decorating department, has been adding to the force in his department until it is the largest in the history of the plant. Four gilders and two fillers-in were taken on during the past week. The demands on this department have been imperative and Manager Buxton found it necessary to hustle constantly to prevent being swamped with orders.

ELIZABETHAN DELFT WARE.

The vicar and churchwarden of West Malling, a village near Maidstone, England, were recently offered [illegible] sterling for a beautiful delft ware flagon which they recently announced their intention to sell. The vessel, which bears the date 1581, and is believed to have been presented to the church by Sir Robert Brett, at one time lord of the manor, is elaborately decorated with curious figures. Members of the Kent Archaeological society, as well as prominent ratepayers of the parish, however, strongly objected to such a remarkable specimen of church plate being disposed if, and it is understood that the archbishop of Canterbury will be approached on the matter. The vicar and churchwarden have decided to build a new porch to the church with the proceeds and they contend that, having complied with the usual formalities, they are at liberty to sell the article to the highest bidder.

POTTERY IN NEW YORK.

New York's population is eminently cosmopoltan in character. In no department is this better evidenced than in the pottery which is to be found in the foreign quarters of New York. The original pitchers, jugs, and mugs used by the housewife in her domestic duties exhibit quaint and original characteristics which are full of charm to the curio collectors. Many of these articles are of cheap string yellow ware and a kitchen could be stocked with them for $2 or $3. A new creation of this domestic ware is a blue and gray ware; especially clean and cool looking are the butter crocks, with a traditional nondescript decoration. One of the oddest of these domestic utensils is a circular flat vessel of blue-gray earthenware, with a drinking scene in low relief; on one side is pierced ears, through which the ends of the handle are inserted. It has a jug mouth with a lip for pouring. These quaint vessels are used for carrying water or wine from shop to house, and are made in half and gallon sizes. It is said that they are made in Texas. In the Italian quarter many dainty little carafes and decanters of fine green glass and graceful egg shape bottles with long necks are to be found. In the Spanish quarters will be found an extremely effective green Spanish pottery, but the ware is coarse and cheap in production. In the Chinese quarter are to be found those inexpensive tea cups in the form of small bowls with smaller bowls to cover them of good shape and color, which form a part of almost every woman's china cabinet bric-a-brac. Good ginger jars may also be found in the Chinese quarters.

PRESIDENT LEE.

As predicted by the News Review Monday, on the day the local party left for Washington to attend the annual convention of the U. S. Poters' association, Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. This honor would have been his at the meeting last year had it not been for the peculiar conditions that existed at that time, making it advisable to select an eastern man. With these conditions removed the honor was almost unanimously bestowed. There is no doubt that his selection is a wise one, as he is entirely conversant with every phase of the potting business and will devote time and energy to his duties. The indications are that his reign will be a peaceful one. There is no dispute of moment between the operators and the operatives and it is not likely that the tariff will be molested, but if an emergency does arise, President Lee's prudence and sagacity can be relied upon.

"NATIONAL" DISCARDED.

It is reported today that only one jiggerman and four pressers are at work at the National. The turners, finishers, dish makers and all others in the clay department have been laid off, it is stated, until after the holidays. The reason assigned is that the company is discontinuing the manufacture of its National shape. The biscuit warehouse is full of it and the men were laid off to give the glost end a chance to catch up.

GOES TO CHESTER.

After a long service as a printer at Burford s, Frank Buxton will sever his connection with the plant. At the expiration of his notice he will accept a similar situation at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor plant at Chester. His departure will be regretted by all those employed in the decorating department.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

Tom Boyd, lately of the National, has taken a saucer jigger at Burford's.

Miss Maggie Wilson, of Wellsville, has taken a situation as finisher at Burford's.

Miss Mary McFarland, a finisher at Burford's, will visit Pittsburg friends Saturday and Sunday.

Allen Hunt, of Burford's, has returned to work again after being quarantined for 10 days, owing to scarlet fever at his home on Second street.

Harry Allison has given up his jigger at Burford's and taken one at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor.

It is reported that John Hedrich, a finisher at Burford's, will take a dish bench in the near future.

Miss Minnie Wilson, of the decorating department at Burford's, has been quite ill for the past week.

Fred Bloor, an experienced gilder employed lately at Sebring, has recently taken a situation at Burford's.

Clifford Rowling, mouldrunner for Jiggerman Will Ellis, at Burford's, is confined to his home on Thompson's hill with sickness

Mrs. Annie Eardley and Mina Schmelzenbach, of the decorating room at Burford's, will visit with Pittsburg relatives over Sunday.

Fred Bennett, Edward Neal, Mrs. William Walker and Miss Ella Morley are recent additions to the decorating depatment at Burford's.

BARBERS' TROUBLES

If This Latest Attempt Should Fail a Strike Would Probably Result.

The journeymen barbers of this city have at last decided upon a course of action, which will doubtless result in a settlement of the dispute between their organization and the boss barbers. If it fails to do this there will undoubtedly be a strike.

The differences between the two factions have been pending for two weeks, and have been aired at numerous meetings held by representatives from both sides. At one time the rtouble was almost settled and, it is said, if the bosses had showed as willing a disposition to deal as did the journeymen a settlement could easily have been effected. It was impossible for the journeymen to even obtain a conference with their employers, however, during the past two weeks, and the plan as prepared will be carried out at once.

At the regular meeting held last night a committee was appointed for the purpose of presenting the scale for the signature of the bosses. This committee is instructed to recognize no association nor board, but instead is to call upon shop owners individually. In each case the boss is to be given until next Friday to affix his signature to the document, and if he refuses the employes will be called out. This latest move, in the opinion of some of the members of the journeymen's union, is a trifle tardy, since it is precisely what the scale committee appointed weeks ago, should have done. These members hold that negotiations with the bosses' association were wrong. They attempt to prove this by the statement that even if an agreement had been reached with the representatives of the employers, there are those among the latter class who would have refused to abide by the decision. Therefore, the idea of giving every boss an opportunity individually to sign the scale is thought to be the only way to proceed.

VERY FLOURISHING

Is Pride of the East Council — New Officers Elected.

At the meeting of Pride of the East Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., held last night two candidates were initiated and the election of officers was held. The lodge is in a flourishing condition, and when the list of officers is noted it is assured the coming year will be a prosperous one. The new officers are:

Councilor—Moses Alexander.
Vice Councilor—William Goppert.
Recording Secretary—W. M. Kent.
Financial Secretary—Harry Todd.
Treasurer—Luther Minnix.
Warden—Thomas Buckley.
Conductor—A. W. Duncan.
Trustee (three years)—J. E. Anderson.

The lodge last night received an invitation from the Chester council to attend a meeting of the latter organization to be held one week from next Monday. The lodge at Chester has been increasing its membership quite rapidly of late, and on the night mentioned has a large class for initiation. The members of Pride of the East council will attend the meeting in a body.

REALM OF SPORTS

BADLY BEATEN

East Liverpool Bowlers Defeated in Three Straight Games By Sebring Team.

The East Liverpool bowling team received a severe drubbing at the hands of the Sebring team last evening on the latters' alleys. Three games were played and each went to the Sebring bunch. The lineups of the teams follow: East Liverpool—Kerns, McEldowney, Craig, Clark and Rigby. Sebring—Miller, McLaughlin, Hughes, Mitchell and Tolson.

Fred Dunlap Laid to Rest.

Fred Dunlap, famous before the Brotherhood war in 1890 as king of second basemen, was buried at Odd Fellows' cemetery from an undertaking establishment in Philadelphia. Dunlap had been in ill health for a long time and died last Monday at the Philadelphia hospital. He was 43 years of age, and when in his prime as a ball player was considered the star fielding second baseman of the country. During the eighties Dunlap played with the St. Louis, Detroit and Pittsburg clubs, as well as with the Phillies, for a short period. He acted as captain of the Pittsburg team.

Tigers Want a Game.

The Columbia Tigers would like to arrange a game with any 80 to 85 pound team for Saturday, December 13, the Thompson lane team preferred. Manager John Canavan, of the Tigers, would like to meet the manager of the Thompson lane team at the Imperial bowling alley to arrange for the game. The Tigers' lineup is as follows:

May Keep Delehanty.

Michael P. Scanlon, one of the stockholders of the Washington team, says: "It all depends upon Del's luck at New Orleans whether he plays with Washington or New York. I knew several weeks ago that the big fellow had signed with McGraw, but the New York manager caught him at a time when he was in need of money, and he signed off-hand. If he makes good his losses at New Orleans I am most positive that he will return McGraw his advance money and report to Loftus."

Long Hockey Schedule.

Princeton's hockey team has a bright outlook, and a longer schedule than usual will be arranged. Efforts will be made to develop a fast team for the Christmas trip to Pittsburg, where some of the leading teams of western Pennsylvania and the Interscholastic league teams will be met. A training table will be started on December 10. A. Hazlehurst, '04, has been elected assistant manager of the team.

A Giant Pugilist.

There is a new fighting wonder in San Francisco who promises to become a champion some day. His name is Kelly, and they call him "Toothpick" for short, or, more properly, for "long," as he is nearly 7 feet tall and quite as heavy as big Ed Dunkhorst. Bill Naughton, the veteran fighting critic, is one of the coast authorities who thinks well of the giant.

Yale Leads.

Summarizing the standing of the eight legitimate leaders in eastern college foot ball, there is this order: First, Yale; second;, Princeton; third, Harvard; fourth, Brown; fifth, Pennsylvania; sixth, Amherst; seventh, Cornell, and eighth, Columbia.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

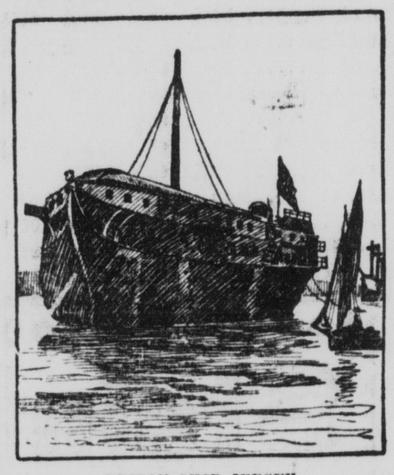
A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

British Prison Ship In Which Thousands of Patriots Perished.

The British prison ship Jersey of infamous memory, recently discovered at the bottom of Wallabout bay, Brooklyn navy yard, after lying buried and forgotten for nearly a century, was more deadly to the patriots of the Revolution than were the bullets of King George's soldiers.

While driving spiles upon which the new 16,000 ton battleship Connecticut is to be constructed at the Brooklyn yard the timbers of a sunken vessel were encountered. Investigation proved that they could be no other than the bones of the "old Jersey."

Several ships had been anchored in Wallabout bay by the British during the Revolution to serve as prison ships for the patriots. But of all these terrible prison ships the "old Jersey"—the "Hell," as she was called—was the most notorious. She was originally a sixty-four gun ship, but had become unfit for actual war service.



PRISON SHIP JERSEY.
[As it looked in Revolutionary days.]

In 1782, when Alexander Coffin was sent a prisoner on board the old Jersey, he found about 1,100 prisoners there, many of whom during the severity of the winter were without clothing to keep them warm. To escape freezing it was even necessary to walk the decks briskly or to stay below. Only by using great effort could they keep from freezing, and many of the prisoners, wasted by sickness, had not the strength for the effort. They escaped smallpox and yellow fever only to fall victims to the cold.

In his memoirs Mr. Coffin says the prisoners were fed on putrid beef and pork and worm eaten bread which had been condemned on the English warships. It was so full of vermin that they had to beat it against the hull before they could eat it. On the upper gun deck hogs were kept in pens for the use of the officers. When the hogs were fed bran, the prisoners would steal it from the trough.

It is estimated that 11,000 patriots of the Revolution perished in the Jersey alone. After the Revolution she was abandoned and finally sank. It is not likely that she will be raised.

Sources of Alcohol.

Some terribly potent liquors, it is said, can be distilled from the innocent looking banana and also from the milk of the cocoanut. The Japanese make a beverage from plums and from the flowers of the motherwort and the peach. The Chinese produce several qualities of spirit from rice and peas, all of them intoxicating, besides which they can make an alcoholic drink from mutton.

Same Old Thing.

Tom—Did you call on that pretty telephone girl?

Dick—Yes, but I guess there was another fellow there ahead of me, or maybe it was only force of habit.

Tom—How do you mean?

Dick—My card came back with the message: "Busy. Please call again."—Philadelphia Press.

Reassuring George.

She had been shopping, and he was naturally disturbed.

"I hope you didn't spend much money while you were downtown today," he remarked.

"Not a cent except car fare, George," she answered reassuringly. "I had everything charged."—Chicago Post.

NEW PAPAL DELEGATE.

Mgr. Martinelli's Successor Is an American Citizen.

Interest in the new apostolic delegate from Rome, Mgr. Diomede Falconio, is enhanced by the fact that the pope in selecting his representative to this country chose a citizen of the United States.

Mgr. Falconio came to this country in 1865 and in that year took out his first papers in Cattaraugus county, N. Y. Subsequently he completed his citizenship in time to vote for General Grant for president in 1872. He was a warm admirer of General Grant, and one of his most treasured possessions is an autograph photo presented to him by the great soldier president.

Mgr. Falconio is a native of Italy and in 1860, at the age of eighteen, joined the Franciscan order of friars minor. Five years later he was sent to the United States as a teacher of classics at St. Bonaventure's college, Allegany, N. Y. He was ordained a priest the following year.

He remained at the college for several years and was then sent to assist the bishop of Harbor Grace, in Newfoundland. In this diocese he labored as vicar general and administrator until 1870, when he went to New York city and spent some time doing parish work in St. Anthony's church. Later he went home to Italy and in 1892 was made archbishop of Acrenza.

Mgr. Falconio is a man of imposing figure, dignified demeanor, gentle heart and simple ways. He is thoroughly in sympathy with American ways and institutions. Churchmen are pleased with his elevation. He has an intimate knowledge of all the knotty ecclesiastical questions which Cardinal Martinelli left unsettled. He has been apostolic delegate to Canada since 1899.

Mgr. Falconio's selection is due largely to his long experience in this country and Canada and his perfect command of the English language. He is a brilliant scholar and an able diplomat and is therefore especially fitted for the Washington post.

A Simple System.

Teacher—In what year was the battle of Waterloo fought?

Pupil—I don't know.

Teacher—It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve apostles. Add half that number to them. That's eighteen. Multiply that by 100. That's 1,800. Take the twelve apostles again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's fifteen. Add what you've got. That's 1,815. That's the date. Quite simple, you see, to remember dates if you will only adopt my system.

Making Sure.

This hunting story comes from Scotland: When the beaters came out of the covert, one of the guns said to the keeper, "Have you got all your beaters out?"

"Aye," said the man, astonished.

"Are you sure? Have you counted them?"

"Counted them?" said the keeper. "Aye, they're all right."

"Then," said the shooter, with a sigh of some relief, "I have shot a roe."

CEREMONY OF OPENING THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

Monarchical Customs Still Observed In the Republic — Perquisites of Some Cabinet Members—M. Combes, the French Premier.

The opening of the French chamber of deputies, always interesting as a spectacle, attracted unusual attention at the recent reassembling by reason of the troubles in France during the past summer caused by the enforcement of what is called the associations law.

Premier Jean Louis Combes, who succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau as prime minister a few months ago, is held responsible for the enforcement of the law, which is aimed to bring certain orders of the Catholic church under government control or to disperse the congregations. In this Premier Combes has the support of the majority of the deputies, and the country at large by the last general election and by the resolutions recently adopted with an overwhelming majority of departmental legislatures is committed to the same policy.

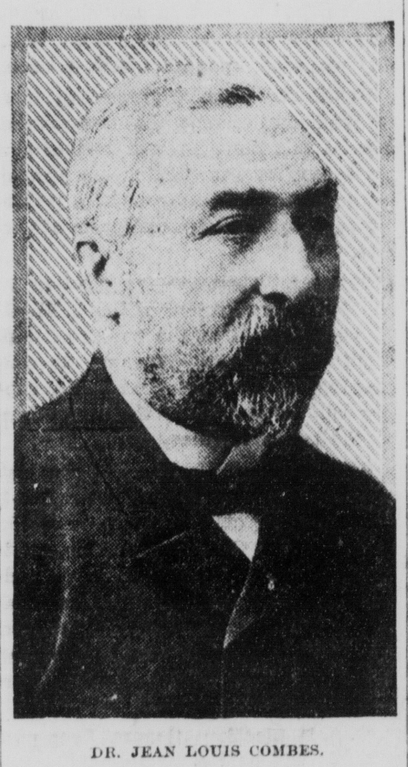
The opponents of the law have been clamoring for the return of M. Waldeck-Rosseau to the head of the cabinet, but it is unlikely that they will prove strong enough to cause the downfall of Premier Combes.

Dr. Combes is a man of wealth and great mental force. He has been active in politics since 1876 and is what is known as a progressive Republican in politics. He was formerly vice president of the French senate.

Before he entered politics Dr. Combes, who is sixty-two years of age, had amassed a fortune in business. When he made his first race for membership in the chamber he had a hard fight to secure his seat, but triumphed over his difficulties. Since then he has been a prominent figure in the chamber and the senate and has made many friends in both bodies.

A good deal of the pomp and ceremony which pertain to monarchies still clings to the opening of the French chamber of deputies, which corresponds to our house of representatives.

The president of the chamber lives in a mansion on the Quai d'Orsay, the grounds of which join those surrounding the chamber of deputies. Before the opening of each sitting he is escorted through the long salle des pas perdus (reserved for the use of members and journalists) by a detachment of infantry in command of a captain. The drums beat and the procession is preceded by a gorgeously attired usher, who announces, "Monsieur le president." Other ushers—or policemen in times of excitement—form a double line to keep the passage clear.



DR. JEAN LOUIS COMBES.

Thus escorted, the president mounts to his seat, high above the tribune from which the members speak, and immediately there is a rush of the members to be seated. After tapping his desk with a large paper knife or in case of much noise ringing a brass bell the president declares the sitting open, and the discussion of the day begins.

The ushers form a not unimportant part in the proceedings. Those inside the chamber wear evening dress, white ties and swords, and when in the heat of debate deputies become excited the ushers have frequently to interpose to prevent a bout of fisticuffs.

It is upon these occasions that the French assembly treats the world to some of those surprises, which are hard to understand, whereby a government majority of today is turned into a minority tomorrow.

But still the majority of the deputies are men who would be loath to lose their pay of 25 francs per day and the honors attached to the post of representative of the people. That is why the fear of dissolution often induces them to give a ministry a majority rather than provoke its overthrow and the crisis consequent thereon, with the added doubt of their being returned as members of the chamber.

M. Combes, besides being premier, is also minister of the interior. This post and that of finance are the most sought after, for, besides the importance of the posts, there is an ancient custom in connection with them. The day after the acceptance of either of these portfolios one of the ushers calls upon each minister and hands him an envelope containing 60,000 francs for moving expenses. If he retains the portfolio but a single day, he does not return the $12,000, nor is he expected to.

The history of our country is a record of the successes of poor boys who seemed to be hopelessly shut off from books, culture and education, except that of the most meager kind—from almost every opportunity for mental development. The youthful Franklins, Lincolns, Hamiltons, Garfields, Grants and Claytons—those who become presidents, lawyers, statesmen, soldiers, orators, merchants, educators, journalists, inventors, giants in every department of life—how they stand out from the pages of history, those poor boys, an inspiration for all time to those who are born to fight their way up to their own loaf!

The youth who is reared in a luxurious home, who from the moment of his birth is waited on by an army of servants, pampered and indulged by overfond parents and deprived of every incentive to develop himself mentally or physically, although commonly regarded as one to be envied, is more to be pitied than the poorest, most humbly born boy or girl in the land. Unless he is gifted with an unusual mind he is in danger of becoming a degenerate, a parasite, a creature who lives on the labor of others, whose powers ultimately atrophy from disuse.—Success.

Fred Dunlap Laid to Rest.

Fred Dunlap, famous before the Brotherhood war in 1890 as king of second basemen, was buried at Odd Fellows' cemetery from an undertaking establishment in Philadelphia. Dunlap had been in ill health for a long time and died last Monday at the Philadelphia hospital. He was 43 years of age, and when in his prime as a ball player was considered the star fielding second baseman of the country. During the eighties Dunlap played with the St. Louis, Detroit and Pittsburg clubs, as well as with the Phillies, for a short period. He acted as captain of the Pittsburg team.

Tigers Want a Game.

The Columbia Tigers would like to arrange a game with any 80 to 85 pound team for Saturday, December 13, the Thompson lane team preferred. Manager John Canavan, of the Tigers, would like to meet the manager of the Thompson lane team at the Imperial bowling alley to arrange for the game. The Tigers' lineup is as follows:

Michael P. Scanlon, one of the stockholders of the Washington team, says: "It all depends upon Del's luck at New Orleans whether he plays with Washington or New York. I knew several weeks ago that the big fellow had signed with McGraw, but the New York manager caught him at a time when he was in need of money, and he signed off-hand. If he makes good his losses at New Orleans I am most positive that he will return McGraw his advance money and report to Loftus."

Long Hockey Schedule.

Princeton's hockey team has a bright outlook, and a longer schedule than usual will be arranged. Efforts will be made to develop a fast team for the Christmas trip to Pittsburg, where some of the leading teams of western Pennsylvania and the Interscholastic league teams will be met. A training table will be started on December 10. A. Hazlehurst, '04, has been elected assistant manager of the team.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

British Prison Ship in Which Thousands of Patriots Perished.

The British prison ship Jersey of infamous memory, recently discovered at the bottom of Wallabout bay, Brooklyn navy yard, after lying buried and forgotten for nearly a century, was more deadly to the patriots of the Revolution than were the bullets of King George's soldiers.

While driving spiles upon which the new 16,000 ton battleship Connecticut is to be constructed at the Brooklyn yard the timbers of a sunken vessel were encountered. Investigation proved that they could be no other than the bones of the "old Jersey."

Several ships had been anchored in Wallabout bay by the British during the Revolution to serve as prison ships for the patriots. But of all these terrible prison ships the "old Jersey"—the "Hell," as she was called—was the most notorious. She was originally a sixty-four gun ship, but had become unfit for actual war service.

PRISON SHIP JERSEY.

In 1782, when Alexander Coffin was sent a prisoner on board the old Jersey, he found about 1,100 prisoners there, many of whom during the severity of the winter were without clothing to keep them warm. To escape freezing it was even necessary to walk the decks briskly or to stay below. Only by using great effort could they keep from freezing, and many of the prisoners, wasted by sickness, had not the strength for the effort. They escaped smallpox and yellow fever only to fall victims to the cold.

In his memoirs Mr. Coffin says the prisoners were fed on putrid beef and pork and worm eaten bread which had been condemned on the English warships. It was so full of vermin that they had to beat it against the hull before they could eat it. On the upper gun deck hogs were kept in pens for the use of the officers. When the hogs were fed bran, the prisoners would steal it from the trough.

It is estimated that 11,000 patriots of the Revolution perished in the Jersey alone. After the Revolution she was abandoned and finally sank. It is not likely that she will be raised.

NEW PAPAL DELEGATE.

Mgr. Martinelli's Successor Is an American Citizen.

Interest in the new apostolic delegate from Rome, Mgr. Diomede Falconio, is enhanced by the fact that the pope in selecting his representative to this country chose a citizen of the United States.

Mgr. Falconio came to this country in 1865 and in that year took out his first papers in Cattaraugus county, N. Y. Subsequently he completed his citizenship in time to vote for General Grant for president in 1872. He was a warm admirer of General Grant, and one of his most treasured possessions is an autograph photo presented to him by the great soldier president.

Mgr. Falconio is a native of Italy and in 1860, at the age of eighteen, joined the Franciscan order of friars minor. Five years later he was sent to the United States as a teacher of classics at St. Bonaventure's college, Allegany, N. Y. He was ordained a priest the following year.

He remained at the college for several years and was then sent to assist the bishop of Harbor Grace, in Newfoundland. In this diocese he labored as vicar general and administrator until 1870, when he went to New York city and spent some time doing parish work in St. Anthony's church. Later he went home to Italy and in 1892 was made archbishop of Acrenza.

Mgr. Falconio is a man of imposing figure, dignified demeanor, gentle heart and simple ways. He is thoroughly in sympathy with American ways and institutions. Churchmen are pleased with his elevation. He has an intimate knowledge of all the knotty ecclesiastical questions which Cardinal Martinelli left unsettled. He has been apostolic delegate to Canada since 1899.

Mgr. Falconio's selection is due largely to his long experience in this country and Canada and his perfect command of the English language. He is a brilliant scholar and an able diplomat and is therefore especially fitted for the Washington post.

A Simple System.

Teacher—In what year was the battle of Waterloo fought?

Pupil—I don't know.

Teacher—It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve apostles. Add half that number to them. That's eighteen. Multiply that by 100. That's 1,800. Take the twelve apostles again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's fifteen. Add what you've got. That's 1,815. That's the date. Quite simple, you see, to remember dates if you will only adopt my system.

CEREMONY OF OPENING THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

Monarchical Customs Still Observed In the Republic — Perquisites of Some Cabinet Members—M. Combes, the French Premier.

The opening of the French chamber of deputies, always interesting as a spectacle, attracted unusual attention at the recent reassembling by reason of the troubles in France during the past summer caused by the enforcement of what is called the associations law.

But still the majority of the deputies are men who would be loath to lose their pay of 25 francs per day and the honors attached to the post of representative of the people. Mgr. Falconio is a man of imposing figure, dignified demeanor, gentle heart and simple ways. He is thoroughly in sympathy with American ways and institutions. Churchmen are pleased with his elevation. He has an intimate knowledge of all the knotty ecclesiastical questions which Cardinal Martinelli left unsettled. He has been apostolic delegate to Canada since 1899.

Mgr. Falconio's selection is due largely to his long experience in this country and Canada and his perfect command of the English language. He is a brilliant scholar and an able diplomat and is therefore especially fitted for the Washington post.

A Simple System.

Teacher—In what year was the battle of Waterloo fought?

Pupil—I don't know.

Teacher—It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve apostles. Add half that number to them. That's eighteen. Multiply that by 100. That's 1,800. Take the twelve apostles again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's fifteen. Add what you've got. That's 1,815. That's the date. Quite simple, you see, to remember dates if you will only adopt my system.

Making Sure.

This hunting story comes from Scotland: When the beaters came out of the covert, one of the guns said to the keeper, "Have you got all your beaters out?"

"Aye," said the man, astonished.

"Are you sure? Have you counted them?"

"Counted them?" said the keeper. "Aye, they're all right."

"Then," said the shooter, with a sigh of some relief, "I have shot a roe."

We have been telling you about the GRIDDLE CAKE FLOURS. We have the pure Maple Syrup to go with them, BOTH SEASONABLE. Malt-Too Flake is of particular interest to the dealer.

FRENCH PARLIAMENT

CEREMONY OF OPENING THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

Monarchical Customs Still Observed In the Republic — Perquisites of Some Cabinet Members—M. Combes, the French Premier.

The opening of the French chamber of deputies, always interesting as a spectacle, attracted unusual attention at the recent reassembling by reason of the troubles in France during the past summer caused by the enforcement of what is called the associations law.

Premier Jean Louis Combes, who succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau as prime minister a few months ago, is held responsible for the enforcement of the law, which is aimed to bring certain orders of the Catholic church under government control or to disperse the congregations. In this Premier Combes has the support of the majority of the deputies, and the country at large by the last general election and by the resolutions recently adopted with an overwhelming majority of departmental legislatures is committed to the same policy.

The opponents of the law have been clamoring for the return of M. Waldeck-Rosseau to the head of the cabinet, but it is unlikely that they will prove strong enough to cause the downfall of Premier Combes.

Dr. Combes is a man of wealth and great mental force. He has been active in politics since 1876 and is what is known as a progressive Republican in politics. He was formerly vice president of the French senate.

Before he entered politics Dr. Combes, who is sixty-two years of age, had amassed a fortune in business. When he made his first race for membership in the chamber he had a hard fight to secure his seat, but triumphed over his difficulties. Since then he has been a prominent figure in the chamber and the senate and has made many friends in both bodies.

A good deal of the pomp and ceremony which pertain to monarchies still clings to the opening of the French chamber of deputies, which corresponds to our house of representatives.

The president of the chamber lives in a mansion on the Quai d'Orsay, the grounds of which join those surrounding the chamber of deputies. Before the opening of each sitting he is escorted through the long salle des pas perdus (reserved for the use of members and journalists) by a detachment of infantry in command of a captain. The drums beat and the procession is preceded by a gorgeously attired usher, who announces, "Monsieur le president." Other ushers—or policemen in times of excitement—form a double line to keep the passage clear.

Thus escorted, the president mounts to his seat, high above the tribune from which the members speak, and immediately there is a rush of the members to be seated. After tapping his desk with a large paper knife or in case of much noise ringing a brass bell the president declares the sitting open, and the discussion of the day begins.

The ushers form a not unimportant part in the proceedings. Those inside the chamber wear evening dress, white ties and swords, and when in the heat of debate deputies become excited the ushers have frequently to interpose to prevent a bout of fisticuffs.

It is upon these occasions that the French assembly treats the world to some of those surprises, which are hard to understand, whereby a government majority of today is turned into a minority tomorrow.

But still the majority of the deputies are men who would be loath to lose their pay of 25 francs per day and the honors attached to the post of representative of the people. That is why the fear of dissolution often induces them to give a ministry a majority rather than provoke its overthrow and the crisis consequent thereon, with the added doubt of their being returned as members of the chamber.

M. Combes, besides being premier, is also minister of the interior. This post and that of finance are the most sought after, for, besides the importance of the posts, there is an ancient custom in connection with them. The day after the acceptance of either of these portfolios one of the ushers calls upon each minister and hands him an envelope containing 60,000 francs for moving expenses. If he retains the portfolio but a single day, he does not return the $12,000, nor is he expected to.

Luxury as a Handicap.

The history of our country is a record of the successes of poor boys who seemed to be hopelessly shut off from books, culture and education, except that of the most meager kind—from almost every opportunity for mental development. The youthful Franklins, Lincolns, Hamiltons, Garfields, Grants and Claytons—those who become presidents, lawyers, statesmen, soldiers, orators, merchants, educators, journalists, inventors, giants in every department of life—how they stand out from the pages of history, those poor boys, an inspiration for all time to those who are born to fight their way up to their own loaf!

The youth who is reared in a luxurious home, who from the moment of his birth is waited on by an army of servants, pampered and indulged by overfond parents and deprived of every incentive to develop himself mentally or physically, although commonly regarded as one to be envied, is more to be pitied than the poorest, most humbly born boy or girl in the land. Unless he is gifted with an unusual mind he is in danger of becoming a degenerate, a parasite, a creature who lives on the labor of others, whose powers ultimately atrophy from disuse.—Success.

MRS. DAVIDSON'S PARTY

Pleasing Entertainment at a Broadway Home—Mayor Adds to the Enjoyment.

Mrs. Jennie Davidson, of Broadway, last evening entertained at dinner a party of ladies, a number being friends of her girlhood. The table was beautifully decorated with carnations and ferns. After ample justice to a most delightful menu the evening was spent in social chat and in relating reminiscences.

An innovation was the appearance of Mayor Davidson, son of the hostess, who paid his compliments to the guests and entertained them with several funny stories. Later George Davidson, who has just returned from a brief hunting trip, appeared and most cordially greeted those present. Mrs. Davidson sustained her well known reputation as a most genial hostess.

The Chautauqua Circle.

At the home of Mrs. Ira Eeels, on Thompson avenue, Chautauqua circle will convene this evening. At present the society is composed of 14 members. A larger enrollment is expected soon. Mrs. McKelvy will open the meeting with a brief parliamentary drill. Miss Sawyer will give a reading on Russia, followed by a quiz on three prominent Englishmen, Cobden, Stevenson and Russell. The officers of the society are: Mrs. W. R. Romey, president; Miss Agnes Jones, secretary; Mrs. Monroe Patterson, treasurer. The meetings occur every Friday evening at the home of one of the members.

In Honor of Ralph Marsh.

The party given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thompson, Fourth street, was a most pleasant affair. The occasion was the seventy-second birthday anniversary of Ralph Marsh, uncle of Mrs. Thompson, and the party was given in his honor. A large number of guests were present and the evening was passed with cards. The house was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns. Mr. Marsh has spent the greater portion of his life in East Liverpool, and is one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of the city.

Enjoyable Spelling Bee.

The spelling bee given last night by Stratton Circle No. 20, P. H. C., was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. W. Erwin Dunlap and Attorney W. E. Warren were selected as captains to divide the house. The contest between the two sides was spirited and finally narrowed down to Paige Myler, of Calcutta, on Mr. Dunlap's side, and D. F. White, of the East End, on Mr. Warren's side. The latter failed to spell the word "plurality" correctly and the first prize, a beautiful piece of cut glass, was given to Mr. Myler. Members were present from the East End, Calcutta, Chester and Wellsville circles.

A Delightful Affair.

Miss May Scraggs was the hostess at a card party at her home on Avondale street last evening. About 50 guests composed the party. Miss Maud Carr assisted. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent, the guests leaving at a late hour.

SOCIAL EVENTS

MRS. DAVIDSON'S PARTY

Pleasing Entertainment at a Broadway Home—Mayor Adds to the Enjoyment.

Mrs. Jennie Davidson, of Broadway, last evening entertained at dinner a party of ladies, a number being friends of her girlhood. The table was beautifully decorated with carnations and ferns. After ample justice to a most delightful menu the evening was spent in social chat and in relating reminiscences.

An innovation was the appearance of Mayor Davidson, son of the hostess, who paid his compliments to the guests and entertained them with several funny stories. Later George Davidson, who has just returned from a brief hunting trip, appeared and most cordially greeted those present. Mrs. Davidson sustained her well known reputation as a most genial hostess.

The Chautauqua Circle.

At the home of Mrs. Ira Eeels, on Thompson avenue, Chautauqua circle will convene this evening. At present the society is composed of 14 members. A larger enrollment is expected soon. Mrs. McKelvy will open the meeting with a brief parliamentary drill. Miss Sawyer will give a reading on Russia, followed by a quiz on three prominent Englishmen, Cobden, Stevenson and Russell. The officers of the society are: Mrs. W. R. Romey, president; Miss Agnes Jones, secretary; Mrs. Monroe Patterson, treasurer. The meetings occur every Friday evening at the home of one of the members.

In Honor of Ralph Marsh.

The party given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thompson, Fourth street, was a most pleasant affair. The occasion was the seventy-second birthday anniversary of Ralph Marsh, uncle of Mrs. Thompson, and the party was given in his honor. A large number of guests were present and the evening was passed with cards. The house was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns. Mr. Marsh has spent the greater portion of his life in East Liverpool, and is one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of the city.

Enjoyable Spelling Bee.

The spelling bee given last night by Stratton Circle No. 20, P. H. C., was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. W. Erwin Dunlap and Attorney W. E. Warren were selected as captains to divide the house. The contest between the two sides was spirited and finally narrowed down to Paige Myler, of Calcutta, on Mr. Dunlap's side, and D. F. White, of the East End, on Mr. Warren's side. The latter failed to spell the word "plurality" correctly and the first prize, a beautiful piece of cut glass, was given to Mr. Myler. Members were present from the East End, Calcutta, Chester and Wellsville circles.

A Delightful Affair.

Miss May Scraggs was the hostess at a card party at her home on Avondale street last evening. About 50 guests composed the party. Miss Maud Carr assisted. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent, the guests leaving at a late hour.

CIVILIZATION AND INSANITY

Dr. Eyman, of Massillon State Hospital, Says They Go Hand in Hand.

ACCOUNTS FOR INCREASE

In Lunacy in Ohio By Artificial Conditions of Life, Mental Strain And Intemperance in Eating And Drinking—Medical Care Better.

Massillon, December 5.—Supt. H. C. Eyman, of the Massillon State hospital, yesterday presented his annual report to the trustees of the institution and they in turn presented it to Governor Nash.

According to the report insanity is increasing out of proportion to the increase in the population of Ohio. The chief factors in the production of insanity are hereditary, dissipation in its various forms, including intemperance in eating and drinking, toxic agents, poverty, worry, anxiety and diseases.

"Civilization and insanity go hand in hand," says Dr. Eyman. "Not that civilization produces insanity per se, but the environments and conditions brought about by our somewhat artificial manner of living, due to the present civilization, induces cares and duties that force the brain of modern man to a very much greater strain than that of primitive man. Forced thus to new, complex and everchanging duties it has many issues thrown upon it, all different from the others, and requiring new lines of thought and consequent strain. This, in connection with the mad rush for existence, brings about brain fatigue, and frequently all the diseases consequent upon lack of nutrition to an unstable brain. It can be safely stated that the medical care of the insane is better now that at any former time in the history of the state. It must ever be borne in mind that moral and suggestive therapeutics have a fixed and permanent abiding place in the armamentarium of all our institutions of this kind. Employment, amusement and diversion are absolute essentials to the proper management of mental troubles."

Dr. Eyman is a national authority on insanity and for years was at the head of the State hospital at Cleveland, succeeding Dr. Richardson as director of the institution of which he is now the manager.

Under the heading of dissipation it is noticeable that Dr. Eyman makes reference to overeating as a factor in the production of insanity. It is also a matter of note that toxic agents are blamed with producing an increase. Under this heading are grouped the various stimulants and narcotics that are now fashionable, such as the derivatives of opium, cocaine and similar drugs. Dr. Eyman recommends the improvement of the surgeries of insane hospitals, indicating that in some cases the knife will bring relief from mental troubles. This, no doubt, is based upon the recent operations of an intercranial character, whereby pieces of the skull are removed to relieve congested arteries in the brain.

A VETERAN MINISTER

Rev. J. M. Bray, of Toronto, Born in 1807, Still Able to Preach Occasionally.

HONORED AND REVERED

A Circuit Rider in Early Years And Afterward Pastor at Yellow Creek And Salineville — Had His Horse Taught to Swim the Ohio.

Toronto, December 5.—Living near the outskirts of this town, in a pleasant, old-fashioned, but comfortable home, is a remarkeable man; not only on account of his great age, but also for his carreer of usefulness and the love lavished on him by the entire community. He is Rev. James M. Bray, Sr. He is not only locally known, but his fame covers the wide scope of the entire East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he is an honored and revered minister, having been in this conference 65 years.

Rev. Mr. Bray is hale and vigorous for one of his years, as he is now 95 years old. He takes a lively interest in all that transpires, and reads his Bible and the news of the day with avidity. Until recently he walked to and from this village, a distance of one and one-half miles. Last month he addressed an old folks' meeting in the First Methodist church, of Toronto, and his talk was logical, and his voice strong.

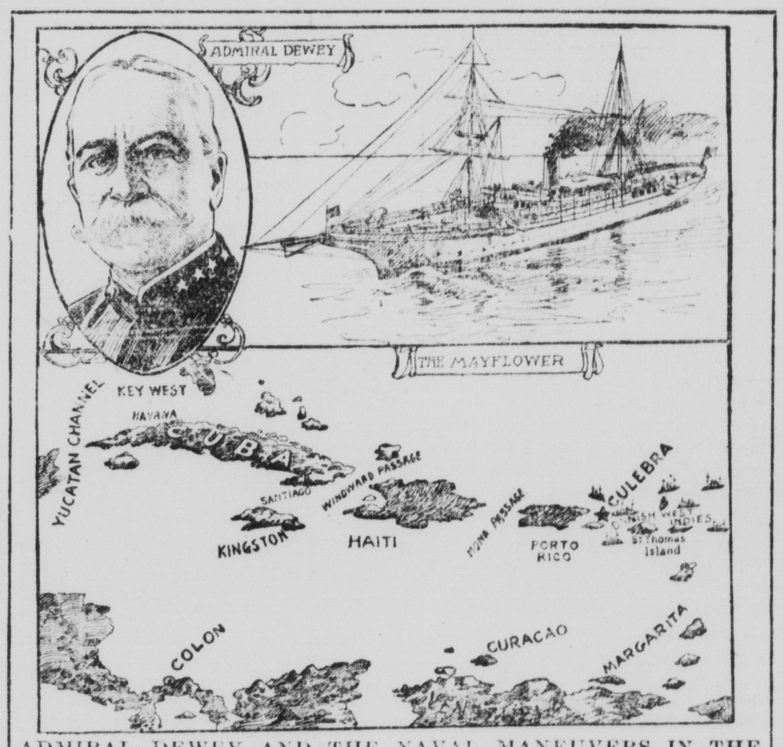
Rev. Mr. Bray was born December 24, 1807, at Hartford, Conn., and strange to say, the woman he was destined to wed and live with for 69 years was born at the same time. At the early age of 17 he was granted an exhorter's license, and at 20 was a fully ordained Methodist Episcopal minister. When 19 years of age, at Hartford, Conn., he married Eliza Matthews and they lived happily together until seven years ago when she died. No children were born to this union, but the couple adopted a son of the minister's brother. This son is now 63 years of age. His name is James M. Bray, Jr. He is a minister and is now here caring for his adopted father, having given up preaching temporarily to do so. Elizabeth Griffith, an aged woman who has been with the minister's family for 47 years, is his housekeeper.

When Rev. Mr. Bray was born he weighed just three pounds and his entire foot could be covered by the first joint of his mother's thumb. As a child and young man he was puny and delicate, and being a confirmed dyspeptic, it was never thought he would live long.

In 1837 he came to Toronto, and became a circuit rider, his first circuit beginning at Yellow Creek, nine miles north of here; thence to Salineville, Columbiana county; thence to Smithfield, Jefferson county; thence to Martin's Ferry, Belmont county; and back to Yellow Creek and through what is now Toronto. The distance was 80 miles. There were no railways then and few churches, so he preached mostly in school houses and churches, and lodged whereever night overtook him. He rode a horse which was trained and swam the Ohio river.

This strenuous open-air life doubtless strengthened a primarily weak constitution, and was the basis of his longevity. He founded and built many churches, among them Brady's chapel, on Island creek, near here. He frequently preached three and four times a day, and was noted as a successful evengelist. He was always noted for his fiery zeal and the fullness of his tones.

He has been superannuated 18 years, but actively preached until three years ago. He says he could yet address an audience for an hour when he got "fired up," and confidently expected to do so next summer.



ADMIRAL DEWEY AND THE NAVAL MANEUVERS IN THE CARIBBEAN.

Admiral Dewey is in command of the great United States fleet assembled for winter maneuvers in the Caribbean sea with headquarters at the naval base, Culebra island, near Porto Rico. His flagship is the converted yacht Mayflower.

USED A $20 BILL FOR SHOT

Farmer Puts Paper Money Into His Shot Gun for Safekeeping And Then Shoots a Rabbit.

Chagrin Falls, December 5.—Ben Barber, a prominent farmer of Orange township who is well known throughout Cuyahoga county, fearing burglars on account of the numerous recent depredations committed in the township and not being able to come to town to deposit his money, hid it in various places throughout the house. He rolled up a twenty dollar bill and placed it in his breech-loading shot gun.

Monday he went out hunting, forgot all about where he had deposited the money, shot a rabbit, and is still looking for the $20 bill.

MUST KEEP A RECORD

Under a Law Druggists Are Required to Register All Poisons Sold.

The Krause poison law goes into effect January 1. Druggists, under its provisions, are required to register all poison, to whom and for what purpose. This record is to be kept on file in the pharmacy for the period of five years, and the dispenser of the poison, whether the owner of the place or a clerk, is required to register his own signature on all sales made. Druggists are forbidden to sell poison to children or insane persons, and heavy penalties are provided for violation of this provision of the law.

The sale of morphine or cocaine is forbidden except on the prescription of a physician.

Bridge Destroyed by Fire.

Bedford, Pa., Dec. 5.—The long wooden bridge that crosses the Juniata river at the narrows on the Bedford & Chambersburg turnpike about a mile from here, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire is believed to have been the work of some persons who have been angered at the protracted litigation over the condemnation of the turnpike by the court and have taken the law into their own hands. A notice was posted for the keeper of the toll gate, telling him to move out as his house would be blown up soon. There is no clue to the incendiaries.

CONDITION CRITICAL.

Former Speaker Thomas B. Reed Is a Very Sick Man and May Die.

HE NOW HAS KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Better So Far as the Appendicitis Symptoms Are Concerned, but the Uraemic Features Give the Case a Much Graver Aspect.

Washington, Dec. 5.—At 11:30 o'clock last night the condition of ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who has been ill here since Tuesday evening, was reported to be critical. A few minutes before that time Dr. Gardiner, one of the attending physicians, handed the following bulletin to the press:

"At 10 o'clock Mr. Reed's condition is as follows: Temperature, 100 2-5; pulse, 88; respiration, 34. Mr. Reed suffered from some degree of uraemic coma during the afternoon, but his mind is again clear this evening. His appendicitical symptoms are rapidly subsiding, and his appendicitis is not an important factor in his present condition.

"W. C. GOODNOW, M. D.,
"F. A. GARDINER, M. D.,
"T. L. MACDONALD, M. D."

Not Disposed to Talk.

Dr. Gardiner made two visits to his patient during the evening, leaving the first time at half-past 8 o'clock. Later he and Drs. Goodnow and MacDonald came and remained at the hotel for nearly two hours, some of the time with Mrs. Reed and the remainder in consultation over the case. Dr. Goodnow, whose name appears to the bulletin, in addition to the other physicians, is a Philadelphian, and was called into the case as "expert consultant." He expected to leave for home again on the midnight train. Dr. Gardiner was not disposed to talk about the case last night nor to add anything to the bulletin, saying that it contained an exact statement of Mr. Reed's condition. He did say, however, that Mr. Reed's condition was critical, but that it was better than at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In some respects Mr. Reed, he added, was better than Wednesday night, and in some respects he was worse. He was better so far as the appendicitis symptoms were concerned, but the uraemic features gave the case a graver aspect. After issuing the bulletin the doctor said he was going home for the night and would leave his assistant, Dr. Bishop, who would remain with Mr. Reed during the night.

At 1:30 this morning Mr. Reed's condition was unchanged and all was was quiet in his rom.

He is Rev. James M. Bray, Sr. He is not only locally known, but his fame covers the wide scope of the entire East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he is an honored and revered minister, having been in this conference 65 years.

Rev. Mr. Bray is hale and vigorous for one of his years, as he is now 95 years old. He takes a lively interest in all that transpires, and reads his Bible and the news of the day with avidity. Until recently he walked to and from this village, a distance of one and one-half miles. Last month he addressed an old folks' meeting in the First Methodist church, of Toronto, and his talk was logical, and his voice strong.

Rev. Mr. Bray was born December 24, 1807, at Hartford, Conn., and strange to say, the woman he was destined to wed and live with for 69 years was born at the same time. At the early age of 17 he was granted an exhorter's license, and at 20 was a fully ordained Methodist Episcopal minister. When 19 years of age, at Hartford, Conn., he married Eliza Matthews and they lived happily together until seven years ago when she died. No children were born to this union, but the couple adopted a son of the minister's brother. This son is now 63 years of age. His name is James M. Bray, Jr. He is a minister and is now here caring for his adopted father, having given up preaching temporarily to do so. Elizabeth Griffith, an aged woman who has been with the minister's family for 47 years, is his housekeeper.

When Rev. Mr. Bray was born he weighed just three pounds and his entire foot could be covered by the first joint of his mother's thumb. As a child and young man he was puny and delicate, and being a confirmed dyspeptic, it was never thought he would live long.

In 1837 he came to Toronto, and became a circuit rider, his first circuit beginning at Yellow Creek, nine miles north of here; thence to Salineville, Columbiana county; thence to Smithfield, Jefferson county; thence to Martin's Ferry, Belmont county; and back to Yellow Creek and through what is now Toronto. The distance was 80 miles There were no railways then and few churches, so he preached mostly in school houses and churches, and lodged whereever night overtook him. He rode a horse which was trained and swam the Ohio river.

This strenuous open-air life doubtless strengthened a primarily weak constitution, and was the basis of his longevity. He founded and built many churches, among them Brady's chapel, on Island creek, near here. He frequently preached three and four times a day, and was noted as a successful evengelist. He was always noted for his fiery zeal and the fullness of his tones.

He has been superannuated 18 years, but actively preached until three years ago. He says he could yet address an audience for an hour when he got "fired up," and confidently expected to do so next summer.

USED A $20 BILL FOR SHOT

Farmer Puts Paper Money Into His Shot Gun for Safekeeping And Then Shoots a Rabbit.

Chagrin Falls, December 5.—Ben Barber, a prominent farmer of Orange township who is well known throughout Cuyahoga county, fearing burglars on account of the numerous recent depredations committed in the township and not being able to come to town to deposit his money, hid it in various places throughout the house. He rolled up a twenty dollar bill and placed it in his breech-loading shot gun.

Monday he went out hunting, forgot all about where he had deposited the money, shot a rabbit, and is still looking for the $20 bill.

Under a Law Druggists Are Required to Register All Poisons Sold.

The Krause poison law goes into effect January 1. Druggists, under its provisions, are required to register all poison, to whom and for what purpose. This record is to be kept on file in the pharmacy for the period of five years, and the dispenser of the poison, whether the owner of the place or a clerk, is required to register his own signature on all sales made. Druggists are forbidden to sell poison to children or insane persons, and heavy penalties are provided for violation of this provision of the law.

Bridge Destroyed by Fire.

Bedford, Pa., Dec. 5.—The long wooden bridge that crosses the Juniata river at the narrows on the Bedford & Chambersburg turnpike about a mile from here, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire is believed to have been the work of some persons who have been angered at the protracted litigation over the condemnation of the turnpike by the court and have taken the law into their own hands. A notice was posted for the keeper of the toll gate, telling him to move out as his house would be blown up soon. There is no clue to the incendiaries.

HE NOW HAS KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Better So Far as the Appendicitis Symptoms Are Concerned, but the Uraemic Features Give the Case a Much Graver Aspect.

Washington, Dec. 5.—At 11:30 o'clock last night the condition of ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who has been ill here since Tuesday evening, was reported to be critical. A few minutes before that time Dr. Gardiner, one of the attending physicians, handed the following bulletin to the press:

"At 10 o'clock Mr. Reed's condition is as follows: Temperature, 1?0 2-5; pulse, 88; respiration, 34. Mr. Reed suffered from some degree of uraemic coma during the afternoon, but his mind is again clear this evening. His appendicitical symptoms are rapidly subsiding, and his appendicitis is not an important factor in his present condition.

"W. C. GOODNOW, M. D.,
"F. A. GARDINER, M. D.,
"T. L. MACDONALD, M. D."

Not Disposed to Talk.

Dr. Gardiner made two visits to his patient during the evening, leaving the first time at half-past 8 o'clock. Later he and Drs. Goodnow and MacDonald came and remained at the hotel for nearly two hours, some of the time with Mrs. Reed and the remainder in consultation over the case. Dr. Goodnow, whose name appears to the bulletin, in addition to the other physicians, is a Philadelphian, and was called into the case as "expert consultant." He expected to leave for home again on the midnight train. Dr. Gardiner was not disposed to talk about the case last night nor to add anything to the bulletin, saying that it contained an exact statement of Mr. Reed's condition. He did say, however, that Mr. Reed's condition was critical, but that it was better than at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In some respects Mr. Reed, he added, was better than Wednesday night, and in some respects he was worse. He was better so far as the appendicitis symptoms were concerned, but the uraemic features gave the case a graver aspect. After issuing the bulletin the doctor said he was going home for the night and would leave his assistant, Dr. Bishop, who would remain with Mr. Reed during the night.

At 1:30 this morning Mr. Reed's condition was unchanged and all was was quiet in his rom.

Dr. Eyman, of Massillon State Hospital, Says They Go Hand in Hand.

In Lunacy in Ohio By Artificial Conditions of Life, Mental Strain And Intemperance in Eating And Drinking—Medical Care Better.

Massillon, December 5.—Supt. H. C. Eyman, of the Massillon State hospital, yesterday presented his annual report to the trustees of the institution and they in turn presented it to Governor Nash.

According to the report insanity is increasing out of proportion to the increase in the population of Ohio. The chief factors in the production of insanity are hereditary, dissipation in its various forms, including intemperance in eating and drinking, toxic agents, poverty, worry, anxiety and diseases.

"Civilization and insanity go hand in hand," says Dr. Eyman. "Not that civilization produces insanity per se, but the environments and conditions brought about by our somewhat artificial manner of living, due to the present civilization, induces cares and duties that force the brain of modern man to a very much greater strain than that of primitive man. Forced thus to new, complex and everchanging duties it has many issues thrown upon it, all different from the others, and requiring new lines of thought and consequent strain. This, in connection with the mad rush for existence, brings about brain fatigue, and frequently all the diseases consequent upon lack of nutrition to an unstable brain. It can be safely stated that the medical care of the insane is better now that at any former time in the history of the state. It must ever be borne in mind that moral and suggestive therapeutics have a fixed and permanent abiding place in the armamentarium of all our institutions of this kind. Employment, amusement and diversion are absolute essentials to the proper management of mental troubles."

Dr. Eyman is a national authority on insanity and for years was at the head of the State hospital at Cleveland, succeeding Dr. Richardson as director of the institution of which he is now the manager.

Under the heading of dissipation it is noticeable that Dr. Eyman makes reference to overeating as a factor in the production of insanity. It is also a matter of note that toxic agents are blamed with producing an increase. Under this heading are grouped the various stimulants and narcotics that are now fashionable, such as the derivatives of opium, cocaine and similar drugs. Dr. Eyman recommends the improvement of the surgeries of insane hospitals, indicating that in some cases the knife will bring relief from mental troubles. This, no doubt, is based upon the recent operations of an intercranial character, whereby pieces of the skull are removed to relieve congested arteries in the brain.

A VETERAN MINISTER

Rev. J. M. Bray, of Toronto, Born in 1807, Still Able to Preach Occasionally.

A Circuit Rider in Early Years And Afterward Pastor at Yellow Creek And Salineville — Had His Horse Taught to Swim the Ohio.

Toronto, December 5.—Living near the outskirts of this town, in a pleasant, old-fashioned, but comfortable home, is a remarkeable man; not only on account of his great age, but also for his carreer of usefulness and the love lavished on him by the entire community. SMOTHERED IN BEDS.

Fourteen Men Met Frightful Deaths in a Chicago Hotel Fire.

SMALLEST ROOMS EVER SEEN.

Coroner and Fire Chief Unite in Declaring that Building Was Veritable Trap—Structure Had Been Condemned by Building Inspector.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Fourteen men met death by suffocation yesterday morning in a fire which occurred at 6 o'clock in the Lincoln hotel, 176 Madison street. Thirteen of those who lost their lives were stifled while lying in their beds. One was taken from the building alive, but died in the ambulance on the way to the nearest hospital.

Coroner Traeger, after inspecting the building, united with Fire Chief Musham in declaring that the building was a veritable trap and never should have been used for hotel purposes. Chief Musham declared that there was such wide cracks in the floor that the smoke poured through the buildings in clouds, rendering escape extremely difficult for those on the upper floors.

There was no fire escape on the front of the building, although one was in process of construction. The scaffolding was up and from it dangled several ropes, down which a number of people slid to the pavement after all escape by the stairway had been cut off.

Dead and Injured.

List of the dead: I. C. Yocum, fire insurance agent, prominent in Davenport, Ia.; Samuel Yocum, son of I. C. Yocum, Davenport, Ia.; A. B. Coon, lawyer, Marengo, Ill.; F. L. Ewing, mail clerk, Marietta, O.; B. F. Boswell, Chicago; T. V. Slocum, machine dealer, Wauconda, Ill.; H. K. Woods, Lebanon, Ind.; Edward Toner, printer, Milwaukee; F. W. Corey, 29 years of age, railway postal clerk, Bucyrus, O.; Ward Lowe, railway postal clerk, Sechlerville, Wis.; M. M. Hardy, traveling salesman, Janesville, Wis.; C. P. Cowan, collector on the Wabash railroad, St. Louis; George B. Graves, compositor, Chicago; unidentified man, 5 feet 8 inches, 165 pounds, 45 years of age, thin brown hair and moustache.

The injured: J. S. Allison, Richland Center, Wis., cut about the hands; Edward Davenport, Chicago, injured internally by jumping from fourth story to roof of adjoining building; W. G. Thomas, Cedar Rapids, Ia., badly cut and burned; William M. Snyder, Loom City, Ia., bruised by falling down stairs; Mrs. June Shepperd, Chicago, back strained, arms and hands cut and bruised; Robert C. Hamilton, Lebanon Ind., hands cut; Cliff Ward, Battle Creek, Mich., cut about head and hands lacerated; Fred G. Baker, Nashville, Mich., feet burned; Irwin Westerland, Chicago, feet burned; Olof Oldorf, Chicago, hands lacerated.

The hotel was four stories in height and contained an unusual number of rooms for a hotel of its size. After the fire Chief Musham, of the fire department, declared that they were the smallest rooms he had ever seen in any building. Had there been fewer partitions, he declared, the chance of life for those sleeping on the upper floors of the hotel would have been greatly increased.

F. A. Smith, proprietor of the hotel, declared that there was, as nearly as he could judge without his books, about 125 people in the hotel.

Tried to Alarm Guests.

Night Clerk Weber discovered the smoke pouring through the halls shortly before 6 o'clock and did his best to alarm the guests, but the smoke was so dense and increased in volume so rapidly that he was unabe to arouse only a small number and was then compelled to grope his way to the street to avoid suffocation. The guests came pouring down the one stairway of the building in all stages of undress and several leaped from the windows of the second story to the sidewalk below and escaped without serious injury. A number of men, turned back by the smoke in hallways, which prevented them from finding the stairs, swung down on the ropes placed in front of the building by the workmen who were erecting the fire escape. The firemen, who arrived with great promptitude, saved many lives by carrying people down the ladders from the windows. The smoke on the inside of the building was so thick and so pungent that the firemen were unable to do more than take the people from the windows. Those who were not able to reach the windows in a few minutes after the fire broke out were suffocated. The fire in itself amounted to very little.

Building Had Been Condemned.

The building was some time ago condemned by the city building inspectors as unsafe for hotel purposes and the owners were three weeks ago ordered to place a stairway in the rear and also to build a fire escape on the front of the building. Beyond the preliminary work for the fire escape nothing had been done, however.

A jury was empaneled yesterday afternoon by Coroner Traeger to ascertain the causes of the disaster and to fix the guilt for negligence. After viewing the bodies of the victims of the fire, the jury went to the hotel, where an examination was made of the premises. The jurors were then dismissed, to meet for the inquest, which will begin Dec. 12. At the conclusion of the inspection Coroner Traeger said:

"The fire undoubtedly was caused by the explosion of an oil stove in the rear of the third floor. The building is very carelessly constructed, the fire escape is worthless, the rooms are outrageously small, and it is nothing short of a crime that such a building should be used as a housing place for human beings."

DISTRUSTS CASTRO'S PROMISES

England and Germany Will Almost Certainly Present Ultimatum in a Few Days.

Caracas, Dec. 5.—The British cruiser Indefatigable arrived yesterday at La Guaira. Three more British warships are expected.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The note of President Castro, of Venezuela, presented to the German minister at Caracas a week ago, is not satisfactory to the German government. It is deemed inadequate and as being probably designed to gain further time. Its partial acceptance of the German demands was coupled with conditions that were unacceptable.

The exchange of views with the British foreign office has resulted in a decision to proceed with the joint action. An ultimatum will almost certainly be presented in a few days. The phrasing of the note is the subject of present correspondence between the respective governments, whose action will not await the arrival in the West Indies of the cruisers Amazone, Nicobe and Ariadne, as Germany already has an ample force there. The departure of these cruisers has been indefinitely postponed.

A seemingly inspired article in the Cologne Gazete says that despite Germany's patience with Venezuela all hope has been abandoned in Berlin of a peaceful settlement, and that Venezuela has treated Germany in a manner almost insulting, because Venezuela published official communications without Germany's consent, coupled with improper comments.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—There is no ground for alarming stories which are being printed over the possibility of a collision between the United States and Germany and Great Britain over the coercive measures about to be applied by the two last mentioned powers for the purpose of collecting debts due German and British subjects.

The attitude of this administration with reference to just such a state of affairs as has arisen with reference to the Venezuelan government was stated by President Roosevelt in his first message to congress in which he said:

"The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of acquisition of territory by any non-American power."

RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached With Cuban Representatives, but Signing of Document Delayed.

Ha ana, Dec. 5.—The reciprocity negotiations began by Gen. Tasker Bliss and the Cuban Secretaries Zaldo and Montes is practically at a standstill, owing to the latter desiring to await the outcome of the bill introduced in the house of representatives providing for the appointment of a committee to draw up a bill defining the limits of the concessions which the Cuban government can offer foreign countries in negotiating reciprocity treaties. A committee of the house began the study of the question yesterday. It is known that Secretaries Zaldo and Montes have reached a satisactory agreement with Gen. Bliss, and that practically all that is left to be done is the signing of the agreement, but they do not wish to assume any responsibility, especially since the recent cabinet crisis, and in view of the apparent determination on the part of the nationalist party to oppose the government. The nationalists claim to control the house, and the bill referred to is a nationalist measure. In a discussion in the senate yesterday on the subject, Senor Sanguily said an agreement signed by President Palma and Secretaries Zaldo and Montes would not be binding, and that the matter must be brought before both houses of parliament. Congress, he said, should be informed regarding the particulars of the proposed treaty in order that it might intelligently discuss the changes in the tariff.

CADAVERS ARE VERY SCARCE.

Investigation Causes Prices of Bodies to Rise to Unheard of Figures.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5.—A scarcity of cadavers for legitimate use in the medical colleges here and in Louisville, Ky., is said to be impending, and prices of bodies have risen to unheard of figures. The scarcity is attributed to the Indianapolis investigation. It is said that ghouls in the employ of colleges all over the central states have become apprehensive for fear that a general investigation is to be made, and they are seeking other ways of earning a livelihood. It is said there has been no body snatching in Indiana since the investigation began.

F. M. Hollingsworth and William Gulliver, of Pike township, called at the county jail yesterday and asked Cantrell if any bodies had been disturbed in the Bethel cemetery. Cantrell said he was sorry to tell them that he thought every body buried in the place, previous to the beginning of the investigation, had been taken.

Great Rejoicing.

Ardmore, I. T., Dec. 5.—The proposition to combine Indian territory and Oklahoma as a single state, as provided for in the bill before congress, is generally favored throughout this section. There was great rejoicing in the towns when the senate committee on territories favorably reported the bill providing for single statehood. An organization will be perfected immediately to work for single statehood, which up to the present time has been considered impossible. Each town in the Indian territory is to send representatives to Washington to work for union with Oklahoma.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—E. B. Thomas was elected president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company and the Lehigh Valley Coal company, in place of Alfred Walter, resigned, at a special meeting of the board of directors of those companies held yesterday.

Ham Baked In Cider.

A ham baked in cider is delicious. Choose a good lean ham of about eight pounds. Wash thoroughly and over the fleshy side sprinkle a little chopped onion, a little clove and allspice, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a half teaspoonful of ground ginger. Make flour and water into a paste as thick as dough and cover the ham. Put skin side down in a roasting pan, fill up with cider, cook slowly for three hours, basting every ten minutes. When done, take off the paste and the rind. An hour before it is wanted for the table return to the baking pan, flesh side down, brush the fat portion with beaten egg, sprinkle generously with chopped parsley and breadcrumbs and let it heat through in the oven. A gravy can be made by boiling down the cider in which the ham was first roasted.

Hard to Believe.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Bliggins.

"What's the matter?" asked her husband in a startled tone as he turned around from his shaving glass.

"The idea of a grown man like you standing there for five minutes at a time admiring yourself!"

"I'm not admiring myself. My feelings are those of astonishment, not admiration. I can't realize that I'm the same person who years ago was called 'precious pet' and held on people's knees and kissed by the neighbors. It's an awful thought."—Washington Star.

Yes, Indeed!

When a man gets tired out and ill, he goes fishing, returning shortly with three wall eyed pike, restored health and a blister on his nose. When a woman feels that way, she hangs around the house and cries if anybody looks at her. It must be lovely to be a man.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fin' a day for yer deeing and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind., "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventative and cure for croup." RIDING TO HOUNDS

FAIR DEVOTEES OF THIS DANGEROUS AND EXCITING SPORT.

Women Who Rival Men In Skillful and Daring Horsemanship—Jump Five Foot Fences In Pursuit of Reynard—A Perilous Pastime.

This is the season when those lucky folks who have the inclination as well as time and money mount their thoroughbred hunters and pursue sly Sir Reynard over hill and dale to the music of beating hoofs and baying hounds.

Sometimes the pursuit of the fox is diversified by a run after an aniseed bag dragged over the ground as a scent for the dogs to follow. But it amounts to pretty much the same thing in the end, for the bag is dragged over a course fully as difficult as the one likely to be chosen by the bushy tailed fox, and the glory of "first in at the death" is as eagerly competed for.

From now until Christmas those who dwell near the haunts of the Meadow Brook hunt on Long Island and the Radnor and Rose Tree hunts, near Philadelphia, may hear the baying hounds on any morning and if they choose to go afield may behold the gay company of riders in all their fine array.

These three hunt clubs, organized exclusively for the sport of fox chasing on horseback, are the most famous of the kind in America.

The Meadow Brook hunt bears the distinction of having President Roosevelt as a fellow member. The 300 odd millionaires who compose this club also take pride in the knowledge that two women among them are acknowledged to be the leading horsewomen in America. They are Mrs. James L. Kernochan and Mrs. Emily Ladenburg.

Mrs. Kernochan is perhaps the better known in this country, where she does all her hunting, mostly around New York, where she began making her reputation as a fearless horsewoman about five or six years ago. As Miss Eloise Stevenson she cared not one jot or tittle for fox hunting, but shortly after her marriage she cultivated a fondness for it, and now she is one of the regulars at every club hunt. She has not missed a half dozen meets in the years she has been following the hounds, and the Meadow Brook averages three a week.

Fellow huntsmen say Mrs. Kernochan is absolutely without fear. She "rides straight," as they say. Fences or walls have no terrors for her nor do they cause her to draw rein, but many men balk at such obstacles and prefer to go around rather than risk their precious necks in a jump. Mrs. Kernochan has suffered several falls, but has always escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Ladenburg, like Mrs. Kernochan, is young and fair. She is the widow of Adolph Ladenburg and has a fortune of about $7,000,000. She spends a good bit of her income in hunting, not only on Long Island, but in Europe, at Newport and at Aiken, N. C. Unlike her fair rival, she grew up in the saddle. As a mere girl she hunted with the Rockaway hounds, of which her brother, Eben Stevens, was at one time master.

Among other accomplished and fearless women hunters are Miss Randolph, daughter of William C. Whitney's second wife, who was mortally injured while following the hounds at Aiken, S. C.; Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. H. Van R. Kennedy, Miss May Bird, Miss Maud Livingston and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, all constant attendants at the meets.

Among the men the palm is generally accorded to P. F. Collier. He is the oldest active huntsman by all odds. Most men stop following the hounds when they reach middle age, but Mr. Collier at seventy odd years attends the meets with as clocklike regularity as he did in his younger days. Whenever the bugle sounds the start he is pretty sure to be on hand, and before the hunt is over he usually manages to run away from nearly all the young bloods who endeavor to keep up with him.

The Vanderbilts and Goulds have not until recently taken up this dangerous and exciting sport. Reginald and Alfred Vanderbilt, like George Gould, are well known as polo players and from this have graduated into huntsmen.

George Gould has planned to build a house on the Hempstead plains, and as this is in the heart of the fox hunting country on Long Island he may be expected to join his fellow millionaires in the pursuit of the fox and risk his neck for the sake of the coveted "brush."

SMOTHERED IN BEDS.

Fourteen Men Met Frightful Deaths in a Chicago Hotel Fire.

SMALLEST ROOMS EVER SEEN.

Coroner and Fire Chief Unite in Declaring that Building Was Veritable Trap---Structure Had Been Condemned by Building Inspector.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Fourteen men met death by suffocation yesterday morning in a fire which occurred at 6 o'clock in the Lincoln hotel, 176 Madison street. Thirteen of those who lost their lives were stifled while lying in their beds. One was taken from the building alive, but died in the ambulance on the way to the nearest hospital.

Coroner Traeger, after inspecting the building, united with Fire Chief Musham in declaring that the building was a veritable trap and never should have been used for hotel purposes. Chief Musham declared that there was such wide cracks in the floor that the smoke poured through the buildings in clouds, rendering escape extremely difficult for those on the upper floors.

There was no fire escape on the front of the building, although one was in process of construction. The scaffolding was up and from it dangled several ropes, down which a number of people slid to the pavement after all escape by the stairway had been cut off.

Dead and Injured.

List of the dead: I. C. Yocum, fire insurance agent, prominent in Davenport, Ia.; Samuel Yocum, son of I. C. Yocum, Davenport, Ia.; A. B. Coon, lawyer, Marengo, Ill.; F. L. Ewing, mail clerk, Marietta, O.; B. F. Boswell, Chicago; T. V. Slocum, machine dealer, Wauconda, Ill.; H. K. Woods, Lebanon, Ind.; Edward Toner, printer, Milwaukee; F. W. Corey, 29 years of age, railway postal clerk, Bucyrus, O.; Ward Lowe, railway postal clerk, Sechlerville, Wis.; M. M. Hardy, traveling salesman, Janesville, Wis.; C. P. Cowan, collector on the Wabash railroad, St. Louis; George B. Graves, compositor, Chicago; unidentified man, 5 feet 8 inches, 165 pounds, 45 years of age, thin brown hair and moustache.

The injured: J. S. Allison, Richland Center, Wis., cut about the hands; Edward Davenport, Chicago, injured internally by jumping from fourth story to roof of adjoining building; W. G. Thomas, Cedar Rapids, Ia., badly cut and burned; William M. Snyder, Loom City, Ia., bruised by falling down stairs; Mrs. June Shepperd, Chicago, back strained, arms and hands cut and bruised; Robert C. Hamilton, Lebanon Ind., hands cut; Cliff Ward, Battle Creek, Mich., cut about head and hands lacerated; Fred G. Baker, Nashville, Mich., feet burned; Irwin Westerland, Chicago, feet burned; Olof Oldorf, Chicago, hands lacerated.

The hotel was four stories in height and contained an unusual number of rooms for a hotel of its size. After the fire Chief Musham, of the fire department, declared that they were the smallest rooms he had ever seen in any building. Had there been fewer partitions, he declared, the chance of life for those sleeping on the upper floors of the hotel would have been greatly increased.

F. A. Smith, proprietor of the hotel, declared that there was, as nearly as he could judge without his books, about 125 people in the hotel.

Tried to Alarm Guests.

Night Clerk Weber discovered the smoke pouring through the halls shortly before 6 o'clock and did his best to alarm the guests, but the smoke was so dense and increased in volume so rapidly that he was unabe to arouse only a small number and was then compelled to grope his way to the street to avoid suffocation. The guests came pouring down the one stairway of the building in all stages of undress and several leaped from the windows of the second story to the sidewalk below and escaped without serious injury. A number of men, turned back by the smoke in hallways, which prevented them from finding the stairs, swung down on the ropes placed in front of the building by the workmen who were erecting the fire escape. The firemen, who arrived with great promptitude, saved many lives by carrying people down the ladders from the windows. The smoke on the inside of the building was so thick and so pungent that the firemen were unable to do more than take the people from the windows. Those who were not able to reach the windows in a few minutes after the fire broke out were suffocated. The fire in itself amounted to very little.

Building Had Been Condemned.

The building was some time ago condemned by the city building inspectors as unsafe for hotel purposes and the owners were three weeks ago ordered to place a stairway in the rear and also to build a fire escape on the front of the building. Beyond the preliminary work for the fire escape nothing had been done, however.

A jury was empaneled yesterday afternoon by Coroner Traeger to ascertain the causes of the disaster and to fix the guilt for negligence. After viewing the bodies of the victims of the fire, the jury went to the hotel, where an examination was made of the premises. The jurors were then dismissed, to meet for the inquest, which will begin Dec. 12. At the conclusion of the inspection Coroner Traeger said:

"The fire undoubtedly was caused by the explosion of an oil stove in the rear of the third floor. The building is very carelessly constructed, the fire escape is worthless, the rooms are outrageously small, and it is nothing short of a crime that such a building should be used as a housing place for human beings."

DISTRUSTS CASTRO'S PROMISES

England and Germany Will Almost Certainly Present Ultimatum in a Few Days.

Caracas, Dec. 5.—The British cruiser Indefatigable arrived yesterday at La Guaira. Three more British warships are expected.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The note of President Castro, of Venezuela, presented to the German minister at Caracas a week ago, is not satisfactory to the German government. It is deemed inadequate and as being probably designed to gain further time. Its partial acceptance of the German demands was coupled with conditions that were unacceptable.

The exchange of views with the British foreign office has resulted in a decision to proceed with the joint action. An ultimatum will almost certainly be presented in a few days. The phrasing of the note is the subject of present correspondence between the respective governments, whose action will not await the arrival in the West Indies of the cruisers Amazone, Nicobe and Ariadne, as Germany already has an ample force there. The departure of these cruisers has been indefinitely postponed.

A seemingly inspired article in the Cologne Gazete says that despite Germany's patience with Venezuela all hope has been abandoned in Berlin of a peaceful settlement, and that Venezuela has treated Germany in a manner almost insulting, because Venezuela published official communications without Germany's consent, coupled with improper comments.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—There is no ground for alarming stories which are being printed over the possibility of a collision between the United States and Germany and Great Britain over the coercive measures about to be applied by the two last mentioned powers for the purpose of collecting debts due German and British subjects.

The attitude of this administration with reference to just such a state of affairs as has arisen with reference to the Venezuelan government was stated by President Roosevelt in his first message to congress in which he said:

"The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of acquisition of territory by any non-American power."

RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached With Cuban Representatives, but Signing of Document Delayed.

Ha ana, Dec. 5.—The reciprocity negotiations began by Gen. Tasker Bliss and the Cuban Secretaries Zaldo and Montes is practically at a standstill, owing to the latter desiring to await the outcome of the bill introduced in the house of representatives providing for the appointment of a committee to draw up a bill defining the limits of the concessions which the Cuban government can offer foreign countries in negotiating reciprocity treaties. A committee of the house began the study of the question yesterday. It is known that Secretaries Zaldo and Montes have reached a satisactory agreement with Gen. Bliss, and that practically all that is left to be done is the signing of the agreement, but they do not wish to assume any responsibility, especially since the recent cabinet crisis, and in view of the apparent determination on the part of the nationalist party to oppose the government. The nationalists claim to control the house, and the bill referred to is a nationalist measure. In a discussion in the senate yesterday on the subject, Senor Sanguily said an agreement signed by President Palma and Secretaries Zaldo and Montes would not be binding, and that the matter must be brought before both houses of parliament. Congress, he said, should be informed regarding the particulars of the proposed treaty in order that it might intelligently discuss the changes in the tariff.

CADAVERS ARE VERY SCARCE.

Investigation Causes Prices of Bodies to Rise to Unheard of Figures.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5.—A scarcity of cadavers for legitimate use in the medical colleges here and in Louisville, Ky., is said to be impending, and prices of bodies have risen to unheard of figures. The scarcity is attributed to the Indianapolis investigation. It is said that ghouls in the employ of colleges all over the central states have become apprehensive for fear that a general investigation is to be made, and they are seeking other ways of earning a livelihood. It is said there has been no body snatching in Indiana since the investigation began.

F. M. Hollingsworth and William Gulliver, of Pike township, called at the county jail yesterday and asked Cantrell if any bodies had been disturbed in the Bethel cemetery. Cantrell said he was sorry to tell them that he thought every body buried in the place previous to the beginning of the investigation, had been taken.

Great Rejoicing.

Ardmore, I. T., Dec. 5.—The proposition to combine Indian territory and Oklahoma as a single state, as provided for in the bill before congress, is generally favored throughout this section. There was great rejoicing in the towns when the senate committee on territories favorably reported the bill providing for single statehood. An organization will be perfected immediately to work for single statehood, which up to the present time has been considered impossible. Each town in the Indian territory is to send representatives to Washington to work for union with Oklahoma.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—E. B. Thomas was elected president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company and the Lehigh Valley Coal company, in place of Alfred Walter, resigned, at a special meeting of the board of directors of those companies held yesterday.

Fourteen Men Met Frightful Deaths in a Chicago Hotel Fire.

The injured: J. S. Allison, Richland Center, Wis., cut about the hands; Edward Davenport, Chicago, injured internally by jumping from fourth story to roof of adjoining building; W. G. Tried to Alarm Guests.

Night Clerk Weber discovered the smoke pouring through the halls shortly before 6 o'clock and did his best to alarm the guests, but the smoke was so dense and increased in volume so rapidly that he was unabe to arouse only a small number and was then compelled to grope his way to the street to avoid suffocation. The firemen, who arrived with great promptitude, saved many lives by carrying people down the ladders from the windows. The smoke on the inside of the building was so thick and so pungent that the firemen were unable to do more than take the people from the windows. Those who were not able to reach the windows in a few minutes after the fire broke out were suffocated. The fire in itself amounted to very little.

Building Had Been Condemned.

The building was some time ago condemned by the city building inspectors as unsafe for hotel purposes and the owners were three weeks ago ordered to place a stairway in the rear and also to build a fire escape on the front of the building. Beyond the preliminary work for the fire escape nothing had been done, however.

A jury was empaneled yesterday afternoon by Coroner Traeger to ascertain the causes of the disaster and to fix the guilt for negligence. After viewing the bodies of the victims of the fire, the jury went to the hotel, where an examination was made of the premises. The jurors were then dismissed, to meet for the inquest, which will begin Dec. 12. At the conclusion of the inspection Coroner Traeger said:

"The fire undoubtedly was caused by the explosion of an oil stove in the rear of the third floor. The building is very carelessly constructed, the fire escape is worthless, the rooms are outrageously small, and it is nothing short of a crime that such a building should be used as a housing place for human beings."

DISTRUSTS CASTRO'S PROMISES

England and Germany Will Almost Certainly Present Ultimatum in a Few Days.

Caracas, Dec. 5.—The British cruiser Indefatigable arrived yesterday at La Guaira. Three more British warships are expected.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The note of President Castro, of Venezuela, presented to the German minister at Caracas a week ago, is not satisfactory to the German government. It is deemed inadequate and as being probably designed to gain further time. Its partial acceptance of the German demands was coupled with conditions that were unacceptable.

The exchange of views with the British foreign office has resulted in a decision to proceed with the joint action. An ultimatum will almost certainly be presented in a few days. The phrasing of the note is the subject of present correspondence between the respective governments, whose action will not await the arrival in the West Indies of the cruisers Amazone, Nicobe and Ariadne, as Germany already has an ample force there. The departure of these cruisers has been indefinitely postponed.

A seemingly inspired article in the Cologne Gazete says that despite Germany's patience with Venezuela all hope has been abandoned in Berlin of a peaceful settlement, and that Venezuela has treated Germany in a manner almost insulting, because Venezuela published official communications without Germany's consent, coupled with improper comments.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—There is no ground for alarming stories which are being printed over the possibility of a collision between the United States and Germany and Great Britain over the coercive measures about to be applied by the two last mentioned powers for the purpose of collecting debts due German and British subjects.

The attitude of this administration with reference to just such a state of affairs as has arisen with reference to the Venezuelan government was stated by President Roosevelt in his first message to congress in which he said:

"The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of acquisition of territory by any non-American power."

RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached With Cuban Representatives, but Signing of Document Delayed.

Ha ana, Dec. 5.—The reciprocity negotiations began by Gen. Tasker Bliss and the Cuban Secretaries Zaldo and Montes is practically at a standstill, owing to the latter desiring to await the outcome of the bill introduced in the house of representatives providing for the appointment of a committee to draw up a bill defining the limits of the concessions which the Cuban government can offer foreign countries in negotiating reciprocity treaties. A committee of the house began the study of the question yesterday. It is known that Secretaries Zaldo and Montes have reached a satisactory agreement with Gen. Bliss, and that practically all that is left to be done is the signing of the agreement, but they do not wish to assume any responsibility, especially since the recent cabinet crisis, and in view of the apparent determination on the part of the nationalist party to oppose the government. The nationalists claim to control the house, and the bill referred to is a nationalist measure. In a discussion in the senate yesterday on the subject, Senor Sanguily said an agreement signed by President Palma and Secretaries Zaldo and Montes would not be binding, and that the matter must be brought before both houses of parliament. Congress, he said, should be informed regarding the particulars of the proposed treaty in order that it might intelligently discuss the changes in the tariff.

CADAVERS ARE VERY SCARCE.

Investigation Causes Prices of Bodies to Rise to Unheard of Figures.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5.—A scarcity of cadavers for legitimate use in the medical colleges here and in Louisville, Ky., is said to be impending, and prices of bodies have risen to unheard of figures. The scarcity is attributed to the Indianapolis investigation. It is said that ghouls in the employ of colleges all over the central states have become apprehensive for fear that a general investigation is to be made, and they are seeking other ways of earning a livelihood. It is said there has been no body snatching in Indiana since the investigation began.

F. M. Hollingsworth and William Gulliver, of Pike township, called at the county jail yesterday and asked Cantrell if any bodies had been disturbed in the Bethel cemetery. Cantrell said he was sorry to tell them that he thought every body buried in the place, previous to the beginning of the investigation, had been taken.

Great Rejoicing.

Ardmore, I. T., Dec. 5.—The proposition to combine Indian territory and Oklahoma as a single state, as provided for in the bill before congress, is generally favored throughout this section. There was great rejoicing in the towns when the senate committee on territories favorably reported the bill providing for single statehood. An organization will be perfected immediately to work for single statehood, which up to the present time has been considered impossible. Each town in the Indian territory is to send representatives to Washington to work for union with Oklahoma.

New Lehigh President.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—E. B. Thomas was elected president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company and the Lehigh Valley Coal company, in place of Alfred Walter, resigned, at a special meeting of the board of directors of those companies held yesterday.

Ham Baked In Cider.

A ham baked in cider is delicious. Choose a good lean ham of about eight pounds. Wash thoroughly and over the fleshy side sprinkle a little chopped onion, a little clove and allspice, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a half teaspoonful of ground ginger. Make flour and water into a paste as thick as dough and cover the ham. Put skin side down in a roasting pan, fill up with cider, cook slowly for three hours, basting every ten minutes. When done, take off the paste and the rind. An hour before it is wanted for the table return to the baking pan, flesh side down, brush the fat portion with beaten egg, sprinkle generously with chopped parsley and breadcrumbs and let it heat through in the oven. A gravy can be made by boiling down the cider in which the ham was first roasted.

Hard to Believe.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Bliggins.

"What's the matter?" asked her husband in a startled tone as he turned around from his shaving glass.

"The idea of a grown man like you standing there for five minutes at a time admiring yourself!"

"I'm not admiring myself. My feelings are those of astonishment, not admiration. I can't realize that I'm the same person who years ago was called 'precious pet' and held on people's knees and kissed by the neighbors. It's an awful thought."—Washington Star.

Yes, Indeed!

When a man gets tired out and ill, he goes fishing, returning shortly with three wall eyed pike, restored health and a blister on his nose. When a woman feels that way, she hangs around the house and cries if anybody looks at her. It must be lovely to be a man.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fin' a day for yer deeing and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind., "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventative and cure for croup." RIDING TO HOUNDS

FAIR DEVOTEES OF THIS DANGEROUS AND EXCITING SPORT.

This is the season when those lucky folks who have the inclination as well as time and money mount their thoroughbred hunters and pursue sly Sir Reynard over hill and dale to the music of beating hoofs and baying hounds.

Sometimes the pursuit of the fox is diversified by a run after an aniseed bag dragged over the ground as a scent for the dogs to follow. But it amounts to pretty much the same thing in the end, for the bag is dragged over a course fully as difficult as the one likely to be chosen by the bushy tailed fox, and the glory of "first in at the death" is as eagerly competed for.

From now until Christmas those who dwell near the haunts of the Meadow Brook hunt on Long Island and the Radnor and Rose Tree hunts, near Philadelphia, may hear the baying hounds on any morning and if they choose to go afield may behold the gay company of riders in all their fine array.

These three hunt clubs, organized exclusively for the sport of fox chasing on horseback, are the most famous of the kind in America.

The Meadow Brook hunt bears the distinction of having President Roosevelt as a fellow member. The 300 odd millionaires who compose this club also take pride in the knowledge that two women among them are acknowledged to be the leading horsewomen in America. They are Mrs. James L. Kernochan and Mrs. Emily Ladenburg.

Mrs. Kernochan is perhaps the better known in this country, where she does all her hunting, mostly around New York, where she began making her reputation as a fearless horsewoman about five or six years ago. As Miss Eloise Stevenson she cared not one jot or tittle for fox hunting, but shortly after her marriage she cultivated a fondness for it, and now she is one of the regulars at every club hunt. She has not missed a half dozen meets in the years she has been following the hounds, and the Meadow Brook averages three a week.

Fellow huntsmen say Mrs. Kernochan is absolutely without fear. She "rides straight," as they say. Fences or walls have no terrors for her nor do they cause her to draw rein, but many men balk at such obstacles and prefer to go around rather than risk their precious necks in a jump. Mrs. Kernochan has suffered several falls, but has always escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Ladenburg, like Mrs. Kernochan, is young and fair. She is the widow of Adolph Ladenburg and has a fortune of about $7,000,000. She spends a good bit of her income in hunting, not only on Long Island, but in Europe, at Newport and at Aiken, N. C. Unlike her fair rival, she grew up in the saddle. As a mere girl she hunted with the Rockaway hounds, of which her brother, Eben Stevens, was at one time master.

Among other accomplished and fearless women hunters are Miss Randolph, daughter of William C. Whitney's second wife, who was mortally injured while following the hounds at Aiken, S. C.; Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. H. Van R. Kennedy, Miss May Bird, Miss Maud Livingston and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, all constant attendants at the meets.

Among the men the palm is generally accorded to P. F. Collier. He is the oldest active huntsman by all odds. Most men stop following the hounds when they reach middle age, but Mr. Collier at seventy odd years attends the meets with as clocklike regularity as he did in his younger days. Whenever the bugle sounds the start he is pretty sure to be on hand, and before the hunt is over he usually manages to run away from nearly all the young bloods who endeavor to keep up with him.

The Vanderbilts and Goulds have not until recently taken up this dangerous and exciting sport. Reginald and Alfred Vanderbilt, like George Gould, are well known as polo players and from this have graduated into huntsmen.

George Gould has planned to build a house on the Hempstead plains, and as this is in the heart of the fox hunting country on Long Island he may be expected to join his fellow millionaires in the pursuit of the fox and risk his neck for the sake of the coveted "brush."

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,

XII.—The Geographical Story of Trees.

THE earliest terrestrial plants were doubtless very lowly creeping things, some of them probably not unlike the insignificant liverworts that adorn the damp and shady corners of our northern world today. We have doubtless all observed these beautiful though less appreciated little things, creeping, ribbonlike structures, covering the ground in woods or spread over the whole moist surface of a perpendicularly rocky wall hard by some spring or stream. The earliest terrestrial plants, so far as can be guessed, were not unlike some of these. We may imagine them covering all the ground in those faroff days, struggling constantly among themselves for room. For plants, as for some other things, there is but one direction in which room increases as we go. That direction is upward. And so our terrestrial plants no doubt soon learned to push their branches upward, the better to secure the light and air. But the relief is only temporary. Once the upward habit is indulged forthwith ensues new rivalry. Crowding becomes as intolerable as before. Every rising plant tries hard to overtop its fellows. At first the stems lean one upon another and so remain erect. Anon the stiffer plants derive advantage, and those with forming woody tissues able to stand alone far outreach and overshadow all the rest. These changes, of course, no one has seen, but in some such way we may assume the plants of ancient times attained at length arboreal habit. For such accomplishments there was no lack of time, as the geological record shows. For ages the earth was filled with vegetation before ever a tree or a treelike plant appeared.

In order to appreciate properly what geology has to tell about the history of trees on the planet, it will be necessary for us to understand the manner in which students of the earth's history divide past terrestrial time. The recorded history of the earth, recorded by the succession of stratified rocks, names several definite ages or periods of past time, each represented by a distinct system of the stony strata. If we call these time divisions each by the name of its rock system, we may have, beginning with the oldest, the archean, laurentian, cambrian, silurian, devonian, carboniferous, triassic, jurassic, cretaceous, tertiary and recent. Let this be for us simply a time card to which we may refer what is known of the history of trees. It must be borne in mind, however, that these names describe periods by no means of equal length. The first three or four represent perhaps greater length of time than all the rest put together. Any one of them, however, is far enough away from us in time, for the duration of these geologic periods was vast beyond all human computation. Now, the oldest arboreal plants come to us from the devonian. Very curious looking trees they must have been, having little resemblance to any of our modern forms save in the fact that they had woody tissues and stood erect. Some of them were fifty or a hundred feet high and had a diameter of one to three feet at the ground. But they were nevertheless untreelike. They had no twigs, no leafy branches, no flowers, no seeds. They were instead covered all over with leaves, scalelike leaves. There were branches, not many, and these were covered, too, with leaves. The Chili pine, for all its scales, its green leafy cone as well, bears seeds. Our earliest tree, this devonian forerunner of all the forests, had no seeds. It was reproduced by spores, and these in development were conditioned as described, depended upon water for the mating of the cells. In fact, the oldest trees of earth were not unlike overgrown Brobdingnag types of the little ground pine or club moss which carpets the woodlands of Canada and spreads beneath our modern trees over all the eastern states. If we could imagine in the case of our eastern forest all the trees of present type removed and the ground given up to club mosses, and if we could then fancy these towering like leaf columns with yellow spikes of spores far above our heads, we might so form some conception of the earliest tree that has left of itself a record on the earth. There was, however, after all, some variety.

By no means all alike were those old forest trees. The number of types then extant was not great indeed, but every type terrestrial took on aboreal form. In devonian times even our scouring rushes or joint rushes seem to have played the role of trees, and so with many of the ferns. The very first forest was a spore bearing forest. The trees were big enough and plenty enough, but a lumberman might think them of little value after all. They were either hollow or else had enormous pith, so that the amount of wood even in the largest specimen was comparatively small. Nevertheless these old trees did have value. These forests lived on to cover the earth in the subsequent carboniferous time, in the age of coal, and no doubt contributed their share of organic material, of leaves and bark and spores and wood, to form vast beds of fuel that, as we know, make possible the wealth and convenience of the present.

But the devonian has something better than club mosses and ferns to show us, even if these did assume the size of trees. Bigness is not always a synonym for excellence. From rocks of different parts of the northern hemisphere, rocks belonging to the middle devonian, we have fossil coniferous wood, specimens representing the modern cone bearers—larches, spruces, yews and pines. All the trees referred to, the spore bearing trees, seem to have been confined to marshes and the damp shores of lakes or lagoons. But the struggle for existence, and especially, as we suppose, the disadvantage of terrestrial fertilization, at length drove some of these arboreous forms to higher ground and different habits. The unmated spores no longer fell to earth for mere fortuitous union, but in the fruit itself upon the trees the mating of the cells took place, and we have suddenly a real forest of coniferous trees. To be sure, these earlier conifers were not the same as those now living, but they were in a measure like them. Any one familiar with the structure of modern trees can recognize them. Once started they have been prominent in earth's vegetation ever since. Significant, though, these oldest conifers also had abundant pith, one-third the total diameter of the stem or more. It is curious, too, that the earliest of the type did not after all have cones. The fruit was more like that of the ginko, the maidenhair tree of Japan, planted now commonly in parks. Not until after the close of the carboniferous do true cones appear, perhaps not until the jurassic following.

But perchance the reader by this time asks how we can tell about these things so long gone by, what kinds of trees they were and how they grew and where. The answer is twofold—first, we know past ages only by the petrified remnants that lie buried in the rocks, like other fossils—shells, for instance—of which we hear so much, and, second, we understand such fossils only by comparison with existing flora. For example, existing conifers show a microscopic structure in their wood, a structure absolutely definite. When specimens of petrified wood come before us, especially if silicified, the structure is perfectly preserved, and if coniferous we know it as well as if we saw it grow. Now, fossil wood is comparatively abundant, from the devonian, and especially the carboniferous, on down through all overlying formations. Fossil fruits and flowers there also are, all too rare, but now and then a few are found, occasionally even the fruit still hanging to the branch on which it grew, so that the identity is sure.

But the finest witnesses we have of ancient forests are those which mark the advent of deciduous trees. The broad, flat leaf lends itself perfectly to fossilization. Its imprint, once it falls in favorable position, is stereotyped, graven upon the rocks forever. Now, the whole series of cretaceous rocks is filled with leaf impressions, beginning only a few in the lowest stratum. The upper layers are sometimes packed as if the wind strewn foliage had conditioned in some sort the whole rocky deposition. The leaf of course has vanished, but its impress still remains, its margin, its every vein and veinlet, the very glands sometimes that lent their odors to the air in days so long gone by. Needless to say, many of these forest leaves are strange, unlike any now driven by the autumn winds, and yet some of them are remarkably familiar in appearance. Here are hazel leaves and walnut leaves and poplar leaves. You would have said that they had but fallen from their twigs last year. You recognize them. They are no doubt walnuts, hazels, poplars. Yet they are not quite the leaves of our modern trees. The botanist would write them different species. Sometimes the fossils indicate genera no longer extant on the continent where the fossils lie. Thus our North American rocks afford us cinnamon leaves in rich abundance, but there are no cinnamons growing now on all this side of the world. Our nearest representatives are the laurels and the sassafras. We have already in these chapters referred to the tulip tree, a glorious tree, but the only lone species of the genus now on earth. But in cretaceous times tulip trees flourished all over the northern world, many species in this country and in Europe, ranging south as far as Italy and north as far as Greenland. In fact, everything seems to indicate that for our northern world at least the forests of cretaceous times were richer, more varied, more extended and in every way finer than those we know today. These trees were the immediate ancestors of those we know, the same, yet not quite the same. Conditions on the earth have changed since forests were at their prime, the glory of the world. Vegetation entered first upon life's scene and culminated first, culminated in the deciduous forests that cast their leaves through countless generations along the shores of the cretaceous seas. With the close of the cretaceous a race of terrestrial animals first appears, competitors of the forest, a new factor in environment, changing from that time on the entire trend of biologic differentiation. These were the mammals, the culmination of earth's fauna in the progress of the ages, until at the last, in these most recent times, the destinies of the forest and of the animal world as well rest in the hands of a single creature, the highest mammal, the god of this lower world. His name is man!

They Wanted Blood.

While a fair was being held recently in a small town in Belgium the owner of a menagerie announced that one of the villagers, who was known to possess great courage, would enter that evening a cage containing two lions and would remain there fifteen minutes.

When this was noised abroad, every one determined to witness the novel sight, and as a result there were several hundred persons in front of the lions' cage when the performance began.

At a signal from the owner the courageous villager entered the cage and stood watching the lions. They, however, took not the slightest notice of him, and after the fifteen minutes had expired he left the cage. As he did so a storm of hisses greeted him, and the next moment such an uproar arose that the owner summoned the police and the entertainment came to an end.

The fact was the people expected that the lions would attack the villager and they were disappointed because no blood had been shed.

"Yet it is exceedingly probable," says a French writer, "that if one of the lions had escaped from the cage this bloodthirsty crowd would have been terrified almost to death."

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL

BEAUTIFUL SITE SELECTED FOR THE NATIONAL MONUMENT.

Overlooks the Former Home of the Dead Statesman—Nature's Handiwork to Be Supplemented—The Temporary Tomb.

McKinley mound, as the site chosen by the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association for the monument to be erected to the martyred president has come to be known, is beautifully situated for its intended purpose.

It is a choice bit of nature's handiwork, but when the landscape artist has finished his work it will be one of the most charming spots in the land.

The tract selected for the monument contains a little more than eleven acres. It is in Westlawn cemetery, Canton, O., and overlooks the dead statesman's former home.

Though owned by the cemetery association, it has never been used for burial purposes, and it is the plan of the McKinley National Memorial association to utilize the entire tract for the McKinley memorial and for grounds surrounding and approaches to it.

The mound is the highest within a radius of a mile. On all sides of it are valleys. To the north the ground slopes into woodland and cultivated farm land. To the east there is an abrupt decline, bounded by a small stream and a valley a half mile wide. To the south its immediate boundary is a narrow ravine in which flows a small stream of clear water. Across the ravine is Westlawn cemetery. To the west the boundary is formed by a ravine and in part by a stream of water.

Save for clumps of trees here and there over the tract the site in general has the appearance of well kept pasture land were it not for the driveways laid out through it. Besides its natural beauty one of the reasons that led to its selection is that it is an eminence which commands a view for many miles.

Looking to the east, the top of the McKinley home can be seen two or three miles distant. The view to the southwest is cut off by the wooded cemetery, a spot sacred to the McKinleys. In this cemetery are the graves of the two daughters guarded by the figure of a boy holding a basket of flowers. In the same family lot are the graves of William McKinley, the father, and Nancy Allison McKinley, the mother of the late president. The shafts that mark the family lot are unpretentious.

Westlawn cemetery is a tract of sixty-five acres of ground, rolling and diversified. Nature has been for the most part undisturbed save for the complementing hand of art. The hillocks, trees, streams and valleys form a pleasing and restful view. Tiny lakes and dams and waterfalls, over which are bridges and about which are driveways and walks, have been made by the hand of man.

Near the main entrance to this cemetery in a private vault now rests the body of William McKinley. On guard day and night are forty-five United States regular soldiers. At the door of the vault stands a sentry, with loaded gun and fixed bayonet. On top of the hillock which forms the rear of the vault another soldier similarly equipped keeps vigil.

Indeed, the interior has been so arranged as to take away as much as possible the appearance of the home of the dead. For the comfort of Mrs. McKinley, who daily goes into the vault, chairs have been placed inside. In cool weather a heavy rug is placed on the floor.

From this vault the remains of McKinley will be removed when the mausoleum is completed and placed in their final resting place.

The plan of the memorial trustees is to provide an endowment for the McKinley memorial. This is for the purpose of making the grounds and memorial to McKinley absolutely free to the entire world. There will be no fee to approach the McKinley tomb. The plan further provides that there will be spacious approaches and driveways to the McKinley memorial site. An electric railway line will carry people to the very base of the monument site. As far as the funds will allow the place will not only be made one of beauty, but one of patriotic impulse.

IF YOU ARE SICK

And need medicine for your Kidneys, Liver, Bladder or Blood, get the Best.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

If you are suffering from kidney or bladder disease, the doctor asks: "Do you desire to urinate often, and are you compelled to get up frequently during the night? Does your back pain you? Does your urine stain linen? Is there a scalding pain in passing it, and is it difficult to hold the urine back? If so, your kidneys or bladder are diseased."

Try putting some of your urine in a glass tumbler, let it stand twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment, or a cloudy, milky appearance, your kidneys are sick. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will surely relieve and cure the most distressing cases of these dread diseases, and no physician can prescribe a medicine that equals it for kidney, liver, bladder and blood diseases, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation.

Walter D. Miller, of Delhi, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for years with kidney trouble and severe pains in my back, at times it was so bad I could hardly walk. My stomach also troubled me and I frequently had twinges of rheumatism. OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,

XII.—The Geographical Story of Trees.

THE earliest terrestrial plants were doubtless very lowly creeping things, some of them probably not unlike the insignificant liverworts that adorn the damp and shady corners of our northern world today. We have doubtless all observed these beautiful though less appreciated little things, creeping, ribbonlike structures, covering the ground in woods or spread over the whole moist surface of a perpendicularly rocky wall hard by some spring or stream. The earliest terrestrial plants, so far as can be guessed, were not unlike some of these. We may imagine them covering all the ground in those faroff days, struggling constantly among themselves for room. For plants, as for some other things, there is but one direction in which room increases as we go. That direction is upward. And so our terrestrial plants no doubt soon learned to push their branches upward, the better to secure the light and air. But the relief is only temporary. Once the upward habit is indulged forthwith ensues new rivalry. Crowding becomes as intolerable as before. Every rising plant tries hard to overtop its fellows. At first the stems lean one upon another and so remain erect. Anon the stiffer plants derive advantage, and those with forming woody tissues able to stand alone far outreach and overshadow all the rest. These changes, of course, no one has seen, but in some such way we may assume the plants of ancient times attained at length arboreal habit. For such accomplishments there was no lack of time, as the geological record shows. For ages the earth was filled with vegetation before ever a tree or a treelike plant appeared.

In order to appreciate properly what geology has to tell about the history of trees on the planet, it will be necessary for us to understand the manner in which students of the earth's history divide past terrestrial time. The recorded history of the earth, recorded by the succession of stratified rocks, names several definite ages or periods of past time, each represented by a distinct system of the stony strata. If we call these time divisions each by the name of its rock system, we may have, beginning with the oldest, the archean, laurentian, cambrian, silurian, devonian, carboniferous, triassic, jurassic, cretaceous, tertiary and recent. Let this be for us simply a time card to which we may refer what is known of the history of trees. It must be borne in mind, however, that these names describe periods by no means of equal length. The first three or four represent perhaps greater length of time than all the rest put together. Any one of them, however, is far enough away from us in time, for the duration of these geologic periods was vast beyond all human computation. Now, the oldest arboreal plants come to us from the devonian. Very curious looking trees they must have been, having little resemblance to any of our modern forms save in the fact that they had woody tissues and stood erect. Some of them were fifty or a hundred feet high and had a diameter of one to three feet at the ground. But they were nevertheless untreelike. They had no twigs, no leafy branches, no flowers, no seeds. They were instead covered all over with leaves, scalelike leaves. There were branches, not many, and these were covered, too, with leaves. The Chili pine, for all its scales, its green leafy cone as well, bears seeds. Our earliest tree, this devonian forerunner of all the forests, had no seeds. It was reproduced by spores, and these in development were conditioned as described, depended upon water for the mating of the cells. In fact, the oldest trees of earth were not unlike overgrown Brobdingnag types of the little ground pine or club moss which carpets the woodlands of Canada and spreads beneath our modern trees over all the eastern states. If we could imagine in the case of our eastern forest all the trees of present type removed and the ground given up to club mosses, and if we could then fancy these towering like leaf columns with yellow spikes of spores far above our heads, we might so form some conception of the earliest tree that has left of itself a record on the earth. There was, however, after all, some variety.

By no means all alike were those old forest trees. The number of types then extant was not great indeed, but every type terrestrial took on aboreal form. In devonian times even our scouring rushes or joint rushes seem to have played the role of trees, and so with many of the ferns. The very first forest was a spore bearing forest. The trees were big enough and plenty enough, but a lumberman might think them of little value after all. They were either hollow or else had enormous pith, so that the amount of wood even in the largest specimen was comparatively small. Nevertheless these old trees did have value. These forests lived on to cover the earth in the subsequent carboniferous time, in the age of coal, and no doubt contributed their share of organic material, of leaves and bark and spores and wood, to form vast beds of fuel that, as we know, make possible the wealth and convenience of the present.

But the devonian has something better than club mosses and ferns to show us, even if these did assume the size of trees. Bigness is not always a synonym for excellence. From rocks of different parts of the northern hemisphere, rocks belonging to the middle devonian, we have fossil coniferous wood, specimens representing the modern cone bearers—larches, spruces, yews and pines. All the trees referred to, the spore bearing trees, seem to have been confined to marshes and the damp shores of lakes or lagoons. But the struggle for existence, and especially, as we suppose, the disadvantage of terrestrial fertilization, at length drove some of these arboreous forms to higher ground and different habits. The unmated spores no longer fell to earth for mere fortuitous union, but in the fruit itself upon the trees the mating of the cells took place, and we have suddenly a real forest of coniferous trees. To be sure, these earlier conifers were not the same as those now living, but they were in a measure like them. Any one familiar with the structure of modern trees can recognize them. Once started they have been prominent in earth's vegetation ever since. Significant, though, these oldest conifers also had abundant pith, one-third the total diameter of the stem or more. It is curious, too, that the earliest of the type did not after all have cones. The fruit was more like that of the ginko, the maidenhair tree of Japan, planted now commonly in parks. Not until after the close of the carboniferous do true cones appear, perhaps not until the jurassic following.

But perchance the reader by this time asks how we can tell about these things so long gone by, what kinds of trees they were and how they grew and where. The answer is twofold—first, we know past ages only by the petrified remnants that lie buried in the rocks, like other fossils—shells, for instance—of which we hear so much, and, second, we understand such fossils only by comparison with existing flora. For example, existing conifers show a microscopic structure in their wood, a structure absolutely definite. When specimens of petrified wood come before us, especially if silicified, the structure is perfectly preserved, and if coniferous we know it as well as if we saw it grow. Now, fossil wood is comparatively abundant, from the devonian, and especially the carboniferous, on down through all overlying formations. Fossil fruits and flowers there also are, all too rare, but now and then a few are found, occasionally even the fruit still hanging to the branch on which it grew, so that the identity is sure.

But the finest witnesses we have of ancient forests are those which mark the advent of deciduous trees. The broad, flat leaf lends itself perfectly to fossilization. Its imprint, once it falls in favorable position, is stereotyped, graven upon the rocks forever. Now, the whole series of cretaceous rocks is filled with leaf impressions, beginning only a few in the lowest stratum. The upper layers are sometimes packed as if the wind strewn foliage had conditioned in some sort the whole rocky deposition. The leaf of course has vanished, but its impress still remains, its margin, its every vein and veinlet, the very glands sometimes that lent their odors to the air in days so long gone by. Needless to say, many of these forest leaves are strange, unlike any now driven by the autumn winds, and yet some of them are remarkably familiar in appearance. Here are hazel leaves and walnut leaves and poplar leaves. You would have said that they had but fallen from their twigs last year. You recognize them. They are no doubt walnuts, hazels, poplars. Yet they are not quite the leaves of our modern trees. The botanist would write them different species. Sometimes the fossils indicate genera no longer extant on the continent where the fossils lie. Thus our North American rocks afford us cinnamon leaves in rich abundance, but there are no cinnamons growing now on all this side of the world. Our nearest representatives are the laurels and the sassafras. We have already in these chapters referred to the tulip tree, a glorious tree, but the only lone species of the genus now on earth. But in cretaceous times tulip trees flourished all over the northern world, many species in this country and in Europe, ranging south as far as Italy and north as far as Greenland. In fact, everything seems to indicate that for our northern world at least the forests of cretaceous times were richer, more varied, more extended and in every way finer than those we know today. These trees were the immediate ancestors of those we know, the same, yet not quite the same. Conditions on the earth have changed since forests were at their prime, the glory of the world. Vegetation entered first upon life's scene and culminated first, culminated in the deciduous forests that cast their leaves through countless generations along the shores of the cretaceous seas. With the close of the cretaceous a race of terrestrial animals first appears, competitors of the forest, a new factor in environment, changing from that time on the entire trend of biologic differentiation. These were the mammals, the culmination of earth's fauna in the progress of the ages, until at the last, in these most recent times, the destinies of the forest and of the animal world as well rest in the hands of a single creature, the highest mammal, the god of this lower world. His name is man!

They Wanted Blood.

While a fair was being held recently in a small town in Belgium the owner of a menagerie announced that one of the villagers, who was known to possess great courage, would enter that evening a cage containing two lions and would remain there fifteen minutes.

When this was noised abroad, every one determined to witness the novel sight, and as a result there were several hundred persons in front of the lions' cage when the performance began.

At a signal from the owner the courageous villager entered the cage and stood watching the lions. They, however, took not the slightest notice of him, and after the fifteen minutes had expired he left the cage. As he did so a storm of hisses greeted him, and the next moment such an uproar arose that the owner summoned the police and the entertainment came to an end.

The fact was the people expected that the lions would attack the villager and they were disappointed because no blood had been shed.

"Yet it is exceedingly probable," says a French writer, "that if one of the lions had escaped from the cage this bloodthirsty crowd would have been terrified almost to death."

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL

BEAUTIFUL SITE SELECTED FOR THE NATIONAL MONUMENT.

Overlooks the Former Home of the Dead Statesman—Nature's Handiwork to Be Supplemented—The Temporary Tomb.

McKinley mound, as the site chosen by the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association for the monument to be erected to the martyred president has come to be known, is beautifully situated for its intended purpose.

It is a choice bit of nature's handiwork, but when the landscape artist has finished his work it will be one of the most charming spots in the land.

The tract selected for the monument contains a little more than eleven acres. It is in Westlawn cemetery, Canton, O., and overlooks the dead statesman's former home.

Though owned by the cemetery association, it has never been used for burial purposes, and it is the plan of the McKinley National Memorial association to utilize the entire tract for the McKinley memorial and for grounds surrounding and approaches to it.

The mound is the highest within a radius of a mile. On all sides of it are valleys. To the north the ground slopes into woodland and cultivated farm land. To the east there is an abrupt decline, bounded by a small stream and a valley a half mile wide. To the south its immediate boundary is a narrow ravine in which flows a small stream of clear water. Across the ravine is Westlawn cemetery. To the west the boundary is formed by a ravine and in part by a stream of water.

Save for clumps of trees here and there over the tract the site in general has the appearance of well kept pasture land were it not for the driveways laid out through it. Besides its natural beauty one of the reasons that led to its selection is that it is an eminence which commands a view for many miles.

Looking to the east, the top of the McKinley home can be seen two or three miles distant. The view to the southwest is cut off by the wooded cemetery, a spot sacred to the McKinleys. In this cemetery are the graves of the two daughters guarded by the figure of a boy holding a basket of flowers. In the same family lot are the graves of William McKinley, the father, and Nancy Allison McKinley, the mother of the late president. The shafts that mark the family lot are unpretentious.

Westlawn cemetery is a tract of sixty-five acres of ground, rolling and diversified. Nature has been for the most part undisturbed save for the complementing hand of art. The hillocks, trees, streams and valleys form a pleasing and restful view. Tiny lakes and dams and waterfalls, over which are bridges and about which are driveways and walks, have been made by the hand of man.

Near the main entrance to this cemetery in a private vault now rests the body of William McKinley. On guard day and night are forty-five United States regular soldiers. At the door of the vault stands a sentry, with loaded gun and fixed bayonet. On top of the hillock which forms the rear of the vault another soldier similarly equipped keeps vigil.

Indeed, the interior has been so arranged as to take away as much as possible the appearance of the home of the dead. For the comfort of Mrs. McKinley, who daily goes into the vault, chairs have been placed inside. In cool weather a heavy rug is placed on the floor.

From this vault the remains of McKinley will be removed when the mausoleum is completed and placed in their final resting place.

The plan of the memorial trustees is to provide an endowment for the McKinley memorial. This is for the purpose of making the grounds and memorial to McKinley absolutely free to the entire world. There will be no fee to approach the McKinley tomb. The plan further provides that there will be spacious approaches and driveways to the McKinley memorial site. An electric railway line will carry people to the very base of the monument site. As far as the funds will allow the place will not only be made one of beauty, but one of patriotic impulse.

IF YOU ARE SICK

And need medicine for your Kidneys, Liver, Bladder or Blood, get the Best.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

If you are suffering from kidney or bladder disease, the doctor asks: "Do you desire to urinate often, and are you compelled to get up frequently during the night? Does your back pain you? Does your urine stain linen? Is there a scalding pain in passing it, and is it difficult to hold the urine back? If so, your kidneys or bladder are diseased."

Try putting some of your urine in a glass tumbler, let it stand twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment, or a cloudy, milky appearance, your kidneys are sick. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will surely relieve and cure the most distressing cases of these dread diseases, and no physician can prescribe a medicine that equals it for kidney, liver, bladder and blood diseases, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation.

Walter D. Miller, of Delhi, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for years with kidney trouble and severe pains in my back, at times it was so bad I could hardly walk. My stomach also troubled me and I frequently had twinges of rheumatism. OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,

XII.—The Geographical Story of Trees.

THE earliest terrestrial plants were doubtless very lowly creeping things, some of them probably not unlike the insignificant liverworts that adorn the damp and shady corners of our northern world today. We have doubtless all observed these beautiful though less appreciated little things, creeping, ribbonlike structures, covering the ground in woods or spread over the whole moist surface of a perpendicularly rocky wall hard by some spring or stream. The earliest terrestrial plants, so far as can be guessed, were not unlike some of these. We may imagine them covering all the ground in those faroff days, struggling constantly among themselves for room. For plants, as for some other things, there is but one direction in which room increases as we go. That direction is upward. And so our terrestrial plants no doubt soon learned to push their branches upward, the better to secure the light and air. But the relief is only temporary. Once the upward habit is indulged forthwith ensues new rivalry. Crowding becomes as intolerable as before. Every rising plant tries hard to overtop its fellows. At first the stems lean one upon another and so remain erect. Anon the stiffer plants derive advantage, and those with forming woody tissues able to stand alone far outreach and overshadow all the rest. These changes, of course, no one has seen, but in some such way we may assume the plants of ancient times attained at length arboreal habit. For such accomplishments there was no lack of time, as the geological record shows. For ages the earth was filled with vegetation before ever a tree or a treelike plant appeared.

In order to appreciate properly what geology has to tell about the history of trees on the planet, it will be necessary for us to understand the manner in which students of the earth's history divide past terrestrial time. The recorded history of the earth, recorded by the succession of stratified rocks, names several definite ages or periods of past time, each represented by a distinct system of the stony strata. If we call these time divisions each by the name of its rock system, we may have, beginning with the oldest, the archean, laurentian, cambrian, silurian, devonian, carboniferous, triassic, jurassic, cretaceous, tertiary and recent. Let this be for us simply a time card to which we may refer what is known of the history of trees. It must be borne in mind, however, that these names describe periods by no means of equal length. The first three or four represent perhaps greater length of time than all the rest put together. Any one of them, however, is far enough away from us in time, for the duration of these geologic periods was vast beyond all human computation. Now, the oldest arboreal plants come to us from the devonian. Very curious looking trees they must have been, having little resemblance to any of our modern forms save in the fact that they had woody tissues and stood erect. Some of them were fifty or a hundred feet high and had a diameter of one to three feet at the ground. But they were nevertheless untreelike. They had no twigs, no leafy branches, no flowers, no seeds. They were instead covered all over with leaves, scalelike leaves. There were branches, not many, and these were covered, too, with leaves. The Chili pine, for all its scales, its green leafy cone as well, bears seeds. Our earliest tree, this devonian forerunner of all the forests, had no seeds. It was reproduced by spores, and these in development were conditioned as described, depended upon water for the mating of the cells. In fact, the oldest trees of earth were not unlike overgrown Brobdingnag types of the little ground pine or club moss which carpets the woodlands of Canada and spreads beneath our modern trees over all the eastern states. If we could imagine in the case of our eastern forest all the trees of present type removed and the ground given up to club mosses, and if we could then fancy these towering like leaf columns with yellow spikes of spores far above our heads, we might so form some conception of the earliest tree that has left of itself a record on the earth. There was, however, after all, some variety.

By no means all alike were those old forest trees. The number of types then extant was not great indeed, but every type terrestrial took on aboreal form. In devonian times even our scouring rushes or joint rushes seem to have played the role of trees, and so with many of the ferns. The very first forest was a spore bearing forest. The trees were big enough and plenty enough, but a lumberman might think them of little value after all. They were either hollow or else had enormous pith, so that the amount of wood even in the largest specimen was comparatively small. Nevertheless these old trees did have value. These forests lived on to cover the earth in the subsequent carboniferous time, in the age of coal, and no doubt contributed their share of organic material, of leaves and bark and spores and wood, to form vast beds of fuel that, as we know, make possible the wealth and convenience of the present.

But the devonian has something better than club mosses and ferns to show us, even if these did assume the size of trees. Bigness is not always a synonym for excellence. From rocks of different parts of the northern hemisphere, rocks belonging to the middle devonian, we have fossil coniferous wood, specimens representing the modern cone bearers—larches, spruces, yews and pines. All the trees referred to, the spore bearing trees, seem to have been confined to marshes and the damp shores of lakes or lagoons. But the struggle for existence, and especially, as we suppose, the disadvantage of terrestrial fertilization, at length drove some of these arboreous forms to higher ground and different habits. The unmated spores no longer fell to earth for mere fortuitous union, but in the fruit itself upon the trees the mating of the cells took place, and we have suddenly a real forest of coniferous trees. To be sure, these earlier conifers were not the same as those now living, but they were in a measure like them. Any one familiar with the structure of modern trees can recognize them. Once started they have been prominent in earth's vegetation ever since. Significant, though, these oldest conifers also had abundant pith, one-third the total diameter of the stem or more. It is curious, too, that the earliest of the type did not after all have cones. The fruit was more like that of the ginko, the maidenhair tree of Japan, planted now commonly in parks. Not until after the close of the carboniferous do true cones appear, perhaps not until the jurassic following.

But perchance the reader by this time asks how we can tell about these things so long gone by, what kinds of trees they were and how they grew and where. The answer is twofold—first, we know past ages only by the petrified remnants that lie buried in the rocks, like other fossils—shells, for instance—of which we hear so much, and, second, we understand such fossils only by comparison with existing flora. For example, existing conifers show a microscopic structure in their wood, a structure absolutely definite. When specimens of petrified wood come before us, especially if silicified, the structure is perfectly preserved, and if coniferous we know it as well as if we saw it grow. Now, fossil wood is comparatively abundant, from the devonian, and especially the carboniferous, on down through all overlying formations. Fossil fruits and flowers there also are, all too rare, but now and then a few are found, occasionally even the fruit still hanging to the branch on which it grew, so that the identity is sure.

But the finest witnesses we have of ancient forests are those which mark the advent of deciduous trees. The broad, flat leaf lends itself perfectly to fossilization. Its imprint, once it falls in favorable position, is stereotyped, graven upon the rocks forever. Now, the whole series of cretaceous rocks is filled with leaf impressions, beginning only a few in the lowest stratum. The upper layers are sometimes packed as if the wind strewn foliage had conditioned in some sort the whole rocky deposition. The leaf of course has vanished, but its impress still remains, its margin, its every vein and veinlet, the very glands sometimes that lent their odors to the air in days so long gone by. Needless to say, many of these forest leaves are strange, unlike any now driven by the autumn winds, and yet some of them are remarkably familiar in appearance. Here are hazel leaves and walnut leaves and poplar leaves. You would have said that they had but fallen from their twigs last year. You recognize them. They are no doubt walnuts, hazels, poplars. Yet they are not quite the leaves of our modern trees. The botanist would write them different species. Sometimes the fossils indicate genera no longer extant on the continent where the fossils lie. Thus our North American rocks afford us cinnamon leaves in rich abundance, but there are no cinnamons growing now on all this side of the world. Our nearest representatives are the laurels and the sassafras. We have already in these chapters referred to the tulip tree, a glorious tree, but the only lone species of the genus now on earth. But in cretaceous times tulip trees flourished all over the northern world, many species in this country and in Europe, ranging south as far as Italy and north as far as Greenland. In fact, everything seems to indicate that for our northern world at least the forests of cretaceous times were richer, more varied, more extended and in every way finer than those we know today. These trees were the immediate ancestors of those we know, the same, yet not quite the same. Conditions on the earth have changed since forests were at their prime, the glory of the world. Vegetation entered first upon life's scene and culminated first, culminated in the deciduous forests that cast their leaves through countless generations along the shores of the cretaceous seas. With the close of the cretaceous a race of terrestrial animals first appears, competitors of the forest, a new factor in environment, changing from that time on the entire trend of biologic differentiation. These were the mammals, the culmination of earth's fauna in the progress of the ages, until at the last, in these most recent times, the destinies of the forest and of the animal world as well rest in the hands of a single creature, the highest mammal, the god of this lower world. His name is man!

They Wanted Blood.

While a fair was being held recently in a small town in Belgium the owner of a menagerie announced that one of the villagers, who was known to possess great courage, would enter that evening a cage containing two lions and would remain there fifteen minutes.

When this was noised abroad, every one determined to witness the novel sight, and as a result there were several hundred persons in front of the lions' cage when the performance began.

At a signal from the owner the courageous villager entered the cage and stood watching the lions. They, however, took not the slightest notice of him, and after the fifteen minutes had expired he left the cage. As he did so a storm of hisses greeted him, and the next moment such an uproar arose that the owner summoned the police and the entertainment came to an end.

The fact was the people expected that the lions would attack the villager and they were disappointed because no blood had been shed.

"Yet it is exceedingly probable," says a French writer, "that if one of the lions had escaped from the cage this bloodthirsty crowd would have been terrified almost to death."

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL

BEAUTIFUL SITE SELECTED FOR THE NATIONAL MONUMENT.

Overlooks the Former Home of the Dead Statesman—Nature's Handiwork to Be Supplemented—The Temporary Tomb.

McKinley mound, as the site chosen by the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association for the monument to be erected to the martyred president has come to be known, is beautifully situated for its intended purpose.

It is a choice bit of nature's handiwork, but when the landscape artist has finished his work it will be one of the most charming spots in the land.

The tract selected for the monument contains a little more than eleven acres. It is in Westlawn cemetery, Canton, O., and overlooks the dead statesman's former home.

Though owned by the cemetery association, it has never been used for burial purposes, and it is the plan of the McKinley National Memorial association to utilize the entire tract for the McKinley memorial and for grounds surrounding and approaches to it.

The mound is the highest within a radius of a mile. On all sides of it are valleys. To the north the ground slopes into woodland and cultivated farm land. To the east there is an abrupt decline, bounded by a small stream and a valley a half mile wide. To the south its immediate boundary is a narrow ravine in which flows a small stream of clear water. Across the ravine is Westlawn cemetery. To the west the boundary is formed by a ravine and in part by a stream of water.

Save for clumps of trees here and there over the tract the site in general has the appearance of well kept pasture land were it not for the driveways laid out through it. Besides its natural beauty one of the reasons that led to its selection is that it is an eminence which commands a view for many miles.

Looking to the east, the top of the McKinley home can be seen two or three miles distant. The view to the southwest is cut off by the wooded cemetery, a spot sacred to the McKinleys. In this cemetery are the graves of the two daughters guarded by the figure of a boy holding a basket of flowers. In the same family lot are the graves of William McKinley, the father, and Nancy Allison McKinley, the mother of the late president. The shafts that mark the family lot are unpretentious.

Westlawn cemetery is a tract of sixty-five acres of ground, rolling and diversified. Nature has been for the most part undisturbed save for the complementing hand of art. The hillocks, trees, streams and valleys form a pleasing and restful view. Tiny lakes and dams and waterfalls, over which are bridges and about which are driveways and walks, have been made by the hand of man.

Near the main entrance to this cemetery in a private vault now rests the body of William McKinley. On guard day and night are forty-five United States regular soldiers. At the door of the vault stands a sentry, with loaded gun and fixed bayonet. On top of the hillock which forms the rear of the vault another soldier similarly equipped keeps vigil.

Indeed, the interior has been so arranged as to take away as much as possible the appearance of the home of the dead. For the comfort of Mrs. McKinley, who daily goes into the vault, chairs have been placed inside. In cool weather a heavy rug is placed on the floor.

From this vault the remains of McKinley will be removed when the mausoleum is completed and placed in their final resting place.

The plan of the memorial trustees is to provide an endowment for the McKinley memorial. This is for the purpose of making the grounds and memorial to McKinley absolutely free to the entire world. There will be no fee to approach the McKinley tomb. The plan further provides that there will be spacious approaches and driveways to the McKinley memorial site. An electric railway line will carry people to the very base of the monument site. As far as the funds will allow the place will not only be made one of beauty, but one of patriotic impulse.

WAS NO OPPOSITION.

Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes' Appointment Confirmed By the Senate.

THE ARMY CANTEEN QUESTION.

Paymaster General Bates Says Claim of War Department that Restoration of Canteen Would Benefit Army Seems Fully Borne Out by Records.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The senate was in session yesterday one hour and five minutes, most of which time was spent behind closed doors. After the reception of a number of bills and petitions and the adoption of a concurrent resolution calling on the president for the papers in the Pius fund case, recently arbitrated before The Hague tribunal, Mr. Beveridge had read the resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Oklahoma non-partisan convention favoring the admission of Oklahoma and Indian territory as one state and opposing the house omnibus statehood bill. The senate then went into executive session, and at 1:05 adjourned until Monday.

Holmes' Appointment Confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes was yesterday confirmed by the senate to succeed the late Justice Gray as a member of the bench of the United States supreme court. There was no opposition and the nomination was not discussed. Immediately after the senate went into executive session Senator Hoar, as chairman of the committee on the judiciary, made a favorable report upon the nomination. The senate took the case up forthwith, accomplishing the act of confirmation as quickly as it was possible to do so.

Boston, Dec. 5.—Associate Justice Holmes left for Washington today, ready to take up his work on the supreme bench next week. Judge Holmes has been arranging his affairs so that he could go to Washington immediately upon receiving news of his confirmation. His resignation from the Massachusetts supreme bench probably will follow the precedent laid down by the late Judge Gray, his predecessor on the federal bench, and a former chief justice of the supreme bench of this state, who allowed his acceptance of the appointment as judge of the United States supreme court to serve as his resignation of the position of state justice.

Canteen Communication.

Washington, Dec. 5.—General Bates, paymaster general of the army, has sent a communication to Adjutant General Corbin in regard to the army canteen question, in which he says:

"The claim of the war department in recommending the restoration of the canteen to the army that during the operations of the canteen law the discipline of the army was superior, desertions much less, and that there were fewer fines and forfeitures by court martials on account of breaches of military discipline resulting from the use of intoxicants by men in the service, appears to be fully borne out by the records of the paymaster general's office.

"These records show that the paymasters of the army collected from 75,000 enlisted men (regulars) during the last year in which the canteen was in force, on account of the soldiers' dues, fines and forfeitures, $462,698, while during the fiscal year 1902, since the abolishment of the canteen, there was collected by paymasters from about 70,000 enlisted men (regulars) on the same account $632,125.

"The fact, therefore, appears indisputable by the figures cited that the fine and forfeitures imposed upon and collected from the enlisted men of the army were vastly increased during the year subsequent to the abolishment of the canteen, which increase cannot be well attributed to any other cause than the effects of an uncontrolled liquor traffic in connection with military posts, which traffic appears to seriously affect the discipline and morals of the army."

NATIONAL CAPITAL NOTES.

President Roosevelt yesterday received the members of the Spanish War Nurses' association, now in session in Washington. Nearly a hundred of the nurses paid their respects to the president. He shook hands with and extended a pleasant personal greeting to each one.

The state department has received from United States Consul W. A. Prickitt, at Rheims, notice of an industrial exposition to be held there from May 15 to Sept. 6, 1903. This is to be the only exposition in France next year and is expected to be of importance from an industrial and agricultural view point.

Major Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted of irregularities during his incumbancy as director of posts of Cuba and who was pardoned after the American occupation ended, was at the capital yesterday for the purpose of pressing his petition, filed with the senate last session, for an investigation of the methods used in his conviction by the Cuban courts.

Senator Hoar yesterday presented to the senate an amendment to the immigration bill, providing that the wives and children of aliens who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens shal be admitted without tax or fee. In case of contagious disease among them they are to be held, and in case the disorder should prove permanent they are to be deported.

Found Dead in His Room.

Kansas City, Dec. 5.—James H. Aldrich, former cashier of the Kansas City, Ft. Scott & Memphis railroad company, was found dead in his room here yesterday. He had been ill for a long time, and had died from a hemorrhage of the lungs.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Banks Have Lost to Sub-Treasury Since Last Friday Over $5,000,000. Bonds Dull and Easier.

New York, Dec. 5.—There was another attempt to put up the price of stocks yesterday morning, but it did not succeed, and the market soon became weak. Final prices were considerably lower than the night before. Many of the most prominent stocks were not quoted at all from hour to hour. The aggregate transactions for the day dwindled still further from Wednesday's small total.

The sub-treasury statement for yesterday shows that the banks have lost to that institution since last Friday over $5,000,000. This did not include the $1,600,000 withdrawn yesterday for shipment to South America. Yesterday morning the sub-treasury was a creditor at the clearing house for $416,981 on account of some heavy internal revenue collections. It will be seen, therefore, that the week's decline in bank reserves probably will be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The tone of the money market, which continues very firm, is convincing evidence that no relaxation of the money market is expected before the turn of the year.

There was no transfer of currency to the interior through the sub-treasury yesterday, and exchange at Chicago rose from par to 10c premium. Reports from trade authorities of a downward tendency in the price of iron products and a holding back of orders on account of high cost was rather a depressing influence. Bonds were dull and easier in sympathy with stocks. Total sales, par value, $860,000. United States 3s registered declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

P. E. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Training of Missionaries Principal Topic of Discussion.

New York, Dec. 5.—Training of missionaries was the principal topic of discussion by the Protestant Episcopal missionary conference at the Church of Zion and St. Timothy yesterday. The discussion was led by the lord bishop of Thetford.

"I don't know how it is here," said his lordship, "but with us there is a great dearth and growing scarcity of men fitted for the ministry."

The speaker added that parents, when planning the future of their children, often considered only trade and commerce and "leave out the most sacred profession of all, the ministry." He further said that boys at school and young men at college are "a most selfish class," referring particularly to "what they spend on their games—on football."

The lord bishop said it has been calculated that there is "but one missionary to every 30,000 heathens," and he advocated the training of natives as missionaries.

"What we want most in this mission field," said he, "are colleges where the native children can be educated in Christianity."

Barry Johnstone Dying.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Barry Johnstone, the actor who last Monday night shot and killed Kate Hassett, of Keith's Bijou theater stock company, and then turned the weapon upon himself, is gradually dying at the hospital. During the day he revived slightly, but the physicians say his recovery is impossible. A consultation was held by the doctors yesterday, at which it was decided that an operation to remove the two bullets which Johnstone fired into his breast would be futile, and they are now awaiting the end. The murdered woman's body was yesterday forwarded to the home of her parents at Aurora, Ill.

Tots Burned to Death.

Detroit, Dec. 5.—A special to the Free Press from Saginaw, Mich., says that two children of Mrs. Ainsley Bowers, 914 Stapleton street, were burned to death yesterday afternoon, when their mother left them alone in the house for a few minutes. One child was a girl 6 years old and the other an infant of 2 months. It is supposed the little girl set fire to some papers with which she was playing. The two dead bodies lay on the floor when the fire department responded to an alarm. The house was only slightly damaged.

Sanitary Conference.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The sanitary conference of American republics, which has been in session here since Tuesday, came to an end last night. Santiago de Chili was selected as the place of next meeting, which will occur March 15, 1904. Dr. Eduardo Moore, the delegate from Chili, assured the delegates that all Chili would welcome them, and said an hygienic exhibit would be given in Santiago at the time of the conference.

Man Blown to Atoms.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Horace E. Killig, aged 45 years, superintendent of the Germantown crematory company, was blown to atoms yesterday by an explosion of dynamite. The dynamite was used for blasting purposes in the cemetery attached to the crematory, and Killig was carrying twelve sticks of the explosive into a tool house when he stumbled and dropped his bundle. An explosion followed and Killig was blown to pieces.

Walls Collapse.

Gilmer, Tex., Dec. 5.—The walls of a brick building which had been burned collapsed yesterday. A Mr. Lyle was killed outright, John Hill fatally injured and two others were slightly injured. The fire destroyed a business block. The damage is estimated at $30,000, half insured.

Mme. Melba's Work For Charity In Her Native Land.

The canceling of Mme. Melba's engagement to sing in this country next spring, which has caused much regret among opera goers, is due to her determination to remain in Australia with her aged father, who is in very feeble health.

Mme. Melba recently paid to her old home her first visit since she became famous, and a most elaborate reception was given her on her arrival in Melbourne. Her father is very old, and the excitement attendant upon the arrival of his famous daughter, whom he had not seen for years, was too much for him, and he was stricken with paralysis.

MME. MELBA.

Since her arrival in Australia Mme. Melba has been idolized. She has appeared at several concerts in Melbourne and will make a tour of the country. She has announced that she will devote the entire proceeds of the tour to the charities of her native land.

How much the proceeds of the tour will be may be gathered from the fact that the advance sale of seats for her five concerts in Melbourne were more than $50,000. She has decided to present a new wing to the Melbourne hospital, to be known as the Melba wing. She will give a special concert for that, and she herself started the sale of seats by taking three boxes at $2,500 each, the first being in the name of her father.

Mme. Melba takes her name from her native city, Melbourne. Her father's name is Mitchell. At the age of four Nellie Mitchell was an infant prodigy. At ten she had mastered the piano, organ and violin. While she was still a young girl she married Charles Armstrong, a sheep raiser and brother of an English baronet.

Then came the colonial exhibition in London, and her father being one of the commissioners she accompanied him to London. She was utterly unknown, but had a chance to sing and created a sensation. After a year's study with Mme. Marchesi she made her debut at Brussels, successfully beginning a career that has brought her to the top of the operatic ladder. Mme. Melba is thirty-seven years old.

YOUR SENSE OF DUTY

CULTIVATE IT TO THE EXTREME LIMIT OF YOUR ABILITY.

It Is the Noblest, Most Manly and at the Same Time Most Womanly of Qualities—The Real Basis of Education and Success.

Teachers and parents are asked to consider the statement that a sense of duty is the foundation of real education and the basis of success. Whatever has been achieved of real importance in the world has been based upon a sense of duty. Religion itself is founded upon duty, and its main teachings deal with questions of duty—the duty of men and women toward each other and toward their Creator.

Children's minds will be strengthened, their work made easier and their ambition stimulated if they can be made to feel toward duty that it is not repulsive, but that it offers an opportunity for achievement, an opportunity for every individual to prove his worth and that he deserves to succeed if duty can be strongly developed in the mind of a young child, the effect will remain through life and make that child's existence useful.

Parents should impress upon their children—and young people should impress upon themselves—the fact that a sense of duty is the noblest, most manly and at the same time most womanly of qualities.

The average small boy thinks that there is something "soft" about a dutiful boy. He should be taught that what made Washington a fighter and Lincoln great among his fellows was nothing else than a sense of duty to their country.

What makes a fireman brave is a sense of duty. A sense of duty is at the foundation of every effort made to provide for children, to meet the obligations of life honestly.

The German philosopher Fichte, as admirable a moral character as the world has known, exemplifies as perfectly as any the beauty of a life inspired by a sense of duty, and it is a life which may be well studied by those engaged in shaping the character of the young.

The very keynote of his philosophical system was based on duty. "Unsere Welt ist das versinnlichte Material unserer Pflicht," said he.

This idea—that our world is but the material incarnation of our duty—he taught, and, what is more, he practiced what he preached.

One preacher who practices his preachings thoroughly is worth many of the other kind, no matter how eloquent the others. And Fichte practiced his beliefs. When he was poor and a young tutor, he set a good example to every teacher. As a tutor he made his living, but he knew that his duty to the child intrusted to him was the principal thing. He knew also that every child is really formed in character and morals by the influence of its parents.

Fichte kept a journal devoted to the attitude of his employers toward their child—his pupil. Every week he told them the mistakes they had made and held them accountable for spoiling the child through flattery, too much kindness, ill judged severity or in whatever way. Strange to say, the parents actually put up with this for two whole years, so great was their admiration for the young tutor's moral character.

Duty well ingrained in the soul will keep a man on the right path in easy times and in hard times. Fichte is quoted here because no man better than he proves the power of a sense of duty. In small things duty guided him, and it guided him at the end.

He was just past the half century of his age and had been gloriously successful. He had been called to the chair of philosophy at Berlin, and no teacher of truth had ever been more loved or more admired. On a certain day he was to lecture, and he had chosen "Duty" for his subject. His country was at war and threatened with invasion and absolute annihilation of her liberties.

Fichte, who had talked much of the little duties of life, talked on this day of man's duty to his country. The sound of drums calling for conscripts frequently interrupted his lecture. He told the listening young man that each man's duty is to lend his individual strength and life to his country in time of danger. It was a marvelous address, and it ended well.

For at the close he said to his great crowd of admiring students: "This course of lectures will be suspended until the end of the campaign. We shall resume them in a free country or die in the attempt to recover her freedom."

Fichte left his lecture platform to enlist as a simple soldier, and, needless to say, his students followed his example in crowds. That was at the beginning of the campaign of 1813, but the example is good enough to last until now and for many hundred years to come. A year later, aged fifty-two, he died. He caught the fever while caring for those afflicted, among others for his own wife, who had gone with the army as nurse.

Make duty a strong part of your child's or your pupil's moral education. A sense of duty impels men to struggle on and do their best even in the face of failure; a sense of duty impels the successful man to make good use of his success. The hideous, empty, selfish lives of the self indulgent class are based upon utter lack of the sense of duty. In the education of a child moral teachings should come first; in a child's mental equipment moral qualities should be first considered. By example, precept, argument and through history impress upon your children the fact that without a sense of duty they are unworthy of the opportunities that life offers to men in this world.—New York Journal.

Great Men and Large Families.

A careful study of the circumstances of birth and childhood of what were considered to be the fifty greatest men of modern times disclosed the fact, interesting in comparison, that the average great man was born in a family of six children, not including half brothers or half sisters. It was figured from the data that the chances for greatness in a child are two to one in favor of the older half of the family.

Improving on Euclid.

Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes' Appointment Confirmed By the Senate.

THE ARMY CANTEEN QUESTION.

Paymaster General Bates Says Claim of War Department that Restoration of Canteen Would Benefit Army Seems Fully Borne Out by Records.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The senate was in session yesterday one hour and five minutes, most of which time was spent behind closed doors. After the reception of a number of bills and petitions and the adoption of a concurrent resolution calling on the president for the papers in the Pius fund case, recently arbitrated before The Hague tribunal, Mr. Beveridge had read the resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Oklahoma non-partisan convention favoring the admission of Oklahoma and Indian territory as one state and opposing the house omnibus statehood bill. The senate then went into executive session, and at 1:05 adjourned until Monday.

Holmes' Appointment Confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes was yesterday confirmed by the senate to succeed the late Justice Gray as a member of the bench of the United States supreme court. There was no opposition and the nomination was not discussed. Immediately after the senate went into executive session Senator Hoar, as chairman of the committee on the judiciary, made a favorable report upon the nomination. The senate took the case up forthwith, accomplishing the act of confirmation as quickly as it was possible to do so.

Boston, Dec. 5.—Associate Justice Holmes left for Washington today, ready to take up his work on the supreme bench next week. Judge Holmes has been arranging his affairs so that he could go to Washington immediately upon receiving news of his confirmation. His resignation from the Massachusetts supreme bench probably will follow the precedent laid down by the late Judge Gray, his predecessor on the federal bench, and a former chief justice of the supreme bench of this state, who allowed his acceptance of the appointment as judge of the United States supreme court to serve as his resignation of the position of state justice.

Canteen Communication.

Washington, Dec. 5.—General Bates, paymaster general of the army, has sent a communication to Adjutant General Corbin in regard to the army canteen question, in which he says:

"The claim of the war department in recommending the restoration of the canteen to the army that during the operations of the canteen law the discipline of the army was superior, desertions much less, and that there were fewer fines and forfeitures by court martials on account of breaches of military discipline resulting from the use of intoxicants by men in the service, appears to be fully borne out by the records of the paymaster general's office.

"These records show that the paymasters of the army collected from 75,000 enlisted men (regulars) during the last year in which the canteen was in force, on account of the soldiers' dues, fines and forfeitures, $462,698, while during the fiscal year 1902, since the abolishment of the canteen, there was collected by paymasters from about 70,000 enlisted men (regulars) on the same account $632,125.

"The fact, therefore, appears indisputable by the figures cited that the fine and forfeitures imposed upon and collected from the enlisted men of the army were vastly increased during the year subsequent to the abolishment of the canteen, which increase cannot be well attributed to any other cause than the effects of an uncontrolled liquor traffic in connection with military posts, which traffic appears to seriously affect the discipline and morals of the army."

NATIONAL CAPITAL NOTES.

President Roosevelt yesterday received the members of the Spanish War Nurses' association, now in session in Washington. Nearly a hundred of the nurses paid their respects to the president. He shook hands with and extended a pleasant personal greeting to each one.

The state department has received from United States Consul W. A. Prickitt, at Rheims, notice of an industrial exposition to be held there from May 15 to Sept. 6, 1903. This is to be the only exposition in France next year and is expected to be of importance from an industrial and agricultural view point.

Major Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted of irregularities during his incumbancy as director of posts of Cuba and who was pardoned after the American occupation ended, was at the capital yesterday for the purpose of pressing his petition, filed with the senate last session, for an investigation of the methods used in his conviction by the Cuban courts.

Senator Hoar yesterday presented to the senate an amendment to the immigration bill, providing that the wives and children of aliens who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens shal be admitted without tax or fee. In case of contagious disease among them they are to be held, and in case the disorder should prove permanent, they are to be deported.

Found Dead in His Room.

Kansas City, Dec. 5.—James H. Aldrich, former cashier of the Kansas City, Ft. Scott & Memphis railroad company, was found dead in his room here yesterday. He had been ill for a long time, and had died from a hemorrhage of the lungs.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Banks Have Lost to Sub-Treasury Since Last Friday Over $5,000,000. Bonds Dull and Easier.

New York, Dec. 5.—There was another attempt to put up the price of stocks yesterday morning, but it did not succeed, and the market soon became weak. Final prices were considerably lower than the night before. Many of the most prominent stocks were not quoted at all from hour to hour. The aggregate transactions for the day dwindled still further from Wednesday's small total.

The sub-treasury statement for yesterday shows that the banks have lost to that institution since last Friday over $5,000,000. This did not include the $1,000,000 withdrawn yesterday for shipment to South America. Yesterday morning the sub-treasury was a creditor at the clearing house for $416,981 on account of some heavy internal revenue collections. It will be seen, therefore, that the week's decline in bank reserves probably will be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The tone of the money market, which continues very firm, is convincing evidence that no relaxation of the money market is expected before the turn of the year.

There was no transfer of currency to the interior through the sub-treasury yesterday, and exchange at Chicago rose from par to 10c premium. Reports from trade authorities of a downward tendency in the price of iron products and a holding back of orders on account of high cost was rather a depressing influence. Bonds were dull and easier in sympathy with stocks. Total sales, par value, $860,000. United States 3s registered declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

P. E. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Training of Missionaries Principal Topic of Discussion.

New York, Dec. 5.—Training of missionaries was the principal topic of discussion by the Protestant Episcopal missionary conference at the Church of Zion and St. Timothy yesterday. The discussion was led by the lord bishop of Thetford.

"I don't know how it is here," said his lordship, "but with us there is a great dearth and growing scarcity of men fitted for the ministry."

The speaker added that parents, when planning the future of their children, often considered only trade and commerce and "leave out the most sacred profession of all, the ministry." He further said that boys at school and young men at college are "a most selfish class," referring particularly to "what they spend on their games—on football."

The lord bishop said it has been calculated that there is "but one missionary to every 30,000 heathens," and he advocated the training of natives as missionaries.

"What we want most in this mission field," said he, "are colleges where the native children can be educated in Christianity."

Barry Johnstone Dying.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Barry Johnstone, the actor who last Monday night shot and killed Kate Hassett, of Keith's Bijou theater stock company, and then turned the weapon upon himself, is gradually dying at the hospital. During the day he revived slightly, but the physicians say his recovery is impossible. A consultation was held by the doctors yesterday, at which it was decided that an operation to remove the two bullets which Johnstone fired into his breast would be futile, and they are now awaiting the end. The murdered woman's body was yesterday forwarded to the home of her parents at Aurora, Ill.

Tots Burned to Death.

Detroit, Dec. 5.—A special to the Free Press from Saginaw, Mich., says that two children of Mrs. Ainsley Bowers, 914 Stapless street, were burned to death yesterday afternoon, when their mother left them alone in the house for a few minutes. One child was a girl 6 years old and the other an infant of 2 months. It is supposed the little girl set fire to some papers with which she was playing. The two dead bodies lay on the floor when the fire department responded to an alarm. The house was only slightly damaged.

Santiago de Chili was selected as the place of next meeting, which will occur March 15, 1904. Dr. Eduardo Moore, the delegate from Chili, assured the delegates that all Chili would welcome them, and said an hygienic exhibit would be given in Santiago at the time of the conference.

He knew also that every child is really formed in character and morals by the influence of its parents.

Fichte kept a journal devoted to the attitude of his employers toward their child—his pupil. Every week he told them the mistakes they had made and held them accountable for spoiling the child through flattery, too much kindness, ill judged severity or in whatever way. Strange to say, the parents actually put up with this for two whole years, so great was their admiration for the young tutor's moral character.

Duty well ingrained in the soul will keep a man on the right path in easy times and in hard times. Fichte is quoted here because no man better than he proves the power of a sense of duty. In small things duty guided him, and it guided him at the end.

He was just past the half century of his age and had been gloriously successful. He had been called to the chair of philosophy at Berlin, and no teacher of truth had ever been more loved or more admired. On a certain day he was to lecture, and he had chosen "Duty" for his subject. His country was at war and threatened with invasion and absolute annihilation of her liberties.

Fichte, who had talked much of the little duties of life, talked on this day of man's duty to his country. The sound of drums calling for conscripts frequently interrupted his lecture. He told the listening young man that each man's duty is to lend his individual strength and life to his country in time of danger. It was a marvelous address, and it ended well.

For at the close he said to his great crowd of admiring students: "This course of lectures will be suspended until the end of the campaign. We shall resume them in a free country or die in the attempt to recover her freedom."

Fichte left his lecture platform to enlist as a simple soldier, and, needless to say, his students followed his example in crowds. That was at the beginning of the campaign of 1813, but the example is good enough to last until now and for many hundred years to come. A year later, aged fifty-two, he died. He caught the fever while caring for those afflicted, among others for his own wife, who had gone with the army as nurse.

Make duty a strong part of your child's or your pupil's moral education. A sense of duty impels men to struggle on and do their best even in the face of failure; a sense of duty impels the successful man to make good use of his success. The hideous, empty, selfish lives of the self indulgent class are based upon utter lack of the sense of duty. In the education of a child moral teachings should come first; in a child's mental equipment moral qualities should be first considered. By example, precept, argument and through history impress upon your children the fact that without a sense of duty they are unworthy of the opportunities that life offers to men in this world.—New York Journal.

Great Men and Large Families.

A careful study of the circumstances of birth and childhood of what were considered to be the fifty greatest men of modern times disclosed the fact, interesting in comparison, that the average great man was born in a family of six children, not including half brothers or half sisters. It was figured from the data that the chances for greatness in a child are two to one in favor of the older half of the family.

Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes' Appointment Confirmed By the Senate.

THE ARMY CANTEEN QUESTION.

Paymaster General Bates Says Claim of War Department that Restoration of Canteen Would Benefit Army Seems Fully Borne Out by Records.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The senate was in session yesterday one hour and five minutes, most of which time was spent behind closed doors. After the reception of a number of bills and petitions and the adoption of a concurrent resolution calling on the president for the papers in the Pius fund case, recently arbitrated before The Hague tribunal, Mr. Beveridge had read the resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Oklahoma non-partisan convention favoring the admission of Oklahoma and Indian territory as one state and opposing the house omnibus statehood bill. The senate then went into executive session, and at 1:05 adjourned until Monday.

Holmes' Appointment Confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes was yesterday confirmed by the senate to succeed the late Justice Gray as a member of the bench of the United States supreme court. There was no opposition and the nomination was not discussed. Immediately after the senate went into executive session Senator Hoar, as chairman of the committee on the judiciary, made a favorable report upon the nomination. The senate took the case up forthwith, accomplishing the act of confirmation as quickly as it was possible to do so.

Boston, Dec. 5.—Associate Justice Holmes left for Washington today, ready to take up his work on the supreme bench next week. Judge Holmes has been arranging his affairs so that he could go to Washington immediately upon receiving news of his confirmation. His resignation from the Massachusetts supreme bench probably will follow the precedent laid down by the late Judge Gray, his predecessor on the federal bench, and a former chief justice of the supreme bench of this state, who allowed his acceptance of the appointment as judge of the United States supreme court to serve as his resignation of the position of state justice.

Canteen Communication.

Washington, Dec. 5.—General Bates, paymaster general of the army, has sent a communication to Adjutant General Corbin in regard to the army canteen question, in which he says:

"The claim of the war department in recommending the restoration of the canteen to the army that during the operations of the canteen law the discipline of the army was superior, desertions much less, and that there were fewer fines and forfeitures by court martials on account of breaches of military discipline resulting from the use of intoxicants by men in the service, appears to be fully borne out by the records of the paymaster general's office.

"These records show that the paymasters of the army collected from 75,000 enlisted men (regulars) during the last year in which the canteen was in force, on account of the soldiers' dues, fines and forfeitures, $462,698, while during the fiscal year 1902, since the abolishment of the canteen, there was collected by paymasters from about 70,000 enlisted men (regulars) on the same account $632,125.

"The fact, therefore, appears indisputable by the figures cited that the fine and forfeitures imposed upon and collected from the enlisted men of the army were vastly increased during the year subsequent to the abolishment of the canteen, which increase cannot be well attributed to any other cause than the effects of an uncontrolled liquor traffic in connection with military posts, which traffic appears to seriously affect the discipline and morals of the army."

NATIONAL CAPITAL NOTES.

President Roosevelt yesterday received the members of the Spanish War Nurses' association, now in session in Washington. Nearly a hundred of the nurses paid their respects to the president. He shook hands with and extended a pleasant personal greeting to each one.

The state department has received from United States Consul W. A. Prickitt, at Rheims, notice of an industrial exposition to be held there from May 15 to Sept. 6, 1903. This is to be the only exposition in France next year and is expected to be of importance from an industrial and agricultural view point.

Major Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted of irregularities during his incumbancy as director of posts of Cuba and who was pardoned after the American occupation ended, was at the capital yesterday for the purpose of pressing his petition, filed with the senate last session, for an investigation of the methods used in his conviction by the Cuban courts.

Senator Hoar yesterday presented to the senate an amendment to the immigration bill, providing that the wives and children of aliens who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens shal be admitted without tax or fee. In case of contagious disease among them they are to be held, and in case the disorder should prove permanent they are to be deported.

Found Dead in His Room.

Kansas City, Dec. 5.—James H. Aldrich, former cashier of the Kansas City, Ft. Scott & Memphis railroad company, was found dead in his room here yesterday. He had been ill for a long time, and had died from a hemorrhage of the lungs.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Banks Have Lost to Sub-Treasury Since Last Friday Over $5,000,000. Bonds Dull and Easier.

New York, Dec. 5.—There was another attempt to put up the price of stocks yesterday morning, but it did not succeed, and the market soon became weak. Final prices were considerably lower than the night before. Many of the most prominent stocks were not quoted at all from hour to hour. The aggregate transactions for the day dwindled still further from Wednesday's small total.

The sub-treasury statement for yesterday shows that the banks have lost to that institution since last Friday over $5,000,000. This did not include the $1,000,000 withdrawn yesterday for shipment to South America. Yesterday morning the sub-treasury was a creditor at the clearing house for $416,981 on account of some heavy internal revenue collections. It will be seen, therefore, that the week's decline in bank reserves probably will be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The tone of the money market, which continues very firm, is convincing evidence that no relaxation of the money market is expected before the turn of the year.

There was no transfer of currency to the interior through the sub-treasury yesterday, and exchange at Chicago rose from par to 10c premium. Reports from trade authorities of a downward tendency in the price of iron products and a holding back of orders on account of high cost was rather a depressing influence. Bonds were dull and easier in sympathy with stocks. Total sales, par value, $860,000. United States 3s registered declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

P. E. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Training of Missionaries Principal Topic of Discussion.

New York, Dec. 5.—Training of missionaries was the principal topic of discussion by the Protestant Episcopal missionary conference at the Church of Zion and St. Timothy yesterday. The discussion was led by the lord bishop of Thetford.

"I don't know how it is here," said his lordship, "but with us there is a great dearth and growing scarcity of men fitted for the ministry."

The speaker added that parents, when planning the future of their children, often considered only trade and commerce and "leave out the most sacred profession of all, the ministry." He further said that boys at school and young men at college are "a most selfish class," referring particularly to "what they spend on their games—on football."

The lord bishop said it has been calculated that there is "but one missionary to every 30,000 heathens," and he advocated the training of natives as missionaries.

"What we want most in this mission field," said he, "are colleges where the native children can be educated in Christianity."

Barry Johnstone Dying.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Barry Johnstone, the actor who last Monday night shot and killed Kate Hassett, of Keith's Bijou theater stock company, and then turned the weapon upon himself, is gradually dying at the hospital. During the day he revived slightly, but the physicians say his recovery is impossible. A consultation was held by the doctors yesterday, at which it was decided that an operation to remove the two bullets which Johnstone fired into his breast would be futile, and they are now awaiting the end. The murdered woman's body was yesterday forwarded to the home of her parents at Aurora, Ill.

Tots Burned to Death.

Detroit, Dec. 5.—A special to the Free Press from Saginaw, Mich., says that two children of Mrs. Ainsley Bowers, 914 Stapless street, were burned to death yesterday afternoon, when their mother left them alone in the house for a few minutes. One child was a girl 6 years old and the other an infant of 2 months. It is supposed the little girl set fire to some papers with which she was playing. The two dead bodies lay on the floor when the fire department responded to an alarm. The house was only slightly damaged.

Sanitary Conference.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The sanitary conference of American republics, which has been in session here since Tuesday, came to an end last night. Santiago de Chili was selected as the place of next meeting, which will occur March 15, 1904. Dr. Eduardo Moore, the delegate from Chili, assured the delegates that all Chili would welcome them, and said an hygienic exhibit would be given in Santiago at the time of the conference.

Man Blown to Atoms.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Horace E. Killig, aged 45 years, superintendent of the Germantown crematory company, was blown to atoms yesterday by an explosion of dynamite. The dynamite was used for blasting purposes in the cemetery attached to the crematory, and Killig was carrying twelve sticks of the explosive into a tool house when he stumbled and dropped his bundle. An explosion followed and Killig was blown to pieces.

Walls Collapse.

Gilmer, Tex., Dec. 5.—The walls of a brick building which had been burned collapsed yesterday. A Mr. Lyle was killed outright, John Hill fatally injured and two others were slightly injured. The fire destroyed a business block. The damage is estimated at $30,000, half insured.

A GENEROUS SONG BIRD.

Mme. Melba's Work For Charity In Her Native Land.

The canceling of Mme. Melba's engagement to sing in this country next spring, which has caused much regret among opera goers, is due to her determination to remain in Australia with her aged father, who is in very feeble health.

Mme. Melba recently paid to her old home her first visit since she became famous, and a most elaborate reception was given her on her arrival in Melbourne. Her father is very old, and the excitement attendant upon the arrival of his famous daughter, whom he had not seen for years, was too much for him, and he was stricken with paralysis.

MME. MELBA.

Since her arrival in Australia Mme. Melba has been idolized. She has appeared at several concerts in Melbourne and will make a tour of the country. She has announced that she will devote the entire proceeds of the tour to the charities of her native land.

How much the proceeds of the tour will be may be gathered from the fact that the advance sale of seats for her five concerts in Melbourne were more than $50,000. She has decided to present a new wing to the Melbourne hospital, to be known as the Melba wing. She will give a special concert for that, and she herself started the sale of seats by taking three boxes at $2,500 each, the first being in the name of her father.

Mme. Melba takes her name from her native city, Melbourne. Her father's name is Mitchell. At the age of four Nellie Mitchell was an infant prodigy. At ten she had mastered the piano, organ and violin. While she was still a young girl she married Charles Armstrong, a sheep raiser and brother of an English baronet.

Then came the colonial exhibition in London, and her father being one of the commissioners she accompanied him to London. She was utterly unknown, but had a chance to sing and created a sensation. After a year's study with Mme. Marchesi she made her debut at Brussels, successfully beginning a career that has brought her to the top of the operatic ladder. Mme. Melba is thirty-seven years old.

Only In the Pail.

An Irish soldier was crossing a barrack square with a pail in which he was going to get some water.

A sergeant, passing at the time, noticed that Pat had a very disreputable looking pair of trousers on and, wishing to make a report, stopped the man and asked:

"Where are you going?"

"To get some water."

"What! In those trousers?"

"No, sergeant; in the pail!"

A Temperance Champion.

Mrs. Teacup—Oh, Mr. Tubbs, I was so delighted when I heard that you were such a stanch champion of the temperance cause!

Tubbs—Why—er—I'm not exactly—

"Now, don't try to hide your light under a bushel, Mr. Tubbs. I know, because I heard George say that you have been a booze fighter all your life. He said you punished more of it than any ten men in the state."—Life.

Her Engagement Ring.

Kitty—Constance is wearing a diamond ring on her engagement finger I'll bet she's only trying to fool folks.

YOUR SENSE OF DUTY

It Is the Noblest, Most Manly and at the Same Time Most Womanly of Qualities—The Real Basis of Education and Success.

Teachers and parents are asked to consider the statement that a sense of duty is the foundation of real education and the basis of success. Whatever has been achieved of real importance in the world has been based upon a sense of duty. Religion itself is founded upon duty, and its main teachings deal with questions of duty—the duty of men and women toward each other and toward their Creator.

Children's minds will be strengthened, their work made easier and their ambition stimulated if they can be made to feel toward duty that it is not repulsive, but that it offers an opportunity for achievement, an opportunity for every individual to prove his worth and that he deserves to succeed if duty can be strongly developed in the mind of a young child, the effect will remain through life and make that child's existence useful.

Parents should impress upon their children—and young people should impress upon themselves—the fact that a sense of duty is the noblest, most manly and at the same time most womanly of qualities.

The average small boy thinks that there is something "soft" about a dutiful boy. He should be taught that what made Washington a fighter and Lincoln great among his fellows was nothing else than a sense of duty to their country.

What makes a fireman brave is a sense of duty. A sense of duty is at the foundation of every effort made to provide for children, to meet the obligations of life honestly.

The German philosopher Fichte, as admirable a moral character as the world has known, exemplifies as perfectly as any the beauty of a life inspired by a sense of duty, and it is a life which may be well studied by those engaged in shaping the character of the young.

The very keynote of his philosophical system was based on duty. "Unsere Welt ist das versinnlichte Material unserer Pflicht," said he.

This idea—that our world is but the material incarnation of our duty—he taught, and, what is more, he practiced what he preached.

One preacher who practices his preachings thoroughly is worth many of the other kind, no matter how eloquent the others. And Fichte practiced his beliefs. When he was poor and a young tutor, he set a good example to every teacher. As a tutor he made his living, but he knew that his duty to the child intrusted to him was the principal thing. He knew also that every child is really formed in character and morals by the influence of its parents.

Fichte kept a journal devoted to the attitude of his employers toward their child—his pupil. Every week he told them the mistakes they had made and held them accountable for spoiling the child through flattery, too much kindness, ill judged severity or in whatever way. Strange to say, the parents actually put up with this for two whole years, so great was their admiration for the young tutor's moral character.

Duty well ingrained in the soul will keep a man on the right path in easy times and in hard times. Fichte is quoted here because no man better than he proves the power of a sense of duty. In small things duty guided him, and it guided him at the end.

He was just past the half century of his age and had been gloriously successful. He had been called to the chair of philosophy at Berlin, and no teacher of truth had ever been more loved or more admired. On a certain day he was to lecture, and he had chosen "Duty" for his subject. His country was at war and threatened with invasion and absolute annihilation of her liberties.

Fichte, who had talked much of the little duties of life, talked on this day of man's duty to his country. The sound of drums calling for conscripts frequently interrupted his lecture. He told the listening young man that each man's duty is to lend his individual strength and life to his country in time of danger. It was a marvelous address, and it ended well.

For at the close he said to his great crowd of admiring students: "This course of lectures will be suspended until the end of the campaign. We shall resume them in a free country or die in the attempt to recover her freedom."

Fichte left his lecture platform to enlist as a simple soldier, and, needless to say, his students followed his example in crowds. That was at the beginning of the campaign of 1813, but the example is good enough to last until now and for many hundred years to come. A year later, aged fifty-two, he died. He caught the fever while caring for those afflicted, among others for his own wife, who had gone with the army as nurse.

Make duty a strong part of your child's or your pupil's moral education. A sense of duty impels men to struggle on and do their best even in the face of failure; a sense of duty impels the successful man to make good use of his success. The hideous, empty, selfish lives of the self indulgent class are based upon utter lack of the sense of duty. STILL ANOTHER COMPANY GETS A TROLLEY CHARTER FOR CROSS-COUNTY LINE

Salem the Headquarters of a Concern Which Proposes to Build Electric Line to This City.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5.—There has been another addition to the long list of electric railways which have been incorporated to operate in Columbiana county and contiguous territory. The Youngstown and Ohio River Railway and Light company, with $10,000 capital, took out a certificate of incorporation yesterday authorizing it to build and operate a railroad between East Liverpool and Youngstown, using electricity or any other motive power, and to construct and maintain machine shops, power plants, telegraph and telephone lines and to carry passengers, express matter and United States mails. Salem is headquarters. The incorporators are: S. Fishel, Ernst Mueller, Max P. Goodwin, Chas. Zucker, H. Schmidt, and S. A. Stone. The papers filed with the secretary of state bear the seal of a Cuyahoga county notary which leads to the belief that the incorporators are Cleveland men. The route of the proposed line is not given.

The convicts serving life sentences under the habitual criminal act are to be released. Yesterday the state board of pardons by its action in recommending the pardon of Charles F. Kline, a Dayton man, and Frank White, of Ottawa county, who were sent to the penitentiary under his act, which was repealed by the legislature last winter, indicates that it is to be the policy of the board to recommend the pardoning of all habitual criminals upon the completion of the minimum terms provided by law for the offences for which they were convicted. It was generally supposed that the action of the legislature in repealing the habitual criminal law would permit the liberation of the prisoners committed under it, but the courts decided to to contrary.

Another candidate for governor has popped on the scene. It is ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan, who is as well known in public life as any other citizen of the state. When asked if it were true t hat he intended entering the lists, Mr. Ryan looked wise and said: "I have taken the matter under consideration, but will have nothing further to s ay at this time."

It is reported that the Ohio miners will ask for an increase of 20 cents a ton at the annual convention which meets in January.

Dr. C. O. Probst, secretary of the state board, said the board would not send a representative to investigate the supposed cases of smallpox at Steubenville, unless that city's board of health urged it.

A DISSOLUTION IS ASKED FOR

The Concern Is Now Alleged to Be Insolvent, With Indebtedness Exceeding the Value of Its Property—List of Stockholders.

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—Harmon Michaels, I. B. Clark and Frank S. Clark, owners of one-fifth of all the stock of the Wellsville Pioneer Pottery company, have filed a petition in court, asking for a dissolution of the company. The petition alleges that the corporation is insolvent; that it has wholly failed as to the purposes for which it was organized, and that the business has been abandoned. It is further alleged that the plant operated at a great loss during several months prior to its final shut down, and that the indebtedness of the company exceeds the value of its property. The company was organized about 20 years ago with a capital stock of $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $100 each, 320 of which are paid up. Following are the stockholders, all of Wellsville: Harmon Michaels, 146.49 shares; J. B. Clark, 100; Frank S. Clark, 49.05; A. A. McFarland, 3; George M. Aten, 6.29; Stevenson & Co., 5.23; Lou Riggs, 3.66; E. H. Riggs, 2.09; W. F. Blackburn, 2.62; T. R. Moores, 1.05; J. W. Riley, .52.

The petition says it will be necessary to collect all of the statutory liabilities of the solvent holders of stock to liquidate the indebtedness, the first four mentioned being alleged to be insolvent. The company is indebted in the sum of $4,805.91 as follows: J. F. House, on two promissory notes, $407; Hammill & Gillipsie, New York, $917.34; Golding, Sons & Co., East Liverpool, $341.59; J. H. Graham, Scroggsfield, $3,000; Edgar Kaolin company, $140.

MURDEROUS ANARCHIST

Man Under Arrest At Steubenville Says He Would Like To Kill Roosevelt.

Steubenville, December 5.—Ponako Felice, one of the two men arrested last night in Warren township, after resisting the officers, for violating liquor laws and terrorizing the people, is a self confessed anarchist and will be prosecuted as such, as he said he would like to put a bullet in the president.

TWO MEN CAUSE A LOT OF TROUBLE

Henry Wolf, Drunk and Disorderly Created Terror at His Home.

AN OLD SCORE AGAINST HIM

Which He Will Have to Settle Before He Will Be Given His Freedom. Jack Rowe Is Threatened With a Workhouse Sentence.

Two men that drink just once in a great while and one that had not touched a drop for so long that he could not remember the date, constituted the lineup that faced Mayor Davidson this morning.

Of the periodical boozers, Henry Wolf was the first arraigned. Whenever he does imbibe almost every one is bound to know it, and especially his wife and family. He was not so very full last evening when arrested at his home by Officer Dunn, but had enough to make him feel that he was the best man on Market street, and to prove that he was right he converted his home into a disorderly house by threatening violence on his wife, and using his son in a manner not allowed by law.

After he had carried on at a disgraceful rate for several hours his wife summoned the police. When Officer Dunn arrived Wolf was ranting like a caged beast. He had divested himself of his outer wearing apparel. The officer did not wish to take the prisoner out in the cold and snow without protection and allowed him to dress before calling the white horses. Wolf was very repentant this morning when arraigned and much to his consternation he was greeted with something that he had forgotten long ago—an old fine of $6.60—imposed for an offense similar to the one for which he was arrested last evening. The mayor fined him the same amount on the second offense, and informed him that unless he settles both accounts that he can board it out in the city jail. He wanted to give a $375 piano for security, but the mayor could see no way in getting the music box to the city hall and ordered him committed to a cell.

Jack Rowe was simply doing as he has done time and again within the past year or two. He was making things extremely diseagreeable for his wife and all in the vicinity of his home. The wife finally telephoned for the police. Officer McDermott answered the call and had a tussle. When he reached the city hall with his man big drops of sweat were streaming from his face. He was compelled to tug and pull and

When the Pennsylvania avenue equalization board has completed the mammoth work assigned it by the city council and its report is made there will be blue smoke circling over the heads of certain property holders along the line of improvement.

After making a thorough examination of the assessment as decided upon by the assessment board, the trio of equalizers give forth a startling statement. The total assessment on the improvement aggregates almost $31,000, and of this amount it has been discovered that at least four-fifths of it was assessed on the property abutting the avenue from the East End school house eastward to the corporation limits of the city. That means that the portion extending from the school house west to Robinson street was only assessed about $6,000.

A member of the board stated last evening that the assessing board undoubtedly heeded not the benefit plan. "It could not have given that, a most objective point to be considered, a moment's thought," continued the member. "The truth of the matter is that the portion assessed so slightly was benefited more by the road improvement than that lying east of it. What is the reason for the board's decision? Well, we have looked into every detail and it is impossible for us to figure it out in any other way. On the north side of the improved road there lies a rich bed of clay and a valuable setting of stone. The former dips toward the East End, as does the avenue. This gives the owners better access to the clay, provides excellent opportunity for mining it and makes the transportation all that could be desired.

"The owners of the stone quarries through the improvement encounter no trouble at all in disposing of the product. On the perfect roadway can be hauled the heavy rock at any season of the year. Since the improvement this portion has also been greatly benefited from a building standpoint. Many desirable spots for residences have resulted. A residence can now be erected on the hillside and applicants will be received galore for the quarters. It would not only be a healthy place to live, but the view could not be better and people residing there would be in close proximity to the leading industries, street cars and other things considered by the people of the city.

"The best argument in favor of the decision of this board pertains to the price of property at the present time and a few years prior to the improvement. Going back but three years prior to it is remembered that a certain tract of land which was sold within the past year for something like $13,000 could have been purchased for $3,000. One-thirteenth of it was sold for $250. If that does not demonstrate the fact that the property west of the school house was benefited equally as much as that east of it, we are simply poor calculators."

A Service Intended to Reach Young Folks Who Are Not Church Members.

The Epworth choir of the First M. E. church, composed of 100 voices, will meet this evening in the audience room of the church for rehearsal for the Young People's Home camp meeting service. The meetings will begin at the First M. E. church on next Sunday morning with special exercises in the Sunday school and will continue throughout the week and also on the following Sunday. At 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon a mass meeting will be held in the opera house for the young people of the city who are not members of any church. The service is especially designed as a pleasure and help for the young people of the city who are not church members. During the week services will be held held each night at 7:45 in the audience room of the church, the music being led by the choir, and the pastor will be assisted by several Methodist Episcopal clergymen of prominence. Rev. W. E. Fetch, pastor of the M. E. church in Girard, one of the ablest young ministers, will be present the entire week.

While the older members of the church will heartily work, the meetings are designed especially to foster the interests of the young people.

Hurt in Chicago Fire.

J. E. Herbert, of Salinevillle, a Ft. Wayne mail agent, was one of the guests at the Lincoln hotel, Chicago, which was burned yesterday morning with a number of inmates. He jumped from a window and was taken to a hospital with an injured leg. He was able to proceed home in the evening.

WRONGED GIRL ENTERS SUIT AGAINST WELL KNOWN MAN

Suffering in deepest anguish, both mental and physical, Miss Stella J. Sheets, a very pretty young girl well known in the city, is reported on her death bed at 153 Walnut street. In a cradle nearby is her innocent babe of six weeks.

Her story is a sad one. For five weeks after her child was born she lay in pain and sorrow, it is said, deserted by the person who had betrayed her and without pecuniary aid which he was well able to provide. The latter part of last week she began to realize that her condition was not only precarious but possibly hopeless, she being in the terrible clutches of consumption, and she decided that though her outlook was encircled in gloom her little child should not suffer if the law could be applied. Whereupon she filed an affidavit with 'Squire Rose, charging Lawrence White, warehouse foreman at the Harker company's pottery and a widely known resident of the East End, with being the father of the child.

A warrant was then issued and Constable Powell arrested White that evening. He was taken before the justice, who released him under bond for his appearance Wednesday evening. Knowing the dear penalty to be paid upon conviction on such a charge White immediately concluded to settle the matter in a manner as easily as possible. He agreed to pay the erring girl in the neighborhood of $200, and after she consented to accept the amount he was given freedom and released from any further trouble or worry over the matter by furnishing a bond which will protect the city and county from ever being compelled to maintain the child.

A MINISTER'S DAUGHTER MISSING

Miss Gladys, 16-Year Old Daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, Suddenly Leaves Her Home at Fairview.

Miss Gladys Greene, daughter of Rev. D. A. Greene, of Fairview, W. Va., grew tired of her home town last Monday and left it.

Miss Greene, who is about 16 years of age, left her home that evening to attend a singing class in the village. She was at the singing school, but did not return home.

Her parents became very uneasy about her and telephoned to Wellsville East Liverpool and Chester to well known friends to be on the lookout for her.

The report that a young man had an active part in her disappearance has been denied, as the young man returned Wednesday night to his home near Ellwood school house.

The young lady came to Chester yesterday morning about 5 o'clock and stopped at Mrs. S. Martin's. After eating breakfast she was anxious to catch the earliest train west on the C. & P.

The girl was nearly frozen, as she had no wraps. She left and went to East Liverpool, where it is thought she took a train to Minerva.

Late last evening it was reported she had been located in Waynesburg, O. No cause is assigned for the girl's course, as she had a pleasant and congenial home at Fairview, where she had many kind associates.

BUSINESS WAS BRISK IN THE DIVORCE COURT

Lisbon, December 5.—(Special)—During an intermission in the Willis case yesterday afternoon Judge Robinson granted three divorces.

Albert M. and Mary A. Weaver were married at Salineville, January 17, 1881. Mrs. Weaver was granted a divorce on the grounds of habitual drunkenness, gross leglect of duty and failure to provide. They have one child.

Ella McClure, of East Liverpool, was granted a divorce from William McClure, on the grounds of wilful absence, and was given custody of their four minor children, George G., aged 17, Pearl, 15, Myrtle, 13 and Wilbur, 11 years. They were married at Smith's Ferry, Pa., October 29, 1882.

Herman Bourne, of Salem, was granted a divorce from Alice Bourne on the grounds of adultery. In his petition he alleged that Mrs. Bourne had been guilty of adultery at her home at Salem last August, and later at Cleveland with one John Somers. Mr. Bourne was also given custody of his 3-year-old daughter, Anna Marie.

THE FALL OF SNOW CAUSED MUCH TROUBLE

The first snow of the season of any consequence fell during last night and the early hours this morning. With the advent came the usual disagreeable impediment to the traveling public. Pedestrians waded through snow, slush and water to their work, and those who are accustomed to accepting the convenience of the street car had their patience tested. For three hours after the cars were started there was scarcely one that arrived at a switch on time, and it was not an uncommon sight to see three and four cars at a switch and many were seen standing motionless on the upgrade.

The reason given for the delay in the street car services, however, is not attributed solely to the heavy downfall of snow. It was credited mostly to an insufficient amount of gas.

The traveling public was not alone in the trouble. Mayor Davidson had surely his full share. Before he reached his office this morning at least a score of citizens stopped him, complaining of the school boys throwing snow balls and sliding on the sidewalks with sleds. After the chief executive reached the city hall he was kept busy at the telephone answering calls on the same subject. At noon the mayor decided upon a plan which he thinks will free him from trouble during the remainder of the winter. He figured that snow balling is a nuisance, and as it is the duty of the health officer to abate a nuisance he will in the future refer all complainants to Dr. Ogden. The physician states that he will do all within his power to enforce the law, but he cannot figure the matter out as did the mayor.

MINISTER TALKED IN SARCASTIC WAY

Salem Clergyman Enlivened Anti-Saloon League Proceedings at Columbus.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 5.—In his address entitled "A Defense of the Saloon," at the anti-saloon congress in this city Wednesday, Rev. W. F. McCauley, of Salem, made some very pointed statements. His topic was a misnomer, as the context, instead of defending the saloon, arraigned it most caustically. The speaker cited arguments used by saloon interests which he refuted to the satisfaction of his auditors. In part he said: "Beer follows the flag and contests with the missionary the right to civilize the Filipinos. Saloon keepers should cease patronizing insurance companies which discriminate against them, and all corporations which insist upon sober employes. If the liquor traffic does not elevate, why does the government take internal revenues from it? Would church members rent property to the trade if it was not honorable." It will be noticed that a vein of sarcasm coursed through Rev. Mr. McCauley's address. In closing the reverend gentleman offered a resolution to permit saloons to remain open uninterrupted with the exception of two hours in the night. Much of the talk was a burlesque which created amusement.

The tenth annual report of the trustees and officers of the Massillon state hospital, filed with the governor, shows that the number of Columbiana county patients remaining in the institution at the close of the fiscal year, November 15, 1901, was 125. During the year just ended 38 patients were admitted from Columbiana county. Four from the county died and the number remaining from the county at the close of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1902, was 135.

The Star Stoneware company, of Crooksville, has increased its capital from $15,000 to $55,000. W. H. Brown is president and J. J. Bull secretary.

"Our Next Convention" is the topic John C. Walsh, of East Liverpool, will speak on at the meeting of the Franklin County Retail Liquor Dealers' association in this city December 9.

STAG SOCIAL

Held By Thomas Council, O. U. A. M., a Success In Every Particular.

The members of Gen. George H. Thomas council, No. 8, O. U. A. M., held their first stag social at the hall in the Golding building last night. It was by far the most enjoyable of any of the many functions which this lodge has ever hesd. The idea was a new one in this society, but the success made of the first attempt will undoubtedly result in other similar affairs being arranged for during the coming winter season.

T. Jeff Kerr, chief engineer at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, acted in the capacity of toast master, and he was unanimously pronounced an ideal presiding officer. Oysters, celery and pickles were the chief features going to make up the feast, and every one present did ample justice to the good things. A number of addresses were made in response to the call of Toastmaster Kerr, and the session was a delightful one throughout. Menter Shenkel was head waiter, and he performed the duties in a manner which would have done credit to a Jones.

EAST END

EAST END CITIZENS SHIVERED AND GRUMBLED.

Ft. Pitt Has Something Wrong With Its Mains And No End of Trouble Ensued.

An irate citizen of the East End entered the office of Attorney Davis this morning as if he had arrived at the conclusion that life was not worth living. He gave a crusty good morning to the occupants of the room and took down the receiver in the Columbiana 'phone. "Give me the Fort Pitt Gas company," he said in answer to the query from central. "Can't get them," was the response, "they have their receiver down and won't answer calls." "Say, central," he snorted, "if you ever get them tell them to go where they don't have to burn gas to keep warm." The obliging hello girl promised that she would.

Nearly all the patrons of this company were in about the same state of mind this morning. The pressure was weak all day yesterday and at about 9 o'clock the supply was shut off entirely. About 10:30 the pressure came on so strong that the blaze from the jets left burning in the stores reached almost to the ceiling. It looked so dangerous that Harry Meanor and Will Baird thought it best to awake the proprietors and have the gas shut off. This unusual pressure continued for about an hour and a half. Then there was no gas until an early hour this morning when the pressure was strong again for a time. It began to wane again, however, and for the remainder of the morning there was not enough to be utilized.

The inconvenience that attends the shortage in the gas supply can only be realized by those who have been through similar ordeals. With the exception of those who live along the St. George street the East End is dependent on the Ft. Pitt company for its supply. In nearly every home gas is used for both heating and cooking purposes so there is suffering from both cold and hunger when the supply fails. Fortunate indeed are those who have coal stoves for emergencies of this nature.

The complaints heard this morning were seriously uttered. This is the third time this fall that the trouble has occurred and the people are heartily tired of it. Many of them said they would discard the gas and return to burning coal. It is safe to predict that the other company would be liberally patronized if they would extend their service to all parts of the East End.

STRUCK BY A POLE

A Passenger Hanging to Street Car Steps Thrown to the Ground And Badly Hurt.

Lon Byers, an employe of the Harker pottery, was painfully injured yesterday evening about 6 o'clock while returning to his home after a day's work in the plant. He swung unto the steps of a street car as it was passing the pottery, but owing to the crowded condition of the rear platform he could not get beyond the steps and maintained his position by grasping the handle bars. About the time the car had attained the usual speed his head came in violent contact with a pole and he was thrown to the ground, where he lay as one dead.

The car was stopped and a number of passengers, one of them a brother of the injured man, ran to his assistance. He was placed on board the car and taken to the office of Dr. Marshall. An examination showed a deep cut on the back of his head and bruises about the neck and shoulder. Fortunately the skull is not fractured and Byers will be able to return to work in a few days.

They will take the room, however.

THE WEARY GRIND GOES ON.

Rumors of Coal Strike Settlement In Air, but Commissioners Continue Taking Testimony.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 5.—At yesterday's sessions of the anthracite strike commission, the representatives of the mine workers continued to call witnesses, all mostly practical miners, who told their story of the conditions as they exist in the Hazelton or Middle coal fields. The miners tried to show by these witnesses that the Coxe and other hard coal companies had violated the agreement entered into by both sides when the commission was appointed, that the strikers should return to work and be given their old places back, where they had not already been filled. Some of the witnesses called testified that they were not given back their old places, and maintained that men prominent in the union in the various localities during the strike were discriminated against. The commission has decided to invite the mine inspectors to appear before them, because the miners claim that the workmen fear to inform the mine inspectors of dangerous or unhealthy places in the mines, because the inspectors are usually accompanied by some representative of the company who may cause the man's dismissal. This is a new point before the commission.

Rumors of possible negotiations towards a settlement outside the commission continues to be heard. Lawyers admit they have heard such rumors, but say they know nothing about a possible settlement. Whatever is done will be first decided upon in New York, where those in authority to act are located. Several attorneys, among them W. W. Ross, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company, have returned to the metropolis. Whether or not it is in connection with peace negotiations cannot be learned here. The opinion still prevails here, and rather strongly, too, that the operators and the miners will agree on most points before the commission concludes its hearings.

Awarded Medal.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Prof. H. V. Hilprecht, the eminent archaeologist, was last night presented by the University of Pennsylvania with a diploma awarding to him the Lucy Wharton Drexel medal for his excavations at Nippur and his publications on the subject. The fund for the medals was established last month by Lucy Wharton Drexel, who donated to the university the sum of $2,000, the income of which is to be expended for medals to be awarded once a year, for the best archaeological excavation or for the best publication based on archaeological excavations by an English-speaking scholar named by those already possessing it.

Miners' Executive Board Meeting.

Shamokin, Pa., Dec. 5.—The Ninth district executive board of United Mine Workers met here yesterday, when it was officially announced that the district would not receive any more aid from the bituminous men for miners yet idle, owing to the recent strike. Secretary Hartlein reported there were between 5,000 and 6,000 men and boys out of work in Schuylkill, Northumberland, Columbia and Dauphin counties, comprising the district. Each local is at present looking after its idle members.

A delegation of Pittsburg business men, interested in river improvement, called on President Roosevelt at Washington and laid before him the resolutions adopted at the recent convention held at Parkersburg. They presented eloquent statistics and business-like arguments, showing exactly what is desired in the way of river improvement and the urgent need of prompt and decisive action by congress. The president, who long since had been converted to the rivermen's side of the question, was profoundly impressed and assured his visitors that he cordially approved the project outlined—a nine-foot channel from Pittsburg to Cairo—and would do his utmost to further the ends desired. The president is the right man in the right place. His promise is definite and sincere, and the champions of the project whose completion means so much to the Ohio valley and to the whole country have great reason to be encouraged. But they cannot afford to drop their campaign of education or relax their efforts to produce results. The president can help, but he cannot do everything. Before he can guarantee an improved river, the project must be laid before him in the form of a bill passed by both houses of congress, providing ways and means. Effort must henceforth be directed toward persuading the national legislators to act. With so many earnest and able men, aroused and alert and working for the success of the great project, a powerful influence will be brought to bear upon congress. The situation justifies the hope entertained by the promoters of the enterprise and should induce them to pursue their campaign with renewed vigor.

"In the industrial progress made by the United States during recent years there has been no more conspicuous feature than the growth of agriculture," says Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson in his annual report to the president, and he gives figures which are strong proof of the truth of the assertion. Yet he cites ways innumerable in which our agriculture can be benefited and scientific knowledge of farming extended. The agricultural department is doing excellent work, and there is abundant work for it to do. The most ancient and most important of human occupations is developing, for nothing in America stands still, but it will be many years before it reaches the stage of development which it can and ought to attain. Farming is a business that demands brains and skill, and the more both are applied to it the more it will prosper. One of the encouraging signs of the time is the increased number of educated men who turn their attention to farming, both because they love the occupation and because they find it profitable.

Milwaukee recently gave voting machines a test and approved them. In one of the wards in which the machines were used the population is almost entirely foreign born, and yet there was no difficulty in the voters manipulating the machines. The experience of Milwaukee is that of every city in which the machines are used. In several cities in New York state these machines are in regular service, and the voters would not be without them. They are perfectly accurate, easily managed and the will of the voter is expressed to a certainty. It is only a matter of time when the voting machine will be in general use.

One of the measures, work on which has begun with an evident purpose to push it to completion before the end of this session of congress is the army reorganization bill. There is urgent need of action on the question. Our military laws are antiquated and ill-adapted to a progressive country. We have but little use for an army ordinarily but when necessity for its use arises we want the most capable and effective one possible. Laws that will help and not retard are what we should have.

The Wheeling Evening Telegram, volume 1 No. 1, appeared on Wednesday. It is up-to-date in size, make-up and newsiness, well filled with advertisements, and looks as if it were destined to live long and prosper. Wheeling is an enterprising and growing city and certainly ought to afford an excellent field for another good newspaper. And from all indications the Telegraph is going to fill the bill.

Rapidly-increasing interest in the Americanized schools, and in education; an increase in industry; and a largely-increased demand among the natives for soap are three things that impressed an American observer in the Philippines that the natives are on the road to advancement and modern civilization.

We have not yet read Mr. Bryan's opinion of the president's message, but violate no confidence in stating that he thinks he could write a better one. He is almost alone in that opinion, however.

In making up a list of Christmas donations, the hospital, the churches and the Salvation army should not be overlooked. All can use cash to advantage.

The holiday trade is going to be good in East Liverpool, but the men who don't advertise are likely not to learn this fact.

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

AT THE THEATER

The latest London melodrama to be imported and produced in this country is "The Game of Life," written by the well-known English playwright, W. Howell Poole. This play has been a tremenduous success in London and the provinces for the past two years, and had its first American presentation at the Third Avenue theater, New York city, this season, where it met with instantaneous approval and record breaking business. At the Grand, Tuesday, November 9.

"Katzenjammer Kids" company, composed of bright and high-class specialty people, will be at the Grand tonight. This company will present novelty and comedy numbers. It comes here direct from a popular New York theater. It also had a long run in Philadelphia. Although it is simply a farce comedy, a conglomoration of funny situations, dialogues and costumes, the play has received flattering notices wherever presented.

"A Mother's Heart" will be the attraction at the Grand tomorrow night. This drama of intense human interest will be presented by a cast of extraordinary strength, including some of our best known actors. A pleasing feature is the introduction of little Beatrice Abbey, acknowledged to be the prettiest and most versatile child actress now before the public.

WELLSVILLE

YARDS CONGESTED

The C. & P. in Great Need of More Room in Wellsville—Remedies Suggested.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad is sadly in need of more yard room in this city just below the shops. Freight trains have been coming into the city for the past few days at a rapid rate and now the yards at the lower end of town are blocked and will probably remain that way for some time, as there are not enough engines at the shops to handle the incoming freight and at the same time clear away the blockade.

It has been well suggested by a city official that the city could afford to donate the railroad company a right of way for a switch to run along the river bank near the western corporation line from Eighteenth street. The advantage to the city if this suggestion was carried out would be the saving of the expense to the city of constructing a retaining wall at this point, which will have to be the case if something is not done soon.

It has been stated upon good authority that the railroad company is negotiating for the purchase of several pieces of property on Nevada street, between Seventeenth and Twentieth streets, for the purpose of widening the yards.

It is believed her that some time in the future the railroad company will own all of the property west of Eighteenth street and south of the C. & P. tracks to the city limits. When that time comes, all of this land will be devoted to enlarging the yards, and matters will be so arranged that the C. & P. will be able to handle an enormous freight business.

IRATE WOMEN

Loud in Their Threats Against a Barber, Who Talks of Prosecuting Boys.

John Bissman, who owns a barber shop on Thirteenth street, had his troubles last evening with a number of West End women, who declared that they would put Bissman out of business if he did not agree not to prosecute their boys who, on last Haloween partially damaged the barber shop sign in front of Bissman's shop.

One West End citizens, whose son was implicated in the deed, went to Bissman and offered to settle for what damage his son had done, but Bissman wanted $10, which is entirely out of reason, as the pole was not damaged to any great extent. Bissman declared that he knew all of the boys who were implicated in the matter and said that he would have them all prosecuted unless they paid him $10.

It was only a short time after this statement was made that the mothers of the boys who had done the damage put in their appearance at the barber shop. Bissman then had his troubles. One woman said: "If you have my son arrested, I will chop your old barber pole into kindling wood and I will put your infernal barber shop out of business."

Other women made similar statements which immediately put Bissman in an angry mood. Bissman has as yet prosecuted no one, and it is thought he will allow the matter to drop.

PICKED UP A CHECK

Endorsed Paper Worth $150 Found on the Street By George Boop.

George Boop, the well known West End barber, while returning to work at noon yesterday and while passing the corner of Fifteenth and Center streets, picked up an endorsed check for $150.

The check was drawn on the Silver Banking company, of this city, and was signed by the Carroll-Porter Boiler works. It was made payable to Golden Paisley and had evidently been endorsed by Mr. Paisley, as the endorsement bore his signature. The check was numbered 37. Mr. Boop still has the check in his possession and will hold it until the rightful owner claims his property.

Switch Plans Satisfactory.

The railroad committee of council held a special meeting last evening, together with several officials of the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad at the city hall. They talked over the plans for the new switch which is to be placed through the northern part of the city. The plans were opened before the committee, and after being carefully examined were found to be perfectly satisfactory. The committee will recommend their acceptance to the council at the next regular meeting.

Weaver-Rawlins.

Joseph Rawlins and Miss Minnie Weaver, both well known young people in this city, were quietly married Wednesday evening at the M. E. parsonage on Main street by Rev. C. E. Clark. The groom is a railroad man in the employ of the C. & P. and the bride is the daughter of Mrs. Albert Weaver, of Fifteenth street. The couple will make their home in New Philadelphia and will go to housekeeping there soon.

Maccabees' Meeting.

The regular bi-weekly lodge meeting of Advance Tent No. 501, Knights of the Maccabees, was held last evening at the hall on Main street. Regular lodge work was transacted. Several applications for membership were received and favorable action was taken.

Funeral of Mrs. Payne.

COUNCIL ALLOWS HIS CLAIMS FOR $9,681 FOR WORK.

The First Street Bridge Will Cost $5,000 to $6,000—The Matter Debated.

The council chamber was well filled last night when Mayor Shrader called the council to order. Only Solicitor Marshall was absent.

Mr. Hough, of the light committee, reported that he had seen Risinger Bros., and they had promised to repair the present street lights this week.

Engineer Boyd, who had been previously instructed to prepare an estimate of paving completed by Freshwater & Sons, was present and submitted to council the following bill for September, October and November: 7,000 cubic yard grading at 30 cents, $2,100; 4,157 feet of curbing, 60 cents, $2,494.20; 5,360.97 square feet paving, $1.10, $5,897.87; 241.8 rough curbing, 40 cents, $96.72; extra work as per bills, $98.39; 15 per cent as per contract for extra work, $14.73; 5,200 paving brick at $10.75 per thousand, $55.90; total $10,757.01; less 10 per cent, $1,075.70; amount due Freshwaters, $9,681.31.

The claims were ordered paid and a warrant for the amount given Mr. Freshwater, who was present.

Agent A. L. Skinner, of the railroad company, was present and presented a communication from the superintendent of the company in regard to First street crossing. It stated that the plan of bridge which would be suitable would cost $5,700. The council objected, however, to the plan in part, on account of only one foot walk being provided, and stated that nothing short of six-foot walks on both sides of the bridge would be satisfactory. The addition would cost $500 or $600 more.

The railroad company does not feel that this is necessary, but, if council insists, will offer no further objections. In conclusion the company agrees to contribute one-half the cost of the bridge, not to exceed $6,300. No action whatever was taken on this matter.

Council's attention was called to the bad condition of the street at the corner of Carolina and Third streets. Engineer Boyd was ordered to stop travel at that point until it could be repaired.

R. I. Hilliard asked council to turn the sewer from his lot on Carolina avenue. It was ordered closed up.

A communication from the tin plate company, asking council to repair Sixth street, leading from Carolina avenue to the mill, was received and the work ordered done.

The bills of T. S. Campbell and J. M. Williams for work done were presented and ordered paid.

Solicitor Marshall arrived at the council chamber after the meeting had adjourned. The bond sale had not been discussed on account of his absence, but the mayor called the members to order again. Upon inquiry the solicitor stated that he could fully explain the points of objection by the attorneys of J. F. Fullerton & Co., of Cleveland, who were to take the bonds. Nothing further was done on the matter.

Waitman Allison Disposes of a Valuable Tract to Oil Men.

W. L. Scott & Co., of Pittsburg, have sold for Waitman C. Allison to Frank McCann, of that city, the farm on the east branch of Tomlinson's run containing 153 acres. Consideration, $10,000. A fine brick dwelling with other good farm buildings are on the property.

This farm is in the heart of the oil and gas fields of Hancock county. It is said Mr. McCann has already leased the farm to a company of Cosaopolis, Pa., who will operate for oil soon. Mr. Allison, who has been residing in Coraopolis for the past year, sold his farm on account of the ill health of his wife. They will immediately leave for Colorado to make their future home.

An Excellent Gas Well.

The LaBelle Oil company had its gas well tested yesterday and it showed 350 pounds rock pressure. This is even better than was first supposed. It will be used for fuel in drilling more wells in the territory. The machine is being moved today to the Glass farm. Mr. Franzheim has his eye on another location just as soon as the Glass well is finished. He is much pleased with his gas well, which he says will be for sale soon.

The Well Abandoned.

The drillers at the well on the Tope farm, put down by the Horseshoe company, have not got out the tools which were stuck some time ago. The well had been drilled 800 feet. It has been abandoned and they are moving the rig to start another hole. Campbell Hutson has the contract for drilling the well.

More Siding Wanted.

Agent A. L. Skinner has asked the Panhandle Railroad company for more siding and has suggested that it put in a good siding at First street station. This if carried out will be a very great convenience to the town.

Cutting Timber.

Promise to Be a Good One.

The Freshwater & Carson well, No. 6, on the Carson farm reached the sand last night at midnight. They will drill it in today. This promises to be a good oil well.

Funeral of a Child.

An infant son of William Wallace, on Fairview street, died yesterday morning of pneumonia, aged about 10 months. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Hit By a Car.

Garrett Mercer was accidently hit by a Southside car this morning knocking him down, but no serious injury was sustained.

CHESTER NOTES.

Miss Anna Spear, of West Liberty, W. Va., is visiting Mrs. Dr. G. E. Lewis.

Harry Moore has moved to his farm which he recently purchased from Mrs. G. L. Baxter, on Tomlinson Run.

L. Priest left this morning for Wellsville where he will take a position as brakeman on a freight of the C. & P.

Alex. R. Campbell, Sr., is a candidate for the nomination for mayor of Wheeling on the Republican ticket. The primaries will be held tomorrow.

Mrs. J. R. Newell arrived home from Cramer, Ill., last evening much improved in health. She has been taking the mud baths at the sanitarium there.

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

TWO NEW SETS.

It is quite likely that the Burford Bros.' plant will be busy in all departments right through into the spring trade. Even the decorators, with whom work is usually slack at this time of the year, will find almost steady employment. The holiday vacation will probably begin with Christmas day and end with New Year's. The new "Pearle" shaps dinner set, which will be placed on the market for the spring trade will be photographed today. Several of these sets were in the decorating kiln yesterday. The new set is exquisitely designed and tastefully decorated, there being nothing on the market more desirable. The remodeled "Defender" toilet set is now ready for the market but will not be pushed until the beginning of the new year. The changes have added greatly to the beauty of this set and with it and the new dinner line the firm will be in excellent shape to capture its full share of the spring business. During the past week there has been a shortage of clay and that has resulted in considerable inconvenience and loss of time. Several of the jiggermen were loafing a few days this week but it is expected to have the trouble remedied before the end of the week. Energy is mostly directed toward getting orders on board the cars. All the fall orders have not yet been shipped and it is desired to have everything cleaned up several days before the holidays. Manager Buxton, of the decorating department, has been adding to the force in his department until it is the largest in the history of the plant. Four gilders and two fillers-in were taken on during the past week. The demands on this department have been imperative and Manager Buxton found it necessary to hustle constantly to prevent being swamped with orders.

ELIZABETHAN DELFT WARE.

The vicar and churchwarden of West Malling, a village near Maidstone, England, were recently offered £50 sterling for a beautiful delft ware flagon which they recently announced their intention to sell. The vessel, which bears the date 1581, and is believed to have been presented to the church by Sir Robert Brett, at one time lord of the manor, is elaborately decorated with curious figures. Members of the Kent Archaeological society, as well as prominent ratepayers of the parish, however, strongly objected to such a remarkable specimen of church plate being disposed if, and it is understood that the archbishop of Canterbury will be approached on the matter. The vicar and church wardens have decided to build a new porch to the church with the proceeds and they contend that, having complied with the usual formalities, they are at liberty to sell the article to the highest bidder.

POTTERY IN NEW YORK.

New York's population is eminently cosmopoltan in character. In no department is this better evidenced than in the pottery which is to be found in the foreign quarters of New York. The original pitchers, jugs, and mugs used by the housewife in her domestic duties exhibit quaint and original characteristics which are full of charm to the curio collectors. Many of these articles are of cheap string yellow ware, and a kitchen could be stocked with them for $2 or $3. A new creation of this domestic ware is a blue and gray ware; especially clean and cool looking are the butter crocks, with a traditional nondescript decoration. One of the oddest of these domestic utensils is a circular flat vessel of blue-gray earthenware, with a drinking scene in low relief; on one side is pierced ears, through which the ends of the handle are inserted. It has a jug mouth with a lip for pouring. These quaint vessels are used for carrying water or wine from shop to house, and are made in half and gallon sizes. It is said that they are made in Texas. In the Italian quarter many dainty little carafes and decanters of fine green glass and graceful egg shape bottles with long necks are to be found. In the Spanish quarters will be found an extremely effective green Spanish pottery, but the ware is coarse and cheap in production. In the Chinese quarter are to be found those inexpensive tea cups in the form of small bowls with smaller bowls to cover them of good shape and color, which form a part of almost every woman's china cabinet bric-a-brac. Good ginger jars may also be found in the Chinese quarters.

PRESIDENT LEE.

As predicted by the News Review Monday, on the day the local party left for Washington to attend the annual convention of the U. S. Poters' association, Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. This honor would have been his at the meeting last year had it not been for the peculiar conditions that existed at that time, making it advisable to select an eastern man. With these conditions removed the honor was almost unanimously bestowed. There is no doubt that his selection is a wise one, as he is entirely conversant with every phase of the potting business and will devote time and energy to his duties. The indications are that his reign will be a peaceful one. There is no dispute of moment between the operators and the operatives and it is not likely that the tariff will be molested, but if an emergency does arise, President Lee's prudence and sagacity can be relied upon.

"NATIONAL" DISCARDED.

It is reported today that only one jiggerman and four pressers are at work at the National. The turners, finishers, dish makers and all others in the clay department have been laid off, it is stated, until after the holidays. The reason assigned is that the company is discontinuing the manufacture of its National shape. The biscuit warehouse is full of it and the men were laid off to give the glost end a chance to catch up.

GOES TO CHESTER.

After a long service as a printer at Burford s, Frank Buxton will sever his connection with the plant. At the expiration of his notice he will accept a similar situation at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor plant at Chester. His departure will be regretted by all those employed in the decorating department.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

Tom Boyd, lately of the National, has taken a saucer jigger at Burford's.

Miss Maggie Wilson, of Wellsville, has taken a situation as finisher at Burford's.

Miss Mary McFarland, a finisher at Burford's, will visit Pittsburg friends Saturday and Sunday.

Allen Hunt, of Burford's, has returned to work again after being quarantined for 10 days, owing to scarlet fever at his home on Second street.

Harry Allison has given up his jigger at Burford's and taken one at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor.

It is reported that John Hedrich, a finisher at Burford's, will take a dish bench in the near future.

Miss Minnie Wilson, of the decorating department at Burford's, has been quite ill for the past week.

Fred Bloor, an experienced gilder employed lately at Sebring, has recently taken a situation at Burford's.

Clifford Rowling, mouldrunner for Jiggerman Will Ellis, at Burford's, is confined to his home on Thompson's hill with sickness

Mrs. Annie Eardley and Mina Schmelzenbach, of the decorating room at Burford's, will visit with Pittsburg relatives over Sunday.

BARBERS' TROUBLES

If This Latest Attempt Should Fail a Strike Would Probably Result.

The journeymen barbers of this city have at last decided upon a course of action, which will doubtless result in a settlement of the dispute between their organization and the boss barbers. If it fails to do this there will undoubtedly be a strike.

The differences between the two factions have been pending for two weeks, and have been aired at numerous meetings held by representatives from both sides. At one time the rtouble was almost settled and, it is said, if the bosses had showed as willing a disposition to deal as did the journeymen a settlement could easily have been effected. It was impossible for the journeymen to even obtain a conference with their employers, however, during the past two weeks, and the plan as prepared will be carried out at once.

At the regular meeting held last night a committee was appointed for the purpose of presenting the scale for the signature of the bosses. This committee is instructed to recognize no association nor board, but instead is to call upon shop owners individually. In each case the boss is to be given until next Friday to affix his signature to the document, and if he refuses the employes will be called out. This latest move, in the opinion of some of the members of the journeymen's union, is a trifle tardy, since it is precisely what the scale committee appointed weeks ago, should have done. These members hold that negotiations with the bosses' association were wrong. They attempt to prove this by the statement that even if an agreement had been reached with the representatives of the employers, there are those among the latter class who would have refused to abide by the decision. Therefore, the idea of giving every boss an opportunity individually to sign the scale is thought to be the only way to proceed.

VERY FLOURISHING

Is Pride of the East Council — New Officers Elected.

At the meeting of Pride of the East Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., held last night two candidates were initiated and the election of officers was held. Financial Secretary—Harry Todd.
Treasurer—Luther Minnix.
Warden—Thomas Buckley.

The lodge last night received an invitation from the Chester council to attend a meeting of the latter organization to be held one week from next Monday. The lodge at Chester has been increasing its membership quite rapidly of late, and on the night mentioned has a large class for initiation. The members of Pride of the East council will attend the meeting in a body.

East Liverpool Bowlers Defeated in Three Straight Games By Sebring Team.

The East Liverpool bowling team received a severe drubbing at the hands of the Sebring team last evening on the latters' alleys. Three games were played and each went to the Sebring bunch. The lineups of the teams follow: East Liverpool—Kerns, McEldowney, Craig, Clark and Rigby. Sebring—Miller, McLaughlin, Hughes, Mitchell and Tolson.

Fred Dunlap Laid to Rest.

Fred Dunlap, famous before the Brotherhood war in 1890 as king of second basemen, was buried at Odd Fellows' cemetery from an undertaking establishment in Philadelphia. Dunlap had been in ill health for a long time and died last Monday at the Philadelphia hospital. He was 43 years of age, and when in his prime as a ball player was considered the star fielding second baseman of the country. During the eighties Dunlap played with the St. Louis, Detroit and Pittsburg clubs, as well as with the Phillies, for a short period. He acted as captain of the Pittsburg team.

Tigers Want a Game.

May Keep Delehanty.

Michael P. Scanlon, one of the stockholders of the Washington team, says: "It all depends upon Del's luck at New Orleans whether he plays with Washington or New York. I knew several weeks ago that the big fellow had signed with McGraw, but the New York manager caught him at a time when he was in need of money, and he signed off-hand. If he makes good his losses at New Orleans I am most positive that he will return McGraw his advance money and report to Loftus."

Long Hockey Schedule.

Princeton's hockey team has a bright outlook, and a longer schedule than usual will be arranged. Efforts will be made to develop a fast team for the Christmas trip to Pittsburg, where some of the leading teams of western Pennsylvania and the Interscholastic league teams will be met. A training table will be started on December 10. A. Hazlehurst, '04, has been elected assistant manager of the team.

A Giant Pugilist.

There is a new fighting wonder in San Francisco who promises to become a champion some day. His name is Kelly, and they call him "Toothpick" for short, or, more properly, for "long," as he is nearly 7 feet tall and quite as heavy as big Ed Dunkhorst. Bill Naughton, the veteran fighting critic, is one of the coast authorities who thinks well of the giant.

Yale Leads.

Summarizing the standing of the eight legitimate leaders in eastern college foot ball, there is this order: First, Yale; second;, Princeton; third, Harvard; fourth, Brown; fifth, Pennsylvania; sixth, Amherst; seventh, Cornell, and eighth, Columbia.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

British Prison Ship in Which Thousands of Patriots Perished.

The British prison ship Jersey of infamous memory, recently discovered at the bottom of Wallabout bay, Brooklyn navy yard, after lying buried and forgotten for nearly a century, was more deadly to the patriots of the Revolution than were the bullets of King George's soldiers.

While driving spiles upon which the new 16,000 ton battleship Connecticut is to be constructed at the Brooklyn yard the timbers of a sunken vessel were encountered. Investigation proved that they could be no other than the bones of the "old Jersey."

Several ships had been anchored in Wallabout bay by the British during the Revolution to serve as prison ships for the patriots. But of all these terrible prison ships the "old Jersey"—the "Hell," as she was called—was the most notorious. She was originally a sixty-four gun ship, but had become unfit for actual war service.

PRISON SHIP JERSEY.

In 1782, when Alexander Coffin was sent a prisoner on board the old Jersey, he found about 1,100 prisoners there, many of whom during the severity of the winter were without clothing to keep them warm. To escape freezing it was even necessary to walk the decks briskly or to stay below. Only by using great effort could they keep from freezing, and many of the prisoners, wasted by sickness, had not the strength for the effort. They escaped smallpox and yellow fever only to fall victims to the cold.

In his memoirs Mr. Coffin says the prisoners were fed on putrid beef and pork and worm eaten bread which had been condemned on the English warships. It was so full of vermin that they had to beat it against the hull before they could eat it. On the upper gun deck hogs were kept in pens for the use of the officers. When the hogs were fed bran, the prisoners would steal it from the trough.

It is estimated that 11,000 patriots of the Revolution perished in the Jersey alone. After the Revolution she was abandoned and finally sank. It is not likely that she will be raised.

Sources of Alcohol.

Some terribly potent liquors, it is said, can be distilled from the innocent looking banana and also from the milk of the cocoanut. The Japanese make a beverage from plums and from the flowers of the motherwort and the peach. The Chinese produce several qualities of spirit from rice and peas, all of them intoxicating, besides which they can make an alcoholic drink from mutton.

Same Old Thing.

Tom—Did you call on that pretty telephone girl?

Dick—Yes, but I guess there was another fellow there ahead of me, or maybe it was only force of habit.

Tom—How do you mean?

Dick—My card came back with the message: "Busy. Please call again."—Philadelphia Press.

Reassuring George.

She had been shopping, and he was naturally disturbed.

"I hope you didn't spend much money while you were downtown today," he remarked.

"Not a cent except car fare, George," she answered reassuringly. "I had everything charged."—Chicago Post.

Mgr. Martinelli's Successor Is an American Citizen.

Interest in the new apostolic delegate from Rome, Mgr. Diomede Falconio, is enhanced by the fact that the pope in selecting his representative to this country chose a citizen of the United States.

Mgr. Falconio came to this country in 1865 and in that year took out his first papers in Cattaraugus county, N. Y. Subsequently he completed his citizenship in time to vote for General Grant for president in 1872. He was a warm admirer of General Grant, and one of his most treasured possessions is an autograph photo presented to him by the great soldier president.

Mgr. Falconio is a native of Italy and in 1860, at the age of eighteen, joined the Franciscan order of friars minor. Five years later he was sent to the United States as a teacher of classics at St. Bonaventure's college, Allegany, N. Y. He was ordained a priest the following year.

He remained at the college for several years and was then sent to assist the bishop of Harbor Grace, in Newfoundland. In this diocese he labored as vicar general and administrator until 1870, when he went to New York city and spent some time doing parish work in St. Anthony's church. Later he went home to Italy and in 1892 was made archbishop of Acrenza.

MGR. DIOMEDE FALCONIO.

Mgr. Falconio is a man of imposing figure, dignified demeanor, gentle heart and simple ways. He is thoroughly in sympathy with American ways and institutions. Churchmen are pleased with his elevation. He has an intimate knowledge of all the knotty ecclesiastical questions which Cardinal Martinelli left unsettled. He has been apostolic delegate to Canada since 1899.

Mgr. Falconio's selection is due largely to his long experience in this country and Canada and his perfect command of the English language. He is a brilliant scholar and an able diplomat and is therefore especially fitted for the Washington post.

A Simple System.

Pupil—I don't know.

Teacher—It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve apostles. Add half that number to them. That's eighteen. Multiply that by 100. That's 1,800. Take the twelve apostles again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's fifteen. Add what you've got. That's 1,815. That's the date. Quite simple, you see, to remember dates if you will only adopt my system.

Making Sure.

This hunting story comes from Scotland: When the beaters came out of the covert, one of the guns said to the keeper, "Have you got all your beaters out?"

"Aye," said the man, astonished.

"Are you sure? Have you counted them?"

"Counted them?" said the keeper. "Aye, they're all right."

"Then," said the shooter, with a sigh of some relief, "I have shot a roe."

Monarchical Customs Still Observed In the Republic — Perquisites of Some Cabinet Members—M. Combes, the French Premier.

The opening of the French chamber of deputies, always interesting as a spectacle, attracted unusual attention at the recent reassembling by reason of the troubles in France during the past summer caused by the enforcement of what is called the associations law.

Premier Jean Louis Combes, who succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau as prime minister a few months ago, is held responsible for the enforcement of the law, which is aimed to bring certain orders of the Catholic church under government control or to disperse the congregations. In this Premier Combes has the support of the majority of the deputies, and the country at large by the last general election and by the resolutions recently adopted with an overwhelming majority of departmental legislatures is committed to the same policy.

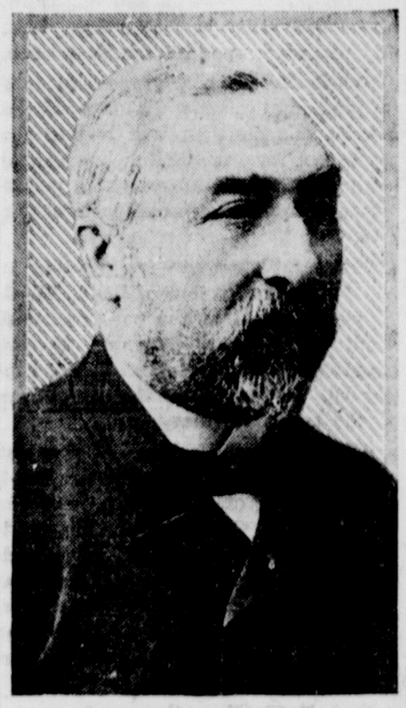
The opponents of the law have been clamoring for the return of M. Waldeck-Rosseau to the head of the cabinet, but it is unlikely that they will prove strong enough to cause the downfall of Premier Combes.

Dr. Combes is a man of wealth and great mental force. He has been active in politics since 1876 and is what is known as a progressive Republican in politics. He was formerly vice president of the French senate.

Before he entered politics Dr. Combes, who is sixty-two years of age, had amassed a fortune in business. When he made his first race for membership in the chamber he had a hard fight to secure his seat, but triumphed over his difficulties. Since then he has been a prominent figure in the chamber and the senate and has made many friends in both bodies.

A good deal of the pomp and ceremony which pertain to monarchies still clings to the opening of the French chamber of deputies, which corresponds to our house of representatives.

The president of the chamber lives in a mansion on the Quai d'Orsay, the grounds of which join those surrounding the chamber of deputies. Before the opening of each sitting he is escorted through the long salle des pas perdus (reserved for the use of members and journalists) by a detachment of infantry in command of a captain. The drums beat and the procession is preceded by a gorgeously attired usher, who announces, "Monsieur le president." Other ushers—or policemen in times of excitement—form a double line to keep the passage clear.



DR. JEAN LOUIS COMBES.

Thus escorted, the president mounts to his seat, high above the tribune from which the members speak, and immediately there is a rush of the members to be seated. After tapping his desk with a large paper knife or in case of much noise ringing a brass bell the president declares the sitting open, and the discussion of the day begins.

The ushers form a not unimportant part in the proceedings. Those inside the chamber wear evening dress, white ties and swords, and when in the heat of debate deputies become excited the ushers have frequently to interpose to prevent a bout of fisticuffs.

It is upon these occasions that the French assembly treats the world to some of those surprises, which are hard to understand, whereby a government majority of today is turned into a minority tomorrow.

But still the majority of the deputies are men who would be loath to lose their pay of 25 francs per day and the honors attached to the post of representative of the people. That is why the fear of dissolution often induces them to give a ministry a majority rather than provoke its overthrow and the crisis consequent thereon, with the added doubt of their being returned as members of the chamber.

M. Combes, besides being premier, is also minister of the interior. This post and that of finance are the most sought after, for, besides the importance of the posts, there is an ancient custom in connection with them. The day after the acceptance of either of these portfolios one of the ushers calls upon each minister and hands him an envelope containing 60,000 francs for moving expenses. If he retains the portfolio but a single day, he does not return the $12,000, nor is he expected to.

Luxury as a Handicap.

The history of our country is a record of the successes of poor boys who seemed to be hopelessly shut off from books, culture and education, except that of the most meager kind—from almost every opportunity for mental development. The youthful Franklins, Lincolns, Hamiltons, Garfields, Grants and Claytons—those who become presidents, lawyers, statesmen, soldiers, orators, merchants, educators, journalists, inventors, giants in every department of life—how they stand out from the pages of history, those poor boys, an inspiration for all time to those who are born to fight their way up to their own loaf!

The youth who is reared in a luxurious home, who from the moment of his birth is waited on by an army of servants, pampered and indulged by overfond parents and deprived of every incentive to develop himself mentally or physically, although commonly regarded as one to be envied, is more to be pitied than the poorest, most humbly born boy or girl in the land. Unless he is gifted with an unusual mind he is in danger of becoming a degenerate, a parasite, a creature who lives on the labor of others, whose powers ultimately atrophy from disuse.—Success.

MRS. DAVIDSON'S PARTY

Pleasing Entertainment at a Broadway Home—Mayor Adds to the Enjoyment.

Mrs. Jennie Davidson, of Broadway, last evening entertained at dinner a party of ladies, a number being friends of her girlhood. The table was beautifully decorated with carnations and ferns. After ample justice to a most delightful menu the evening was spent in social chat and in relating reminiscences.

An innovation was the appearance of Mayor Davidson, son of the hostess, who paid his compliments to the guests and entertained them with several funny stories. Later George Davidson, who has just returned from a brief hunting trip, appeared and most cordially greeted those present. Mrs. Davidson sustained her well known reputation as a most genial hostess.

The Chautauqua Circle.

At the home of Mrs. Ira Eeels, on Thompson avenue, Chautauqua circle will convene this evening. At present the society is composed of 14 members. A larger enrollment is expected soon. Mrs. McKelvy will open the meeting with a brief parliamentary drill. Miss Sawyer will give a reading on Russia, followed by a quiz on three prominent Englishmen, Cobden, Stevenson and Russell. The officers of the society are: Mrs. W. R. Romey, president; Miss Agnes Jones, secretary; Mrs. Monroe Patterson, treasurer. The meetings occur every Friday evening at the home of one of the members.

In Honor of Ralph Marsh.

The party given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thompson, Fourth street, was a most pleasant affair. The occasion was the seventy-second birthday anniversary of Ralph Marsh, uncle of Mrs. Thompson, and the party was given in his honor. A large number of guests were present and the evening was passed with cards. The house was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns. Mr. Marsh has spent the greater portion of his life in East Liverpool, and is one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of the city.

Enjoyable Spelling Bee.

The spelling bee given last night by Stratton Circle No. 20, P. H. C., was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. W. Erwin Dunlap and Attorney W. E. Warren were selected as captains to divide the house. The contest between the two sides was spirited and finally narrowed down to Paige Myler, of Calcutta, on Mr. Dunlap's side, and D. F. White, of the East End, on Mr. Warren's side. The latter failed to spell the word "plurality" correctly and the first prize, a beautiful piece of cut glass, was given to Mr. Myler. Members were present from the East End, Calcutta, Chester and Wellsville circles.

A Delightful Affair.

Miss May Scraggs was the hostess at a card party at her home on Avondale street last evening. About 50 guests composed the party. Miss Maud Carr assisted. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent, the guests leaving at a late hour.

CIVILIZATION AND INSANITY

Dr. Eyman, of Massillon State Hospital, Says They Go Hand in Hand.

In Lunacy in Ohio By Artificial Conditions of Life, Mental Strain And Intemperance in Eating And Drinking—Medical Care Better.

Massillon, December 5.—Supt. H. C. Eyman, of the Massillon State hospital, yesterday presented his annual report to the trustees of the institution and they in turn presented it to Governor Nash.

According to the report insanity is increasing out of proportion to the increase in the population of Ohio. The chief factors in the production of insanity are hereditary, dissipation in its various forms, including intemperance in eating and drinking, toxic agents, poverty, worry, anxiety and diseases.

"Civilization and insanity go hand in hand," says Dr. Eyman. "Not that civilization produces insanity per se, but the environments and conditions brought about by our somewhat artificial manner of living, due to the present civilization, induces cares and duties that force the brain of modern man to a very much greater strain than that of primitive man. Forced thus to new, complex and everchanging duties it has many issues thrown upon it, all different from the others, and requiring new lines of thought and consequent strain. This, in connection with the mad rush for existence, brings about brain fatigue, and frequently all the diseases consequent upon lack of nutrition to an unstable brain. It can be safely stated that the medical care of the insane is better now that at any former time in the history of the state. It must ever be borne in mind that moral and suggestive therapeutics have a fixed and permanent abiding place in the armamentarium of all our institutions of this kind. Employment, amusement and diversion are absolute essentials to the proper management of mental troubles."

Dr. Eyman is a national authority on insanity and for years was at the head of the State hospital at Cleveland, succeeding Dr. Richardson as director of the institution of which he is now the manager.

Under the heading of dissipation it is noticeable that Dr. Eyman makes reference to overeating as a factor in the production of insanity. It is also a matter of note that toxic agents are blamed with producing an increase. Under this heading are grouped the various stimulants and narcotics that are now fashionable, such as the derivatives of opium, cocaine and similar drugs. Dr. Eyman recommends the improvement of the surgeries of insane hospitals, indicating that in some cases the knife will bring relief from mental troubles. This, no doubt, is based upon the recent operations of an intercranial character, whereby pieces of the skull are removed to relieve congested arteries in the brain.

HONORED AND REVERED

A Circuit Rider in Early Years And Afterward Pastor at Yellow Creek And Salineville — Had His Horse Taught to Swim the Ohio.

Toronto, December 5.—Living near the outskirts of this town, in a pleasant, old-fashioned, but comfortable home, is a remarkeable man; not only on account of his great age, but also for his carreer of usefulness and the love lavished on him by the entire community. He is Rev. James M. Bray, Sr. He is not only locally known, but his fame covers the wide scope of the entire East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal hurch, of which he is an honored and revered minister, having been in this conference 65 years.

Rev. Mr. Bray is hale and vigorous for one of his years, as he is now 95 years old. He takes a lively interest in all that transpires, and reads his Bible and the news of the day with avidity. Until recently he walked to and from this village, a distance of one and one-half miles. Last month he addressed an old folks' meeting in the First Methodist church, of Toronto, and his talk was logical, and his voice strong.

Rev. Mr. Bray was born December 24, 1807, at Hartford, Conn., and strange to say, the woman he was destined to wed and live with for 69 years was born at the same time. At the early age of 17 he was granted an exhorter's license, and at 20 was a fully ordained Methodist Episcopal minister. When 19 years of age, at Hartford, Conn., he married Eliza Matthews and they lived happily together until seven years ago when she died. No children were born to this union, but the couple adopted a son of the minister's brother. This son is now 63 years of age. His name is James M. Bray, Jr. He is a minister and is now here caring for his adopted father, having given up preaching temporarily to do so. Elizabeth Griffith, an aged woman who has been with the minister's family for 47 years, is his housekeeper.

When Rev. Mr. Bray was born he weighed just three pounds and his entire foot could be covered by the first joint of his mother's thumb. As a child and young man he was puny and delicate, and being a confirmed dyspeptic, it was never thought he would live long.

In 1837 he came to Toronto, and became a circuit rider, his first circuit beginning at Yellow Creek, nine miles north of here; thence to Salineville, Columbiana county; thence to Smithfield, Jefferson county; thence to Martin's Ferry, Belmont county; and back to Yellow Creek and through what is now Toronto. The distance was 80 miles. There were no railways then and few churches, so he preached mostly in school houses and churches, and lodged whereever night overtook him. He rode a horse which was trained and swam the Ohio river.

This strenuous open-air life doubtless strengthened a primarily weak constitution, and was the basis of his longevity. He founded and built many churches, among them Brady's chapel, on Island creek, near here. He frequently preached three and four times a day, and was noted as a successful evengelist. He was always noted for his fiery zeal and the fullness of his tones.

He has been superannuated 18 years, but actively preached until three years ago. He says he could yet address an audience for an hour when he got "fired up," and confidently expected to do so next summer.

Farmer Puts Paper Money Into His Shot Gun for Safekeeping And Then Shoots a Rabbit.

Chagrin Falls, December 5.—Ben Barber, a prominent farmer of Orange township who is well known throughout Cuyahoga county, fearing burglars on account of the numerous recent depredations committed in the township and not being able to come to town to deposit his money, hid it in various places throughout the house. He rolled up a twenty dollar bill and placed it in his breech-loading shot gun.

Monday he went out hunting, forgot all about where he had deposited the money, shot a rabbit, and is still looking for the $20 bill.

Under a Law Druggists Are Required to Register All Poisons Sold.

The Krause poison law goes into effect January 1. Druggists, under its provisions, are required to register all poison, to whom and for what purpose. This record is to be kept on file in the pharmacy for the period of five years, and the dispenser of the poison, whether the owner of the place or a clerk, is required to register his own signature on all sales made. Druggists are forbidden to sell poison to children or insane persons, and heavy penalties are provided for violation of this provision of the law.

Bridge Destroyed by Fire.

Bedford, Pa., Dec. 5.—The long wooden bridge that crosses the Juniata river at the narrows on the Bedford & Chambersburg turnpike about a mile from here, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire is believed to have been the work of some persons who have been angered at the protracted litigation over the condemnation of the turnpike by the court and have taken the law into their own hands. A notice was posted for the keeper of the toll gate, telling him to move out as his house would be blown up soon. There is no clue to the incendiaries.

HE NOW HAS KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Better So Far as the Appendicitis Symptoms Are Concerned, but the Uraemic Features Give the Case a Much Graver Aspect.

Washington, Dec. 5.—At 11:30 o'clock last night the condition of ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who has been ill here since Tuesday evening, was reported to be critical. A few minutes before that time Dr. Gardiner, one of the attending physicians, handed the following bulletin to the press:

"At 10 o'clock Mr. Reed's condition is as follows: Temperature, 100 2-5; pulse, 88; respiration, 34. Mr. Reed suffered from some degree of uraemic coma during the afternoon, but his mind is again clear this evening. His appendicitical symptoms are rapidly subsiding, and his appendicitis is not an important factor in his present condition.

"W. C. GOODNOW, M. D.,
"F. A. GARDINER, M. D.,
"T. L. MACDONALD, M. D."

Not Disposed to Talk.

Dr. Gardiner made two visits to his patient during the evening, leaving the first time at half-past 8 o'clock. Later he and Drs. Goodnow and MacDonald came and remained at the hotel for nearly two hours, some of the time with Mrs. Reed and the remainder in consultation over the case. Dr. Goodnow, whose name appears to the bulletin, in addition to the other physicians, is a Philadelphian, and was called into the case as "expert consultant." He expected to leave for home again on the midnight train. Dr. Gardiner was not disposed to talk about the case last night nor to add anything to the bulletin, saying that it contained an exact statement of Mr. Reed's condition. He did say, however, that Mr. Reed's condition was critical, but that it was better than at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In some respects Mr. Reed, he added, was better than Wednesday night, and in some respects he was worse. He was better so far as the appendicitis symptoms were concerned, but the uraemic features gave the case a graver aspect. After issuing the bulletin the doctor said he was going home for the night and would leave his assistant, Dr. Bishop, who would remain with Mr. Reed during the night.

At 1:30 this morning Mr. Reed's condition was unchanged and all was was quiet in his rom.

Fourteen Men Met Frightful Deaths in a Chicago Hotel Fire.

SMALLEST ROOMS EVER SEEN.

Coroner and Fire Chief Unite in Declaring that Building Was Veritable Trap—Structure Had Been Condemned by Building Inspector.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Fourteen men met death by suffocation yesterday morning in a fire which occurred at 6 o'clock in the Lincoln hotel, 176 Madison street. Thirteen of those who lost their lives were stifled while lying in their beds. One was taken from the building alive, but died in the ambulance on the way to the nearest hospital.

Coroner Traeger, after inspecting the building, united with Fire Chief Musham in declaring that the building was a veritable trap and never should have been used for hotel purposes. Chief Musham declared that there was such wide cracks in the floor that the smoke poured through the buildings in clouds, rendering escape extremely difficult for those on the upper floors.

There was no fire escape on the front of the building, although one was in process of construction. The scaffolding was up and from it dangled several ropes, down which a number of people slid to the pavement after all escape by the stairway had been cut off.

List of the dead: I. C. Yocum, fire insurance agent, prominent in Davenport, Ia.; Samuel Yocum, son of I. C. Yocum, Davenport, Ia.; A. B. Coon, lawyer, Marengo, Ill.; F. L. Ewing, mail clerk, Marietta, O.; B. F. Boswell, Chicago; T. V. Slocum, machine dealer, Wauconda, Ill.; H. K. Woods, Lebanon, Ind.; Edward Toner, printer, Milwaukee; F. W. Corey, 29 years of age, railway postal clerk, Bucyrus, O.; Ward Lowe, railway postal clerk, Sechlerville, Wis.; M. M. Hardy, traveling salesman, Janesville, Wis.; C. P. Cowan, collector on the Wabash railroad, St. Louis; George B. Graves, compositor, Chicago; unidentified man, 5 feet 8 inches, 165 pounds, 45 years of age, thin brown hair and moustache.

The injured: J. S. Allison, Richland Center, Wis., cut about the hands; Edward Davenport, Chicago, injured internally by jumping from fourth story to roof of adjoining building; W. G. Thomas, Cedar Rapids, Ia., badly cut and burned; William M. Snyder, Loom City, Ia., bruised by falling down stairs; Mrs. June Shepperd, Chicago, back strained, arms and hands cut and bruised; Robert C. Hamilton, Lebanon Ind., hands cut; Cliff Ward, Battle Creek, Mich., cut about head and hands lacerated; Fred G. Baker, Nashville, Mich., feet burned; Irwin Westerland, Chicago, feet burned; Olof Oldorf, Chicago, hands lacerated.

The hotel was four stories in height and contained an unusual number of rooms for a hotel of its size. After the fire Chief Musham, of the fire department, declared that they were the smallest rooms he had ever seen in any building. Had there been fewer partitions, he declared, the chance of life for those sleeping on the upper floors of the hotel would have been greatly increased.

F. A. Smith, proprietor of the hotel, declared that there was, as nearly as he could judge without his books, about 125 people in the hotel.

Tried to Alarm Guests.

Night Clerk Weber discovered the smoke pouring through the halls shortly before 6 o'clock and did his best to alarm the guests, but the smoke was so dense and increased in volume so rapidly that he was unabe to arouse only a small number and was then compelled to grope his way to the street to avoid suffocation. The guests came pouring down the one stairway of the building in all stages of undress and several leaped from the windows of the second story to the sidewalk below and escaped without serious injury. A number of men, turned back by the smoke in hallways, which prevented them from finding the stairs, swung down on the ropes placed in front of the building by the workmen who were erecting the fire escape. The firemen, who arrived with great promptitude, saved many lives by carrying people down the ladders from the windows. The smoke on the inside of the building was so thick and so pungent that the firemen were unable to do more than take the people from the windows. Those who were not able to reach the windows in a few minutes after the fire broke out were suffocated. The fire in itself amounted to very little.

Building Had Been Condemned.

The building was some time ago condemned by the city building inspectors as unsafe for hotel purposes and the owners were three weeks ago ordered to place a stairway in the rear and also to build a fire escape on the front of the building. Beyond the preliminary work for the fire escape nothing had been done, however.

A jury was empaneled yesterday afternoon by Coroner Traeger to ascertain the causes of the disaster and to fix the guilt for negligence. After viewing the bodies of the victims of the fire, the jury went to the hotel, where an examination was made of the premises. The jurors were then dismissed, to meet for the inquest, which will begin Dec. 12. At the conclusion of the inspection Coroner Traeger said:

"The fire undoubtedly was caused by the explosion of an oil stove in the rear of the third floor. The building is very carelessly constructed, the fire escape is worthless, the rooms are outrageously small, and it is nothing short of a crime that such a building should be used as a housing place for human beings."

DISTRUSTS CASTRO'S PROMISES

Caracas, Dec. 5.—The British cruiser Indefatigable arrived yesterday at La Guaira. Three more British warships are expected.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The note of President Castro, of Venezuela, presented to the German minister at Caracas a week ago, is not satisfactory to the German government. It is deemed inadequate and as being probably designed to gain further time. Its partial acceptance of the German demands was coupled with conditions that were unacceptable.

The exchange of views with the British foreign office has resulted in a decision to proceed with the joint action. An ultimatum will almost certainly be presented in a few days. The phrasing of the note is the subject of present correspondence between the respective governments, whose action will not await the arrival in the West Indies of the cruisers Amazone, Nicobe and Ariadne, as Germany already has an ample force there. The departure of these cruisers has been indefinitely postponed.

A seemingly inspired article in the Cologne Gazete says that despite Germany's patience with Venezuela all hope has been abandoned in Berlin of a peaceful settlement, and that Venezuela has treated Germany in a manner almost insulting, because Venezuela published official communications without Germany's consent, coupled with improper comments.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—There is no ground for alarming stories which are being printed over the possibility of a collision between the United States and Germany and Great Britain over the coercive measures about to be applied by the two last mentioned powers for the purpose of collecting debts due German and British subjects.

The attitude of this administration with reference to just such a state of affairs as has arisen with reference to the Venezuelan government was stated by President Roosevelt in his first message to congress in which he said:

"The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of acquisition of territory by any non-American power."

RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached With Cuban Representatives, but Signing of Document Delayed.

Ha ana, Dec. 5.—The reciprocity negotiations began by Gen. Tasker Bliss and the Cuban Secretaries Zaldo and Montes is practically at a standstill, owing to the latter desiring to await the outcome of the bill introduced in the house of representatives providing for the appointment of a committee to draw up a bill defining the limits of the concessions which the Cuban government can offer foreign countries in negotiating reciprocity treaties. A committee of the house began the study of the question yesterday. It is known that Secretaries Zaldo and Montes have reached a satisactory agreement with Gen. Bliss, and that practically all that is left to be done is the signing of the agreement, but they do not wish to assume any responsibility, especially since the recent cabinet crisis, and in view of the apparent determination on the part of the nationalist party to oppose the government. The nationalists claim to control the house, and the bill referred to is a nationalist measure. In a discussion in the senate yesterday on the subject, Senor Sanguily said an agreement signed by President Palma and Secretaries Zaldo and Montes would not be binding, and that the matter must be brought before both houses of parliament. Congress, he said, should be informed regarding the particulars of the proposed treaty in order that it might intelligently discuss the changes in the tariff.

CADAVERS ARE VERY SCARCE.

Investigation Causes Prices of Bodies to Rise to Unheard of Figures.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5.—A scarcity of cadavers for legitimate use in the medical colleges here and in Louisville, Ky., is said to be impending, and prices of bodies have risen to unheard of figures. The scarcity is attributed to the Indianapolis investigation. It is said that ghouls in the employ of colleges all over the central states have become apprehensive for fear that a general investigation is to be made, and they are seeking other ways of earning a livelihood. It is said there has been no body snatching in Indiana since the investigation began.

F. M. Hollingsworth and William Gulliver, of Pike township, called at the county jail yesterday and asked Cantrell if any bodies had been disturbed in the Bethel cemetery. Cantrell said he was sorry to tell them that he thought every body buried in the place, previous to the beginning of the investigation, had been taken.

Great Rejoicing.

Ardmore, I. T., Dec. 5.—The proposition to combine Indian territory and Oklahoma as a single state, as provided for in the bill before congress, is generally favored throughout this section. There was great rejoicing in the towns when the senate committee on territories favorably reported the bill providing for single statehood. An organization will be perfected immediately to work for single statehood, which up to the present time has been considered impossible. Each town in the Indian territory is to send representatives to Washington to work for union with Oklahoma.

Ham Baked In Cider.

A ham baked in cider is delicious. Choose a good lean ham of about eight pounds. Wash thoroughly and over the fleshy side sprinkle a little chopped onion, a little clove and allspice, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a half teaspoonful of ground ginger. Make flour and water into a paste as thick as dough and cover the ham. Put skin side down in a roasting pan, fill up with cider, cook slowly for three hours, basting every ten minutes. When done, take off the paste and the rind. An hour before it is wanted for the table return to the baking pan, flesh side down, brush the fat portion with beaten egg, sprinkle generously with chopped parsley and breadcrumbs and let it heat through in the oven. A gravy can be made by boiling down the cider in which the ham was first roasted.

Hard to Believe.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Bliggins.

"What's the matter?" asked her husband in a startled tone as he turned around from his shaving glass.

"The idea of a grown man like you standing there for five minutes at a time admiring yourself!"

"I'm not admiring myself. My feelings are those of astonishment, not admiration. I can't realize that I'm the same person who years ago was called 'precious pet' and held on people's knees and kissed by the neighbors. It's an awful thought."—Washington Star.

Yes, Indeed!

When a man gets tired out and ill, he goes fishing, returning shortly with three wall eyed pike, restored health and a blister on his nose. When a woman feels that way, she hangs around the house and cries if anybody looks at her. It must be lovely to be a man—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fin' a day for yer deeing and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind., "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventative and cure for croup." RIDING TO HOUNDS

FAIR DEVOTEES OF THIS DANGEROUS AND EXCITING SPORT.

This is the season when those lucky folks who have the inclination as well as time and money mount their thoroughbred hunters and pursue sly Sir Reynard over hill and dale to the music of beating hoofs and baying hounds.

Sometimes the pursuit of the fox is diversified by a run after an aniseed bag dragged over the ground as a scent for the dogs to follow. But it amounts to pretty much the same thing in the end, for the bag is dragged over a course fully as difficult as the one likely to be chosen by the bushy tailed fox, and the glory of "first in at the death" is as eagerly competed for.

From now until Christmas those who dwell near the haunts of the Meadow Brook hunt on Long Island and the Radnor and Rose Tree hunts, near Philadelphia, may hear the baying hounds on any morning and if they choose to go afield may behold the gay company of riders in all their fine array.

These three hunt clubs, organized exclusively for the sport of fox chasing on horseback, are the most famous of the kind in America.

The Meadow Brook hunt bears the distinction of having President Roosevelt as a fellow member. The 300 odd millionaires who compose this club also take pride in the knowledge that two women among them are acknowledged to be the leading horsewomen in America. They are Mrs. James L. Kernochan and Mrs. Emily Ladenburg.

Mrs. Kernochan is perhaps the better known in this country, where she does all her hunting, mostly around New York, where she began making her reputation as a fearless horsewoman about five or six years ago. As Miss Eloise Stevenson she cared not one jot or tittle for fox hunting, but shortly after her marriage she cultivated a fondness for it, and now she is one of the regulars at every club hunt. She has not missed a half dozen meets in the years she has been following the hounds, and the Meadow Brook averages three a week.

Fellow huntsmen say Mrs. Kernochan is absolutely without fear. She "rides straight," as they say. Fences or walls have no terrors for her nor do they cause her to draw rein, but many men balk at such obstacles and prefer to go around rather than risk their precious necks in a jump. Mrs. Kernochan has suffered several falls, but has always escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Ladenburg, like Mrs. Kernochan, is young and fair. She is the widow of Adolph Ladenburg and has a fortune of about $7,000,000. She spends a good bit of her income in hunting, not only on Long Island, but in Europe, at Newport and at Aiken, N. C. Unlike her fair rival, she grew up in the saddle. As a mere girl she hunted with the Rockaway hounds, of which her brother, Eben Stevens, was at one time master.

Among other accomplished and fearless women hunters are Miss Randolph, daughter of William C. Whitney's second wife, who was mortally injured while following the hounds at Aiken, S. C.; Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. H. Van R. Kennedy, Miss May Bird, Miss Maud Livingston and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, all constant attendants at the meets.

Among the men the palm is generally accorded to P. F. Collier. He is the oldest active huntsman by all odds. Most men stop following the hounds when they reach middle age, but Mr. Collier at seventy odd years attends the meets with as clocklike regularity as he did in his younger days. Whenever the bugle sounds the start he is pretty sure to be on hand, and before the hunt is over he usually manages to run away from nearly all the young bloods who endeavor to keep up with him.

The Vanderbilts and Goulds have not until recently taken up this dangerous and exciting sport. Reginald and Alfred Vanderbilt, like George Gould, are well known as polo players and from this have graduated into huntsmen.

George Gould has planned to build a house on the Hempstead plains, and as this is in the heart of the fox hunting country on Long Island he may be expected to join his fellow millionaires in the pursuit of the fox and risk his neck for the sake of the coveted "brush."

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,

XII.—The Geographical Story of Trees.

THE earliest terrestrial plants were doubtless very lowly creeping things, some of them probably not unlike the insignificant liverworts that adorn the damp and shady corners of our northern world today. We have doubtless all observed these beautiful though less appreciated little things, creeping, ribbonlike structures, covering the ground in woods or spread over the whole moist surface of a perpendicularly rocky wall hard by some spring or stream. The earliest terrestrial plants, so far as can be guessed, were not unlike some of these. We may imagine them covering all the ground in those faroff days, struggling constantly among themselves for room. For plants, as for some other things, there is but one direction in which room increases as we go. That direction is upward. And so our terrestrial plants no doubt soon learned to push their branches upward, the better to secure the light and air. But the relief is only temporary. Once the upward habit is indulged forthwith ensues new rivalry. Crowding becomes as intolerable as before. Every rising plant tries hard to overtop its fellows. At first the stems lean one upon another and so remain erect. Anon the stiffer plants derive advantage, and those with forming woody tissues able to stand alone far outreach and overshadow all the rest. These changes, of course, no one has seen, but in some such way we may assume the plants of ancient times attained at length arboreal habit. For such accomplishments there was no lack of time, as the geological record shows. For ages the earth was filled with vegetation before ever a tree or a treelike plant appeared.

In order to appreciate properly what geology has to tell about the history of trees on the planet, it will be necessary for us to understand the manner in which students of the earth's history divide past terrestrial time. The recorded history of the earth, recorded by the succession of stratified rocks, names several definite ages or periods of past time, each represented by a distinct system of the stony strata. If we call these time divisions each by the name of its rock system, we may have, beginning with the oldest, the archean, laurentian, cambrian, silurian, devonian, carboniferous, triassic, jurassic, cretaceous, tertiary and recent. Let this be for us simply a time card to which we may refer what is known of the history of trees. It must be borne in mind, however, that these names describe periods by no means of equal length. The first three or four represent perhaps greater length of time than all the rest put together. Any one of them, however, is far enough away from us in time, for the duration of these geologic periods was vast beyond all human computation. Now, the oldest arboreal plants come to us from the devonian. Very curious looking trees they must have been, having little resemblance to any of our modern forms save in the fact that they had woody tissues and stood erect. Some of them were fifty or a hundred feet high and had a diameter of one to three feet at the ground. But they were nevertheless untreelike. They had no twigs, no leafy branches, no flowers, no seeds. They were instead covered all over with leaves, scalelike leaves. There were branches, not many, and these were covered, too, with leaves. The Chili pine, for all its scales, its green leafy cone as well, bears seeds. Our earliest tree, this devonian forerunner of all the forests, had no seeds. It was reproduced by spores, and these in development were conditioned as described, depended upon water for the mating of the cells. In fact, the oldest trees of earth were not unlike overgrown Brobdingnag types of the little ground pine or club moss which carpets the woodlands of Canada and spreads beneath our modern trees over all the eastern states. If we could imagine in the case of our eastern forest all the trees of present type removed and the ground given up to club mosses, and if we could then fancy these towering like leaf columns with yellow spikes of spores far above our heads, we might so form some conception of the earliest tree that has left of itself a record on the earth. There was, however, after all, some variety.

By no means all alike were those old forest trees. The number of types then extant was not great indeed, but every type terrestrial took on aboreal form. In devonian times even our scouring rushes or joint rushes seem to have played the role of trees, and so with many of the ferns. The very first forest was a spore bearing forest. The trees were big enough and plenty enough, but a lumberman might think them of little value after all. They were either hollow or else had enormous pith, so that the amount of wood even in the largest specimen was comparatively small. Nevertheless these old trees did have value. These forests lived on to cover the earth in the subsequent carboniferous time, in the age of coal, and no doubt contributed their share of organic material, of leaves and bark and spores and wood, to form vast beds of fuel that, as we know, make possible the wealth and convenience of the present.

But the devonian has something better than club mosses and ferns to show us, even if these did assume the size of trees. Bigness is not always a synonym for excellence. From rocks of different parts of the northern hemisphere, rocks belonging to the middle devonian, we have fossil coniferous wood, specimens representing the modern cone bearers—larches, spruces, yews and pines. All the trees referred to, the spore bearing trees, seem to have been confined to marshes and the damp shores of lakes or lagoons. But the struggle for existence, and especially, as we suppose, the disadvantage of terrestrial fertilization, at length drove some of these arboreous forms to higher ground and different habits. The unmated spores no longer fell to earth for mere fortuitous union, but in the fruit itself upon the trees the mating of the cells took place, and we have suddenly a real forest of coniferous trees. To be sure, these earlier conifers were not the same as those now living, but they were in a measure like them. Any one familiar with the structure of modern trees can recognize them. Once started they have been prominent in earth's vegetation ever since. Significant, though, these oldest conifers also had abundant pith, one-third the total diameter of the stem or more. It is curious, too, that the earliest of the type did not after all have cones. The fruit was more like that of the ginko, the maidenhair tree of Japan, planted now commonly in parks. Not until after the close of the carboniferous do true cones appear, perhaps not until the jurassic following.

But perchance the reader by this time asks how we can tell about these things so long gone by, what kinds of trees they were and how they grew and where. The answer is twofold—first, we know past ages only by the petrified remnants that lie buried in the rocks, like other fossils—shells, for instance—of which we hear so much, and, second, we understand such fossils only by comparison with existing flora. For example, existing conifers show a microscopic structure in their wood, a structure absolutely definite. When specimens of petrified wood come before us, especially if silicified, the structure is perfectly preserved, and if coniferous we know it as well as if we saw it grow. Now, fossil wood is comparatively abundant, from the devonian, and especially the carboniferous, on down through all overlying formations. Fossil fruits and flowers there also are, all too rare, but now and then a few are found, occasionally even the fruit still hanging to the branch on which it grew, so that the identity is sure.

But the finest witnesses we have of ancient forests are those which mark the advent of deciduous trees. The broad, flat leaf lends itself perfectly to fossilization. Its imprint, once it falls in favorable position, is stereotyped, graven upon the rocks forever. Now, the whole series of cretaceous rocks is filled with leaf impressions, beginning only a few in the lowest stratum. The upper layers are sometimes packed as if the wind strewn foliage had conditioned in some sort the whole rocky deposition. The leaf of course has vanished, but its impress still remains, its margin, its every vein and veinlet, the very glands sometimes that lent their odors to the air in days so long gone by. Needless to say, many of these forest leaves are strange, unlike any now driven by the autumn winds, and yet some of them are remarkably familiar in appearance. Here are hazel leaves and walnut leaves and poplar leaves. You would have said that they had but fallen from their twigs last year. You recognize them. They are no doubt walnuts, hazels, poplars. Yet they are not quite the leaves of our modern trees. The botanist would write them different species. Sometimes the fossils indicate genera no longer extant on the continent where the fossils lie. Thus our North American rocks afford us cinnamon leaves in rich abundance, but there are no cinnamons growing now on all this side of the world. Our nearest representatives are the laurels and the sassafras. We have already in these chapters referred to the tulip tree, a glorious tree, but the only lone species of the genus now on earth. But in cretaceous times tulip trees flourished all over the northern world, many species in this country and in Europe, ranging south as far as Italy and north as far as Greenland. In fact, everything seems to indicate that for our northern world at least the forests of cretaceous times were richer, more varied, more extended and in every way finer than those we know today. These trees were the immediate ancestors of those we know, the same, yet not quite the same. Conditions on the earth have changed since forests were at their prime, the glory of the world. Vegetation entered first upon life's scene and culminated first, culminated in the deciduous forests that cast their leaves through countless generations along the shores of the cretaceous seas. With the close of the cretaceous a race of terrestrial animals first appears, competitors of the forest, a new factor in environment, changing from that time on the entire trend of biologic differentiation. These were the mammals, the culmination of earth's fauna in the progress of the ages, until at the last, in these most recent times, the destinies of the forest and of the animal world as well rest in the hands of a single creature, the highest mammal, the god of this lower world. His name is man!

They Wanted Blood.

While a fair was being held recently in a small town in Belgium the owner of a menagerie announced that one of the villagers, who was known to possess great courage, would enter that evening a cage containing two lions and would remain there fifteen minutes.

When this was noised abroad, every one determined to witness the novel sight, and as a result there were several hundred persons in front of the lions' cage when the performance began.

At a signal from the owner the courageous villager entered the cage and stood watching the lions. They, however, took not the slightest notice of him, and after the fifteen minutes had expired he left the cage. As he did so a storm of hisses greeted him, and the next moment such an uproar arose that the owner summoned the police and the entertainment came to an end.

The fact was the people expected that the lions would attack the villager and they were disappointed because no blood had been shed.

"Yet it is exceedingly probable," says a French writer, "that if one of the lions had escaped from the cage this bloodthirsty crowd would have been terrified almost to death."

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL

BEAUTIFUL SITE SELECTED FOR THE NATIONAL MONUMENT.

Overlooks the Former Home of the Dead Statesman—Nature's Handiwork to Be Supplemented—The Temporary Tomb.

McKinley mound, as the site chosen by the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association for the monument to be erected to the martyred president has come to be known, is beautifully situated for its intended purpose.

It is a choice bit of nature's handiwork, but when the landscape artist has finished his work it will be one of the most charming spots in the land.

The tract selected for the monument contains a little more than eleven acres. It is in Westlawn cemetery, Canton, O., and overlooks the dead statesman's former home.

Though owned by the cemetery association, it has never been used for burial purposes, and it is the plan of the McKinley National Memorial association to utilize the entire tract for the McKinley memorial and for grounds surrounding and approaches to it.

The mound is the highest within a radius of a mile. On all sides of it are valleys. To the north the ground slopes into woodland and cultivated farm land. To the east there is an abrupt decline, bounded by a small stream and a valley a half mile wide. To the south its immediate boundary is a narrow ravine in which flows a small stream of clear water. Across the ravine is Westlawn cemetery. To the west the boundary is formed by a ravine and in part by a stream of water.

Save for clumps of trees here and there over the tract the site in general has the appearance of well kept pasture land were it not for the driveways laid out through it. Besides its natural beauty one of the reasons that led to its selection is that it is an eminence which commands a view for many miles.

Looking to the east, the top of the McKinley home can be seen two or three miles distant. The view to the southwest is cut off by the wooded cemetery, a spot sacred to the McKinleys. In this cemetery are the graves of the two daughters guarded by the figure of a boy holding a basket of flowers. In the same family lot are the graves of William McKinley, the father, and Nancy Allison McKinley, the mother of the late president. The shafts that mark the family lot are unpretentious.

Westlawn cemetery is a tract of sixty-five acres of ground, rolling and diversified. Nature has been for the most part undisturbed save for the complementing hand of art. The hillocks, trees, streams and valleys form a pleasing and restful view. Tiny lakes and dams and waterfalls, over which are bridges and about which are driveways and walks, have been made by the hand of man.

Near the main entrance to this cemetery in a private vault now rests the body of William McKinley. On guard day and night are forty-five United States regular soldiers. At the door of the vault stands a sentry, with loaded gun and fixed bayonet. On top of the hillock which forms the rear of the vault another soldier similarly equipped keeps vigil.

Indeed, the interior has been so arranged as to take away as much as possible the appearance of the home of the dead. For the comfort of Mrs. McKinley, who daily goes into the vault, chairs have been placed inside. In cool weather a heavy rug is placed on the floor.

From this vault the remains of McKinley will be removed when the mausoleum is completed and placed in their final resting place.

The plan of the memorial trustees is to provide an endowment for the McKinley memorial. This is for the purpose of making the grounds and memorial to McKinley absolutely free to the entire world. There will be no fee to approach the McKinley tomb. The plan further provides that there will be spacious approaches and driveways to the McKinley memorial site. An electric railway line will carry people to the very base of the monument site. As far as the funds will allow the place will not only be made one of beauty, but one of patriotic impulse.

Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes' Appointment Confirmed By the Senate.

THE ARMY CANTEEN QUESTION.

Paymaster General Bates Says Claim of War Department that Restoration of Canteen Would Benefit Army Seems Fully Borne Out by Records.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The senate was in session yesterday one hour and five minutes, most of which time was spent behind closed doors. After the reception of a number of bills and petitions and the adoption of a concurrent resolution calling on the president for the papers in the Pius fund case, recently arbitrated before The Hague tribunal, Mr. Beveridge had read the resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Oklahoma non-partisan convention favoring the admission of Oklahoma and Indian territory as one state and opposing the house omnibus statehood bill. The senate then went into executive session, and at 1:05 adjourned until Monday.

Holmes' Appointment Confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes was yesterday confirmed by the senate to succeed the late Justice Gray as a member of the bench of the United States supreme court. There was no opposition and the nomination was not discussed. Immediately after the senate went into executive session Senator Hoar, as chairman of the committee on the judiciary, made a favorable report upon the nomination. The senate took the case up forthwith, accomplishing the act of confirmation as quickly as it was possible to do so.

Boston, Dec. 5.—Associate Justice Holmes left for Washington today, ready to take up his work on the supreme bench next week. Judge Holmes has been arranging his affairs so that he could go to Washington immediately upon receiving news of his confirmation. His resignation from the Massachusetts supreme bench probably will follow the precedent laid down by the late Judge Gray, his predecessor on the federal bench, and a former chief justice of the supreme bench of this state, who allowed his acceptance of the appointment as judge of the United States supreme court to serve as his resignation of the position of state justice.

Canteen Communication.

Washington, Dec. 5.—General Bates, paymaster general of the army, has sent a communication to Adjutant General Corbin in regard to the army canteen question, in which he says:

"The claim of the war department in recommending the restoration of the canteen to the army that during the operations of the canteen law the discipline of the army was superior, desertions much less, and that there were fewer fines and forfeitures by court martials on account of breaches of military discipline resulting from the use of intoxicants by men in the service, appears to be fully borne out by the records of the paymaster general's office.

"These records show that the paymasters of the army collected from 75,000 enlisted men (regulars) during the last year in which the canteen was in force, on account of the soldiers' dues, fines and forfeitures, $462,698, while during the fiscal year 1902, since the abolishment of the canteen, there was collected by paymasters from about 70,000 enlisted men (regulars) on the same account $632,125.

"The fact, therefore, appears indisputable by the figures cited that the fine and forfeitures imposed upon and collected from the enlisted men of the army were vastly increased during the year subsequent to the abolishment of the canteen, which increase cannot be well attributed to any other cause than the effects of an uncontrolled liquor traffic in connection with military posts, which traffic appears to seriously affect the discipline and morals of the army."

NATIONAL CAPITAL NOTES.

President Roosevelt yesterday received the members of the Spanish War Nurses' association, now in session in Washington. Nearly a hundred of the nurses paid their respects to the president. He shook hands with and extended a pleasant personal greeting to each one.

The state department has received from United States Consul W. A. Prickitt, at Rheims, notice of an industrial exposition to be held there from May 15 to Sept. 6, 1903. This is to be the only exposition in France next year and is expected to be of importance from an industrial and agricultural view point.

Major Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted of irregularities during his incumbancy as director of posts of Cuba and who was pardoned after the American occupation ended, was at the capital yesterday for the purpose of pressing his petition, filed with the senate last session, for an investigation of the methods used in his conviction by the Cuban courts.

Senator Hoar yesterday presented to the senate an amendment to the immigration bill, providing that the wives and children of aliens who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens shal be admitted without tax or fee. In case of contagious disease among them they are to be held, and in case the disorder should prove permanent they are to be deported.

Found Dead in His Room.

Kansas City, Dec. 5.—James H. Aldrich, former cashier of the Kansas City, Ft. Scott & Memphis railroad company, was found dead in his room here yesterday. He had been ill for a long time, and had died from a hemorrhage of the lungs.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Banks Have Lost to Sub-Treasury Since Last Friday Over $5,000,000. Bonds Dull and Easier.

New York, Dec. 5.—There was another attempt to put up the price of stocks yesterday morning, but it did not succeed, and the market soon became weak. Final prices were considerably lower than the night before. Many of the most prominent stocks were not quoted at all from hour to hour. The aggregate transactions for the day dwindled still further from Wednesday's small total.

The sub-treasury statement for yesterday shows that the banks have lost to that institution since last Friday over $5,000,000. This did not include the $1,000,000 withdrawn yesterday for shipment to South America. Yesterday morning the sub-treasury was a creditor at the clearing house for $416,981 on account of some heavy internal revenue collections. It will be seen, therefore, that the week's decline in bank reserves probably will be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The tone of the money market, which continues very firm, is convincing evidence that no relaxation of the money market is expected before the turn of the year.

There was no transfer of currency to the interior through the sub-treasury yesterday, and exchange at Chicago rose from par to 10c premium. Reports from trade authorities of a downward tendency in the price of iron products and a holding back of orders on account of high cost was rather a depressing influence. Bonds were dull and easier in sympathy with stocks. Total sales, par value, $860,000. United States 2s registered declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

P. E. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Training of Missionaries Principal Topic of Discussion.

New York, Dec. 5.—Training of missionaries was the principal topic of discussion by the Protestant Episcopal missionary conference at the Church of Zion and St. Timothy yesterday. The discussion was led by the lord bishop of Thetford.

"I don't know how it is here," said his lordship, "but with us there is a great dearth and growing scarcity of men fitted for the ministry."

The speaker added that parents, when planning the future of their children, often considered only trade and commerce and "leave out the most sacred profession of all, the ministry." He further said that boys at school and young men at college are "a most selfish class," referring particularly to "what they spend on their games—on football."

The lord bishop said it has been calculated that there is "but one missionary to every 30,000 heathens," and he advocated the training of natives as missionaries.

"What we want most in this mission field," said he, "are colleges where the native children can be educated in Christianity."

Barry Johnstone Dying.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Barry Johnstone, the actor who last Monday night shot and killed Kate Hassett, of Keith's Bijou theater stock company, and then turned the weapon upon himself, is gradually dying at the hospital. During the day he revived slightly, but the physicians say his recovery is impossible. A consultation was held by the doctors yesterday, at which it was decided that an operation to remove the two bullets which Johnstone fired into his breast would be futile, and they are now awaiting the end. The murdered woman's body was yesterday forwarded to the home of her parents at Aurora, Ill.

Tots Burned to Death.

Detroit, Dec. 5.—A special to the Free Press from Saginaw, Mich., says that two children of Mrs. Ainsley Bowers, 914 Stanless street, were burned to death yesterday afternoon, when their mother left them alone in the house for a few minutes. One child was a girl 6 years old and the other an infant of 2 months. It is supposed the little girl set fire to some papers with which she was playing. The two dead bodies lay on the floor when the fire department responded to an alarm. The house was only slightly damaged.

Sanitary Conference.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The sanitary conference of American republics, which has been in session here since Tuesday, came to an end last night. Santiago de Chili was selected as the place of next meeting, which will occur March 15, 1904. Dr. Eduardo Moore, the delegate from Chili, assured the delegates that all Chili would welcome them, and said an hygienic exhibit would be given in Santiago at the time of the conference.

Man Blown to Atoms.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Horace E. Killig, aged 45 years, superintendent of the Germantown crematory company, was blown to atoms yesterday by an explosion of dynamite. The dynamite was used for blasting purposes in the cemetery attached to the crematory, and Killig was carrying twelve sticks of the explosive into a tool house when he stumbled and dropped his bundle. An explosion followed and Killig was blown to pieces.

Walls Collapse.

Gilmer, Tex., Dec. 5.—The walls of a brick building which had been burned collapsed yesterday. A Mr. Lyle was killed outright, John Hill fatally injured and two others were slightly injured. The fire destroyed a business block. The damage is estimated at $30,000, half insured.

Mme. Melba's Work For Charity In Her Native Land.

The canceling of Mme. Melba's engagement to sing in this country next spring, which has caused much regret among opera goers, is due to her determination to remain in Australia with her aged father, who is in very feeble health.

Mme. Melba recently paid to her old home her first visit since she became famous, and a most elaborate reception was given her on her arrival in Melbourne. Her father is very old, and the excitement attendant upon the arrival of his famous daughter, whom he had not seen for years, was too much for him, and he was stricken with paralysis.

Since her arrival in Australia Mme. Melba has been idolized. She has appeared at several concerts in Melbourne and will make a tour of the country. She has announced that she will devote the entire proceeds of the tour to the charities of her native land.

How much the proceeds of the tour will be may be gathered from the fact that the advance sale of seats for her five concerts in Melbourne were more than $50,000. She has decided to present a new wing to the Melbourne hospital, to be known as the Melba wing. She will give a special concert for that, and she herself started the sale of seats by taking three boxes at $2,500 each, the first being in the name of her father.

Mme. Melba takes her name from her native city, Melbourne. Her father's name is Mitchell. At the age of four Nellie Mitchell was an infant prodigy. At ten she had mastered the piano, organ and violin. While she was still a young girl she married Charles Armstrong, a sheep raiser and brother of an English baronet.

Then came the colonial exhibition in London, and her father being one of the commissioners she accompanied him to London. She was utterly unknown, but had a chance to sing and created a sensation. After a year's study with Mme. Marchesi she made her debut at Brussels, successfully beginning a career that has brought her to the top of the operatic ladder. Mme. Melba is thirty-seven years old.

Only In the Pail.

An Irish soldier was crossing a barrack square with a pail in which he was going to get some water.

A sergeant, passing at the time, noticed that Pat had a very disreputable looking pair of trousers on and, wishing to make a report, stopped the man and asked:

"Where are you going?"

"To get some water."

"What! In those trousers?"

A Temperance Champion.

Mrs. Teacup—Oh, Mr. Tubbs, I was so delighted when I heard that you were such a stanch champion of the temperance cause!

Tubbs—Why—er—I'm not exactly—

"Now, don't try to hide your light under a bushel, Mr. Tubbs. I know, because I heard George say that you have been a booze fighter all your life. He said you punished more of it than any ten men in the state."—Life.

Her Engagement Ring.

Kitty—Constance is wearing a diamond ring on her engagement finger. I'll bet she's only trying to fool folks.

YOUR SENSE OF DUTY

It Is the Noblest, Most Manly and at the Same Time Most Womanly of Qualities—The Real Basis of Education and Success.

Teachers and parents are asked to consider the statement that a sense of duty is the foundation of real education and the basis of success. Whatever has been achieved of real importance in the world has been based upon a sense of duty. Religion itself is founded upon duty, and its main teachings deal with questions of duty—the duty of men and women toward each other and toward their Creator.

Children's minds will be strengthened, their work made easier and their ambition stimulated if they can be made to feel toward duty that it is not repulsive, but that it offers an opportunity for achievement, an opportunity for every individual to prove his worth and that he deserves to succeed if duty can be strongly developed in the mind of a young child, the effect will remain through life and make that child's existence useful.

Parents should impress upon their children—and young people should impress upon themselves—the fact that a sense of duty is the noblest, most manly and at the same time most womanly of qualities.

The average small boy thinks that there is something "soft" about a dutiful boy. He should be taught that what made Washington a fighter and Lincoln great among his fellows was nothing else than a sense of duty to their country.

What makes a fireman brave is a sense of duty. A sense of duty is at the foundation of every effort made to provide for children, to meet the obligations of life honestly.

The German philosopher Fichte, as admirable a moral character as the world has known, exemplifies as perfectly as any the beauty of a life inspired by a sense of duty, and it is a life which may be well studied by those engaged in shaping the character of the young.

The very keynote of his philosophical system was based on duty. "Unsere Welt ist das versinnlichte Material unserer Pflicht," said he.

This idea—that our world is but the material incarnation of our duty—he taught, and, what is more, he practiced what he preached.

One preacher who practices his preachings thoroughly is worth many of the other kind, no matter how eloquent the others. And Fichte practiced his beliefs. When he was poor and a young tutor, he set a good example to every teacher. As a tutor he made his living, but he knew that his duty to the child intrusted to him was the principal thing. He knew also that every child is really formed in character and morals by the influence of its parents.

Fichte kept a journal devoted to the attitude of his employers toward their child—his pupil. Every week he told them the mistakes they had made and held them accountable for spoiling the child through flattery, too much kindness, ill judged severity or in whatever way. Strange to say, the parents actually put up with this for two whole years, so great was their admiration for the young tutor's moral character.

Duty well ingrained in the soul will keep a man on the right path in easy times and in hard times. Fichte is quoted here because no man better than he proves the power of a sense of duty. In small things duty guided him, and it guided him at the end.

He was just past the half century of his age and had been gloriously successful. He had been called to the chair of philosophy at Berlin, and no teacher of truth had ever been more loved or more admired. On a certain day he was to lecture, and he had chosen "Duty" for his subject. His country was at war and threatened with invasion and absolute annihilation of her liberties.

Fichte, who had talked much of the little duties of life, talked on this day of man's duty to his country. The sound of drums calling for conscripts frequently interrupted his lecture. He told the listening young man that each man's duty is to lend his individual strength and life to his country in time of danger. It was a marvelous address, and it ended well.

For at the close he said to his great crowd of admiring students: "This course of lectures will be suspended until the end of the campaign. We shall resume them in a free country or die in the attempt to recover her freedom."

Fichte left his lecture platform to enlist as a simple soldier, and, needless to say, his students followed his example in crowds. That was at the beginning of the campaign of 1813, but the example is good enough to last until now and for many hundred years to come. A year later, aged fifty-two, he died. He caught the fever while caring for those afflicted, among others for his own wife, who had gone with the army as nurse.

Make duty a strong part of your child's or your pupil's moral education. A sense of duty impels men to struggle on and do their best even in the face of failure; a sense of duty impels the successful man to make good use of his success. The hideous, empty, selfish lives of the self indulgent class are based upon utter lack of the sense of duty. In the education of a child moral teachings should come first; in a child's mental equipment moral qualities should be first considered. By example, precept, argument and through history impress upon your children the fact that without a sense of duty they are unworthy of the opportunities that life offers to men in this world.—New York Journal.

Great Men and Large Families.

A careful study of the circumstances of birth and childhood of what were considered to be the fifty greatest men of modern times disclosed the fact, interesting in comparison, that the average great man was born in a family of six children, not including half brothers or half sisters. It was figured from the data that the chances for greatness in a child are two to one in favor of the older half of the family.

Improving on Euclid.
